Bitterness Deep

Secretary Perkins, at Columbus, Ohio, yesterday, addressing a labor audience, asked each warring faction to select five intermediaries. The ten together would elect three outsiders to counsel with them. Out of the deliberations of the 13-man peace board, she hoped, would come a proposal to end the conflict.

The long-standing bitterness between the leaders of the two camps will make harmonious settlement extremely difficult, both sides have agreed. But officials in both labor movements have also been recently disturbed by the mounting public pressure for an effective and definite peace. This culminated last week in Lewis' offer to resign from the C. I. O. if Green would simultaneously quit the A. F. of L.—an offer denounced at once by Green as a "monstrous fraud."

Urges Calm

Secretary Perkins' suggestion was the first concrete proposal advanced by the Roosevelt Administration for a solution to the old deadlock. She said, in her address at a joint celebration of the seventieth anniversary of the Order of Railway Conductors and the fiftieth anniversary of its ladies auxiliary:

"I think this unhappy quarrel should stop. From now on it will do more harm than good. Labor union members want the quarrel settled and the public wants it settled. I should hate to see it settled wholly by outside persons. I have great faith in the capacity of both sides to make a fair settlement."

She stressed that members of the negotiating committee should not be persons who "fight at the first

Planes to Bomb Auto in Show at Beacon Field

Beacon Field, near Alexandria, will put on an air show this afternoon, featuring a spot bombing contest with a brand-new automobile as target, an automobile and plane race, stunt flying and parachute jumping in its more specialized phases.

The show will get under way at 1 p. m. with a parade of about 20 planes over Alexandria and Washington. The bombing contest and other events will follow.

Loudoun Campbell, jr., will put on an acrobatic flying exhibition. There will be a "race to earth" in specially made parachutes by Louis Barr, Kim Scribner and Raymond Morters, all of Washington. William H. Gamble, who crashed last February on the Washington-Richmond highway and spent three months in Alexandria Hospital, will compete in all flying contests.

The committee in charge of the show consists of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Ashbern, managers of the airport; Neil Handlon, Gamble and Campbell.

$3,500,000 Library Urged For D.C. Center

Noyes Makes Report
New Units Nearly Ready
Dr. Bowerman Praised

Expenditure of $3,500,000 for a monumental Public Library as part of the Municipal Center development was urged yesterday by Theodore W. Noyes, president of the board of library trustees, in his annual report to the District Commissioners. He urged expenditure of $500,000 in the 1940 fiscal year with the $3,000,000 to follow later.

"The appropriation act of 1939 provides $60,000 for plans for a library building to be located on square 491, one of the four purchased by the District several years ago to form part of the Municipal Center," Noyes explained. "The library will be opposite the Apex Building and the Mellon Gallery."

Commenting on new construction, the report predicted that the new Petworth branch will be opened on January 2. The Southwestern branch is scheduled for occupancy on March 1, 1940.

Overcrowding Cited

"It is hoped that overcrowding at the Mount Pleasant branch may be considerably diminished by facilities brought closer to Petworth citizens," the report stated. The Southwestern branch will be a wing of the new Thomas Jefferson Junior High School.

"It is a matter of regret," Noyes added, "that no PWA allotments were granted to replace the dilapidated Conduit road sub-branch, the inadequate Tenley building and to

Civil Service Holds Lawyers In Its Scope

Commission Hits Report
Exemption Was Asked
Bar Organ Quoted

With stinging language, the United States Civil Service Commission yesterday refused to countenance the contention of a group of high Federal attorneys that appointment to Federal legal jobs should be withheld from merit purview.

Answering the Cairns' Committee, which recommended attorney exclusion from civil service until such time as adequate registers could be compiled, the commission asserted:

"This group, dependent because of exemption on the favor of appointing officers, appears to have assembled the arguments of antiquity, disregarded the new facilities and techniques available, and arrived at the politically expedient conclusion."

Report Blasted

The commission then pointed out that a report "suggesting that it is not practicable to examine for any attorney positions patently and transparently ignores the experience of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Veterans' Administration, and other Federal agencies which have been satisfactorily utilizing civil service registers for attorney positions for years."

The attorney report, signed by the chairman, Huntington Cairns, assistant general counsel, Treasury, resulted from a formal gathering of Government attorneys on August 23. There the committee was as-

Red Bull Sees Cutlets, Flees Butcher, Jumps in Tidal Basin

It has not yet been decided if he rebelled at the thought of conversion into steaks and stews or just became balmy on a mild October day.

Whatever the reason, a red bull took a dive in the Tidal Basin yesterday, disrupted traffic and defied efforts of policemen, meat handlers and hundreds of onlookers to pull him back to shore and the butcher.

It was when the bull first hove in sight of the butcher's shop that the idea of refuge in the deep took shape in his mind.

Driven up in front of the wholesale market, 433 Eleventh street southwest, for delivery to Ralph T. Counselman, where choice cuts of meat were prominently on display, he suddenly bolted. Down E street he fled, trailed by a shouting crowd headed by Counselman, several truck drivers and two park policemen.

He charged across Fourteenth street and Maine avenue, heedless of automobiles squawking in startled protest. He met the seawall and didn't even pause. Overboard went the bull with a mighty splash.

He floundered there in shallow water until he was lassoed and Park Policemen P. D. Lewis and E. T. Costello sat on him until a truck could be brought. He was then carted away and Lewis and Costello drove off to requisition new uniforms.

Taft Assails 'Two-Price' Farm Plan

'Rumor,' Says Bulkley
Ohio Senator Booed
Denies Rubber Stamp
2d Debate Lively

By Robert C. Albright.
A Staff Correspondent.

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 15.—"Can't you take it?" the voice heckled.

"Yes," said the Senator. "But I know where those boos are coming from."

The booing continued. Part of the crowd started to leave. The opposing candidate stepped to the mike.

"I would be greatly obliged if you would not leave the hall while the Senator is speaking," he said.

The speaker brushed this aside. "It doesn't matter whether you leave the hall," he said. "But let me get in a word of truth."

Climax of 2d Debate

It was the climax of the second of Ohio's "Lincoln-Douglas debates" and an unusual thing happened. In a Democratic community, a Republican got a hand. And a New Dealer was roughly razzed.

The Senator was Robert J. Bulkley, Harvard classmate of the President, now seeking re-election with Roosevelt support. The Republican was Robert A. Taft,i Cincinnat lawyer and eldest son of the late President and Chief Justice.

Taft challenged Bulkley to "discuss the issues" in a series of six debates. Friends of Bulkley, a poor speaker, advised against it, but the Senator accepted. The debates, like their 1858 model, were to be on a "high plane" and "entirely impersonal."

Hoover's Name Booed

But all the rules went by the board last night at the Dayton stand. Taft himself came in for a few Bronx cheers when he mentioned the name of Herbert Hoover, but he carried off honors in plaudits.

This State, regarded by many as a barometer not only of November political weather but of 1940 trends as well, is experiencing one of the hardest off-year elections in its history.

A State-wide poll by a Columbus newspaper gives Taft a lead of 3.2 per cent. Democrats charge the bol has not sufficiently tapped industrial workers and relief voting segments. Opinions are as sharply divided as the issues themselves, but Republican hopes are running high.

"No Rubber Stamp" Boast

Championing New Deal policies is a man who perhaps voted "No" on more Administration measures than any other Democratic Senatorial except Tydings of Maryland. Bulkley voted for the President's court plan even after it was lost, but on all other important measures in the last four years his vote was in the negaive more often than those of George or Smith, whom the President sought to "purge." Yet Bulkley received rPesidential aid in the primaries and recently was called to Hyde Park. He boasts he is "no rubber stamp."

In last night's Dayton debate, Bulkley's main charge of "misrepresentation" against Taft was that his opponent accused him of supporting the Administration's farm bill and opposing the Hatch relief bill amendment.

"I voted against the farm act and I voted to take politics out of relief," he said.

Taft followed with an "apology."

A glib talker, he said Bulkley had voted for every other spending bill and he supposed he had voted for the farm act. He read a Bulkley

Motorist Cleared In Child's Death; Another Boy Hit

While a coroner's jury was exonerating a motorist in the traffic death of 7-year-old Rex Byrum, Herbert Anderson, 11, of 918 M street southeast, was injured critically when struck by an automobile.

Herbert was crossing Virginia avenue at Eighth street southeast when he was knocked down by a car driven, police said, by Otto R. Hawkins, colored, 40, 629 K street southeast. Taken to Providence Hospital, the boy was treated for a fractured left arm, possible fractured skull and severe cuts and bruises. Police took Hawkins into custody pending the outcome of the boy's injuries.

Congress Action to Aid WPA Likely

More Money Needed
$750,000,000 Left
Relief Rolls Higher
Deficit Boost Seen

By Felix Cotten

The Works Progress Administration will have to cut relief expenditures nearly $1,000,000 a day henceforth if it is to make its unexpended balance of approximately $750,000,000 "stretch out" until March 1, as requested by President Roosevelt, figures made available by the work relief agency disclosed yesterday.

The necessary slash is so large as to raise considerable doubt as to whether the announced objective will be carried out.

Expectation, instead, is that when Congress meets January 3, one of the problems which it will have to deal with immediately will be the appropriation of additional funds for work relief.

Appropriation Needed

More money will have to be made available, it is generally believed, than was anticipated when Congress appropriated $1,425,000,000 at the last session with the understanding that it would carry the WPA until the end of February.

This will mean a rise in the estimated $4,000,000,000 deficit for the current fiscal year to the extent of any increase found necessary.

In the budget summary made public some weeks ago, President Roosevelt estimated that WPA expenditures for the fiscal year would total about $1,925,000,000. The estimate was based on the $1,425,000,000 lasting until March 1. A $500,000,000 deficiency appropriation, it was contemplated, would be sufficient to continue work relief for the last four months of the fiscal year.

Budget Requirements

Unless the WPA sharply curtails its spending rate following the elections next month, Congress may have to appropriate a nextra $800,000,000 or $900,000,000.

It is possible that two deficiency appropriations will be found necessary, one hastily rushed through to keep the WPA going as soon as the new Congress organizes in January and a later appropriation to continue work relief until July 1.

Since the beginning of the fiscal year, last July 1, the WPA has been spending money at the rate of about $6,450,000 a day, whereas, in order to stretch the $-1,524,000,000 out to March 1 it would have been necessary to keep the spending rate down o less than $1,900.00 a day.

Aubrey Williams, assistant Works Progress Administrator, said following a conference with President Roosevelt last week that the President had ricedteh him to make remaining money last until March 1, if possible. He explained that the WA had $764,000,000 left.

For the first three months of the current fiscal year, he revealed, the WPA spent $593,000,000, or an average of $197,000,000 a month.

To continue on present funds the WPA would have to drop between 450,000 and 500,00 0persons from the relief rolls immediately, or else spread a substantially larger reduction over the period between now and March 1.

WPA officials expressed the hope that rapidly increasing employment in the industrial centers would absorb from the relief rolls a sufficient number of persons to enable it to make its funds last until the end of February.

Fort Washington Soldier's Death Called Suicide

A verdict of suicide was issued yesterday in the death of Private Frank T. Melago, 23, a soldier at Fort Washington, Md.

Melago, attached to the Twelfth Infantry, Company K, was found in his quarters at the fort at 4 a. m. Friday lying on the floor with a gunshot wound in the right temple. A rifle was stretched across his chest.

The youth was rushed to Walter Reed Hospital, where he died late Friday afternoon. His sister, Catherine Shofranko, of New Salem, Pa., was notified.

'Stupid' Councilman Bears His Name
Drama Here Deals With Old New York
Peter Stuyvesant Relents as Dictator

By the Associated Press.

A gay musical comedy which makes fun of the government in early New York drew President Roosevelt to the National Theater last night.

He had attended only two other plays in more than five years. The comedy, "Knickerbocker Holiday," was written by Maxwell Anderson and Kurt Weill.

Compared by some reviewers with the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta's, it tells a story of government in New Amsterdam.

Peter Stuyvesant, played by Walter Huston, is the Governor of the tarly seventeenth century city. The peg-legged Peter assumes the role of a dictator, agreeing with his council that the purpose of government is to "keep the people down."

Finally, however, the Governor abandons a plan to enforce obedience by gunfire, deciding that he will be regarded more kindly by posterity if he adopts a conciliatory attitude toward the people.

Members of the council, which Peter describes as "stupid," include a "Roosevelt" and a "Vanderbilt."

The only other plays Mr. Roosevelt had seen since he came to the White House were "Dodsworth," the Sinclair Lewis drama in which Huston also starred, and "When Ladies Meet."

The President worked through this afternoon to clear his desk in preparation for his departure at noon today for Hyde Park.

Army Weighs Doubling of U. S. Air Force

4,120 Planes Sought
Baruch Asks Special Tax
Latin-America Alarmed

President Roosevelt's revelation that this country's preparedness to resist foreign aggression is being completely restudied, brought four developments yesterday.

The developments included:

1. Proposal virtually to double the Army's air strength.

2. Discussion of means to correlate antiespionage work of all Federal agencies.

3. A suggestion that all costs of new armament should be met by new taxation.

4. Advices that Latin America, impressed by U. S. preparedness moves, is getting ready to follow suit.

Ask 4,120 Planes

Specifically:

It was reported that the War Department is considering asking Congress to authorize a future strength of 4,120 planes for the Army Air Corps, compared to present authorized strength of 2,320 to be reached by mid-1940.

Defense circles were said to be discussing formation of a "career corps" of counter-espionage experts, drawn from the Army and Navy intelligence services and trained by "G-men."

'Ready to Die,' Slovak Army Tells Hungary

Will Resist Invasion
Prague Cabinet Meets
New Parleys Likely

By the United Press.

Prague, Oct. 15.—The Slovak military high command warned Hungary tonight that Slovaks, Czechs and Ruthenians are ready to resist invasion to the last man.

Negotiations recently were broken off and Hungary mobilized 300,000 reserves, but intervention by Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini was believed likely to result in resumption of peaceful negotiations. Meanwhile, sporadic fighting and terrorism has gripped the frontier.

The Prague cabinet met with Foreign Minister Frantisek Chvalkovsky, who had just returned from seeing Hitler at Munich, to consider whether a new offer would be made to Hungary.

The present frontier forces will remain in their positions, General Prchala, Slovak military leader said, and added:

"We are ready to defend Slovakia to the last man, he conference at Komarom (with Hungary) was broken up because the lovaks are not willing to turn back to 20 years ago.

"Our soldiers are ready to die because they know they are defending their land and their families. Slovaks, Czechs and Ruthenians are

Crowds Fill New Orleans For Eucharistic Congress

By Edward Angly,
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Orleans, Oct. 15.—Into the mellowed old city of New Orleans, one of the cradles of Catholic culture on this continent, tens of thousands of communicants of the Church of Rome had congregated tonight to participate in the eighth National Eucharistic Congress, which begins on Monday. Many more thousands were on their way from all parts of the United States.

Historic St. Louis Cathedral, site of Catholic worship since Bienville traced this city's plan on the ground with his sword in 1718, has been refurnished for the occasion. Today its aisles were crowded through every hour with visitors from near and far. The cathedral, and the altar erected in City Park Stadium, expanded to care for 100,000 at open-air pontifical masses, will be the chief centers of attraction until the congress ends next Thursday night.

In all its history, dotted each spring with the celebrated Mardi Gras festivals, New Orleans has never drawn such crowds as are swarming here now. The old Crescent City on the Mississippi has given its own distinctive flavor to this Eucharistic Congress, a flavor compounded of traditions in which

Invasion Pressed

By the Associated Press.

Hongkong, Oct. 15.—All communications between this British crown colony and Canton were interrupted tonight as Japanese forces broadened their onslaught on the South China coast.

Railway and highway brides had been destroyed at several points by the aerial bombardments which shielded Japanese expeditionary forces surging toward Canton and across its links with the coast.

Booms had been placed in the Pearl River to guard the city from direct naval assault. A Japanese landing party on the west shore of the river delta cut a highway connection between Canton and Portuguese Macao, opposite Hongkong at the river mouth.

The Japanese were reported to have struck on the west delta shore —apparently the second major operation of the week—under cover of an intense aerial bombardment. The highway was cut before provincial defenses in that sector could be organized.

Model Army Advances

A Japanese column, part of the model army of 40,000 which landed Wednesday at Bias Bay, was thrusting westward from the captured and ruined village of Tamshui. One report placed this spearhead within 12 miles of the Canton-Kowloon Railway.

This railway is a lifeline link between Hongkong and Canton. The Japanese column was reported shoving its way through numerically greater, but still largely disorganized Kwangtung and Kwangsi provincial troops. This part of the invasion was taking place within 25 miles of the Hongkong frontier.

The Japanese consul general at Hogkong was notified by the Tokyo foreign office that severe combat was expected within a radius of 125 miles around Canton and within a 60-mile radius of Swatow, Kwangtung Province port about 225 miles east of Canton.

Representatives of foreign powers were requested to notify their nationals that to travel in these war zones was unsafe and that Japan

Men Shun Jobs Of Women, Says Labor Aide

Miss Anderson Irked
Raps Biggers' Report
Low Wages Scored

The vast majority of women workers in America are not in competition with men and never have been, Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, declared last night as she criticized the Biggers report for leaving the problem of unemployment "on the women's doorstep" and for not furnishing occupational information which would make the study more truthful.

"Without such a break-down, the total means little," she asserted. If the details were made available they would show, Miss Anderson said, that women are earning "a living at types of work long regarded as women's special province, because they are better qualified for such, or because men do not want these jobs, except possibly as a stop gap in a depression period."

"Complicated Question"

Wrong wage standards, particularly the double wage angles, furnish the most vital factor in "this highly complicated question of women's versus men's employment," Miss Anderson declared.

"Inadequate wages for men, coupled with lack of a guaranteed annual income, forces hundreds of thousands of women to seek jobs to help in family support.

"The double wage standard, meaning lower pay for women when they do similar work to men, is a particularly vicious circle. Wherever the two sexes may be in competition for jobs it leads to employment of cheaper woman labor, and tends to depress wages in general.

"Lower wages for women are a deplorable tradition and not the fault of the women who are forced to earn a livelihood and to take any job at any wage," she said.

Work Held Essential

Wages paid in America are such as to make women's employment "obviously essential to keep the family intact," according to Miss Anderson who said that if the family were guaranteed a livelihood and security women in factories "would voluntarily withdraw from paid jobs."

"Moreover," she continued, "if women are employed on factory jobs which men might better do, elimination of the double wage standard would automatically adjust the situation.

"There is still enough prejudice against women's employment in certain fields to safeguard men when the wage or salary differential is not part of the equation."

Cites 1930 Census

The 1930 census, in furnishing the occupationla breakdown, John D. Biggers did not include in information released with the national unemployment census, showed—Miss Anderson pointed out—that 3,000,000 women were employed in domestic or personal service jobs. Of the 1,000,000 women in trade, she said, 700,000 were saleswomen or clerks in stores serving mostly women customers. Two million wree teachers and almost a half million were trained nurses and social workers.

"In the manufacturing field the great bulk of the 2,000,000 women workers were found in textile mills, clothing and food factories and in other types of work formerly done by women in the home," she said.

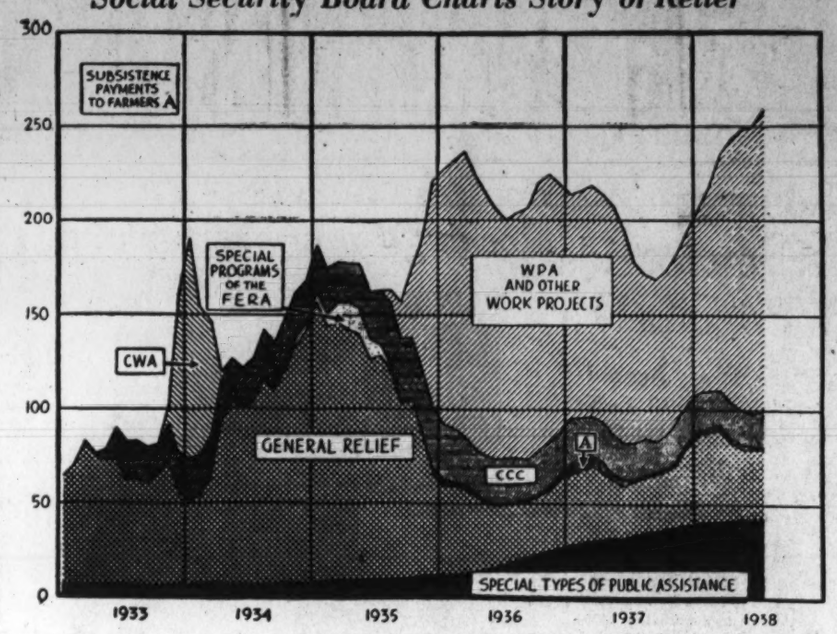
Social Security Board Charts Story of Relief



The story of all public relief in the United States from January, 1933, to July, 1938—transient care and administrative expense excluded—is shown in this chart prepared by the Social Security Board. Figures at left represent millions of dollars. The amount of CWA expenditures represents earnings of persons previously receiving relief, estimated arbitrarily by the WPA as 50 per cent of the total obligations incurred for earnings from Federal funds under the Civil Works program

Gold Imports Boost Silver Purchase Goal

White Metal Increased
Plan Loses Ground
Requirements Lifted

Owing to recent record gold imports, the Treasury, despite its continued purchase of silver, is further from attainment of its goal under the silver purchase program than it was at the end of July.

This was disclosed yesterday in figures made public by the Treasury showing total silver showings.

The fact that ground has been lost at the same time that silver holdings have been increased is due to the requirement of the silver purchase act that silver shall be acquired until holdings equal in monetary value one-third of the value of the gold holdings of the world price is raised to $1.29 per ounce.

From August 7 to October 13, the Treasury statement disclosed, gold holdings increased $903,248,114, to a new all-time high of $13,920,634,181. Meanwhile, Treasury silver holdings increased from $3,119,000,000 to $3,185,000,000.

Present Level 23 Per Cent

In consequence, the monetary value of silver holdings on October 12 was slightly less than 23 per cent of gold holdings. At the end of July the silver held by the Treasury had a so-called monetary worth equivalent to about 24 per cent of gold stocks.

Obviously, as required by the silver purchase act, the Treasury must continue to buy silver until the monetary value of the silver is equivalent to 33⅓ percent of the dollar value of the gold. This monetary value of silver, it should be explained, is the arbitrary value of $1.29 per ounce, based on the amount of metal in a silver dollar.

From June 30, 1934, shortly after the silver purchase act became effective, until August 31, this year, Treasury figures reveal, silver purchases totaled 1,728,000,000 ounces, having a monetary value of $2,234,000,000.

Billion in Certificates

In payment for this silver, the Treasury issued $1,006,000,000 of silver certificates, representing an average price of 57.6 cents per ounce. The Treasury thus, in effect, without using gerlrae funds to buy the metal, has "created" money for the purpose. The certificates are redeemable on the basis of monetary value—that is, they can be turned in for silver dollars.

Up to August 31, of the total acquired, 1,389,201,691 ounces were bought in the world market or by special agreement with various governments, 223,294,062 ounces under the subsidy program for newly-mined metal, and 113,032,916 under the "nationalization order" patterned after the nationalization of gold.

At the time the silver purchase urogram became effective, the Treasury's silver stocks had a monetary value of $897,900,000, or a little more than 11 per cent of the gold holdings, which then totaled about $7,900,000,000.

If the gold figure had remained where it was then, silver which the Treasury has since acquired would have a monetary value of more than 40 per cent of gold holdings.

If gold stocks remain at the present level, the Treasury must buy an additional 1,125,000,000 ounces of silver to bring the monetary value of silver stocks up to the required percentage.

Labor Chief Asks Union to Oust Sen. Davis
'We Are Our Brother's Keeper,' Says Earle

Philadelphia, Oct. 15 (AP).—Expulsion of Senator (Puddler Jim) Davis, Republican candidate for re-election to the Senate, from he Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America was demanded today by William Leader, chairman of the Philadelphia joint labor Commitee.

SEN. DAVIS

Leader telegraphed Philip Murray, national organizational leader of the union, that Davis "should have been expelled years ago because at no time in his history has he ever been a labor man."

The Senator, Secretary of Labor in the Harding Cabinet, is supported for re-election by President William Green, of he American Federation of Labor, but the Sate Federation and the C.I.O. have repudiated him and are backing Gov. Eearle, his opponent.

Davis got his nickname from working as puddler in a steel mill.

Bedford, Pa., Oct. 15 (AP).—Gov. Earle, declaring tha Democrats believe "we are our brother's keeper," sees the relief program as he chief issue of next month's election.

He said in a Senate campaign address that the machine age had caused critical problems and that "we Democrats aim to distribute better the profits of the machines."

"Republicans," he added, "like the old French Bourbons, think the best policy is 'Let the poor feed the poor.'"

The Scoffing statemetn by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, that Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, "leads only Minton and Sewellenbach," drew fire yesterday from a 100 per cent New Dealer.

Senator Smathers, of New Jersey, retorted on Capitol Hill:

"I don't like the statement of that one-time liberal from the far West—Burton Wheeler—that Barkley leads only Minton and Schwellenbach.

"I'd like to have my name added to the Minton-Schwellenbach list. Neither do I like his sattement that 'We have the votes to oust Barkley, but why do it?' Who does he mean by 'we?' The Republicans and who else?

"Poor Burt, I'm afraid he has stayed East too long."

A new card game lampooning major New Deal legislation and agencies, and known as "Balance the Budget," has made its appearance.

The deck consists of 52 cards; 48 numbered cards and 4 jokers. The numbered cards are divided into 16 different illustraed groups, representing social security, axes, Passamaquoddy, labor, and so on. Each group consists of three number cards having the same illustration. Four to eight people may play.

Mrs. Sara Sparks, president of the league, said that a special committee, in an effort to "dramatize the availability of well equipped, trained women for public office," selected a woman's ballot containing the names of 78 women from all parts of the tSate and sent it to more than 1,000 club members.

Mrs. Roosevelt "sent word to us that she does not wish to be a candidate for public office," Mrs. Sparks said.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 15 (AP).—Republican Representative Hartley telegraphed Secretary of War Woodring today that the latter's scheduled speech in Jersey City Monday night would be tantamount to giving White House approval to "the reactionary record of the New Jersey Democratic machine."

Decorations Make Room Look Better

If the proportions of a room are bad they can frequently be helped by proper decorations. For instance if the ceiling seems too high, the additional of horizontal lines will seem to bring it down. A chair rail or a picture moulding will help considerably.

NLRB Asked To Dissolve Wire Union

Western Union Cited
Rockwell Urges Order
Traces 'Espionage'

A trial examiner yesterday recommended that the National Labor Relations Board order Western Union to abandon its 20-year-old company union, the Association of Western Union Employes, and restore to employes all monies which have been deducted from wages for dues to the association.

The intermediate report was made by Alvin J. Rockwell, an NLRB trial examiner. The company has 10 days in which to offer compliance. Without such an offer, the trial examiner recommended that the matter be referred to the board for an order requiring the company's compliance. Western Union counsel may file briefs, or requests for oral argument before the board here, within the next 10 days.

Evidence received by Rockwell disclosed, his report said, that the company had aided its union in many ways, particularly by what was termed "a policy of watchful encouragement," by "selling campaigns," by free railway transportation for association officials to conventions, by permitting transaction of association business during working hours, by distribution of association literature by company supervisors to new employes, and by the check-off of association dues.

The report traced a history of purported labor espionage by the company from at least 1911 until the present day, and Rockwell found that "espionage continued after the execution of the President's re-employment agreement of August 31, 1933."

The report said:

"It is apparent that respondent's active hostility toward outside labor organizations was of great assistance to the association in establishing itself among the employes."

The report emphasized the company's check-off plan for dues from wages, and noted that James A. Berry, Western Union cashier in New York City, testified that during the period from July 5, 1935, to June, 1938, his office alone had deducted the aggregate amount of $67,004.25. No determination as to the total figure deducted was made by the report. Supplemental hearings will be required to determine that matter if an order for such restitution finally is entered by the Board.

The report stated that while wages were substantially increased from July, 1918, to October, 1930, "the evidence does not establish that the association had any effective voice in the administration of them or in the determination of the amount to be allotted." The last general wage increase was in 1920.

The report asserted that, throughout company history, Western Union used the association to "frustrate the organization of messengers," adding that it was not until January of this year that "discrimination against messengers was finally removed from the association's constitution."

Homes Called 'Stabilizer' By McDonald

350,000 This Year
Only 50,000 in 1934
Careless Era Gone

Chicago.—Predicting that more than 350,000 new dwelling units would be built in the United States this year as against only 50,000 four years ago, Stewart McDonald, administrator of the Federal Housing Administration, told members of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America recently that continued greater home ownership constitutes one of the greatest stabilizing influences in our national life. He said that the day of second mortgages, high fees, careless standards of construction, and the lack of economic data as to what our people really want in the way of housing are gone forever. Together, he said, they caused the greatest real estate collapse in history.

Mr. McDonald declared that FHA is now running about 115 per cent ahead of a year ago. He praised mortgage banking firms for their participation in the plan which in the first six months accounted for about 18 per cent of the total volume, second only to commercial banks. During 1938 mortgage bankers will do more business under the national housing act than in the three previous years combined. He said that the national housing act contemplated that FHA should be self-supporting and revealed that his budget forecast for the next fiscal year indicates an income of between $3,000,000 and $4,000.000 in excess of outgo.

FHA has been utilizing part of its income from insurance premiums and appraisal fees to offset expenses while at the same time augmenting the mutual mortgage insurance fund. Business has grown so rapidly, however, that FHA now has more than $1,100,000,000 of small home mortgages paying premium and getting appraisal fees every week from $20,000,000 or $25,000.000 of applications. Net charges against the mortgage insurance fund to date are less than $70,000, he said.

He explained that FHA had done one thing that had never been done before and that is give the mortgage loan instrument a degree of liquidity and marketability which it never had before. In addition it has brought about an interflow of mortgage credit throughout the country.

Mr. McDonald intimated that he was not in favor of a mortgage discount bank in this country, when he said: "A lot of people are in favor of a mortgage discount bank in this country. Perhaps they forget the fundamental purposes of the insured mortgage system—which is to liquefy the mortgage loans made under the FHA program. After all, a mortgage is the best investment in the world—until it goes bad. And if an FHA-insured mortgage goes bad, there is the absolute guarantee of the United States Treasury that any defaulted mortgage will be exchanged for debentures of the mortgage insurance fund, guaranteed by the Treasury as to interest and principal, and bearing higher interest rates than most government bonds now outstanding."

Mr. McDonald declared that he believed that more than 60 per cent of the borrowers on FHA mortgages pay less than 15 per cent of their monthly incomes for payments on their mortgages. He dwelt at length on what he said was one of the outstanding developments of the present upswing in construction, that is, the field of large scale rental housing developments.

Tobacco Thefts Halted by U. S. Crop Control

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Oct. 15.—Government control of tobacco production has crimped one of the oldest crimes in the tobacco belt—leaf stealing.

For years, unscrupulous persons have embarked on midnight ventures, going to outlying barns on farms; stealing the tobacco, loading it into automobiles and speeding to a distant warehouse, where it was sold with practically no chance of the thief being detected.

Crop control has intervened because it is no longer possible for any tobacco grower to sell leaf without a Government card which shows his poundage quota with a separate entry for every time he sells tobacco countersigned by a Government agent.

Not one instance of tobacco stealing has been reported in this area this season.

build a new major branch in Anacostia."

Noyes expressed satisfaction over the retention of Dr. George F. Bowerman as librarian beyond the retirement age. "Dr. Bowerman's 34 years of incumbency have been marked with notable achievements in the development of the library's educational service and expansion of the branch system. Impetus to the branch building program and the necessity for skillful planning of the new central library make Dr. Bowerman's expert knowledge and long professional experience particularly valuable at this time," he said.

In the past 20 years home circulation of the library has increased 259 per cent, from 865,360 volumes in 1918, to 3,108,705 volumes, according to Dr. Bowerman's report which accompanied tha tof the trustees. In addition, 252,859 mounted pictures and 13,251 pieces of music were circulated, making a total of 3,374,855 pieces lent.

Readers Increasing

Readers registered as library users numbered 136,404, a gain of 3,205 over the previous year, and an increase of 147 per cent over 1918. Registration figures do not include a large number of elementary and junior high school pupils, perhaps, 15,000, who secure books sent to schools, Dr. Bowerman added.

The book stock was increased to 586,619 volumes, of which more than 25,000 was of the original stock of the Petworth branch. The stock has increased 183 per cent over the 206,904 in 1918. The appropriation for books was $84,500.

Reference assistance was given at the central building to 138 Government agencies and organizations. Assignment of a guard cut the amount of drunkenness in the room, which is extensively used by unemployed in inclement weather.

The Washingtonian division had 1,872 visitors, and 40 organizations including New Deal agencies requested information. Gifts to the division came from theses of University of Maryland students, Federal Housing Association, Evening Star, Mrs. Helen T. Steinberger, Mrs. Mary C. D. Johnson, Mrs. L. A. Bauer, Mrs. Helen Lane and Miss Emma Siboni.

Hospital Aided

For the sixth year library service was extended to patients at George Washington University Hospital. Circulation was 6,044 volumes. Through the extension service 25,497 volumes were circulated at Lorton Reformatory, and 543 at the District Jail.

The technology division recorded a circulation of 53,601 volumes and answered 3,316 questions. A survey revealed that 68 governmental agencies and private organizations use the division.

A total of 252,879 pictures circulated by the art division represented a gain of 44,403 over the previous year. The music division circulated 15,562 books and 13 271 pieces of music. More than 1,600 persons attended "Evenings with the Victrola."

Boys and girls read 1,443,357 volumes and asked 78,386 questions in the five major children's rooms, Dr. Bowerman contiued. School divisions circulated 689,809 volumes through 1,242 classrooms in 186 schools. More than 6,000 children in 219 classes visited boys and girls rooms, and 4,188 attended 155 story hours.

Total Circulation

Total circulation of the five major branches was 1,315,082 volumes. Distribution was Georgetown, 262,151; Mount Pleasant, 442,204; Northeastern, 259,030; Southeastern, 211,389, and Takoma Park, 140,308.

Minor branches had a circulation of 311,354; Chevy Chase, 102,581; Conduit Road, 19,449; Eastern High, 37,684; Tenley, 51,364, and Woodridge, 100,276.

During the year $80,821 was expended for purchase of 72,247 volumes at an average cost of 1.12. Of the $84,500 appropriation, $30,000 was allotted to Petworth and 44 per cent was spent for children's books.

On June 16 the staff numbered 276 persons. There were 76 resignations. Under the National Youth Administration, five university students worked 1,759 hours.

The WPA project for renovating the entire exterior of the central building was completed at a cost of $27,717 on March 20. Dr. Bowerman expressed appreciation for the project without which "much needed work would have been indefinitely postponed due to the inadequacy of regular appropriation for maintenance and operation of the library buildings."

Ford Back-to-Farm Experiment Success

1. CAMP LEGION, near Dearborn, Mich., where Henry Ford settled 68 youths on a 400-acre tract last spring in a back-to-the-farm movement. Reiterating his theory that prosperity lies in the soil and the farm, he recruited the youths from welfare families, housed them in a dozen squad tents

2. MACHINERY was furnished at a nominal rental and the lads, all under 19, were paid $2 a day, given food and shelter. At present they are harvesting 86 varieties of crops, from corn, soy beans and buckwheat to apples, pears and honey

3. ROADSIDE MARKET where the products are sold to motorists. So successful has been the experiment that Ford has announced several new camps are in prospect for next year. It's apparent that after the crops are all sold and camp costs deducted, there will be a surplus to be divided among those enrolled

Court Considers Deportation Rule

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court considered yesterday litigation that may affect deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader, charged with associating with Communists.

Before the justices at their Saturday conference was a Government petition seeking review of a decision by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals reversing a deportation order against Joseph G. Strecker, of Hot Springs, Ark.

Strecker was ordered deported under a 1918 statute. The circuit court ruled there was no evidence that because Strecker joined the Communist Party he advocated violent overthrow of the Government. Strecker was born in Austria, Bridges in Australia.

Pact Reached In New York Tugboat Strike

Union to Vote Today Liners Delayed 2,000 Workers Out

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—An understanding which conferees said would release 75 per cent of the tonnage tied up by the Tugboat Workers strike, which threatened to halt all traffic in the Nation's busiest harbor, was reached tonight by union officials and a group of tugboat operators.

Terms of the agreement, reached after the union reduced its wage demands, will be submitted tomorrow night to the general membership of the United Marine Division, Local 333, of the International Longshoremen's Association (A. F. of L.), which called out 2,000 men.

Liners Delayed

Pending the membership vote, the union continued the strike, which delayed docking of several transatlantic liners today and forced others to pull away at sailing time wiwthout the customary aid of tugs. An operators' spokesman estimated the strike would cost owners $35,000 a day and workers $7,500 daily in wages.

Joseph P. Ryan, I. L. A. president, said he would recommend the union accept the operators' terms of a $5-a-month wage increase for licensed men and $7.50 for unlicensed men.

"That is our rock-bottom price," said Ryan. The union originally had demanded a $1-a-day increase for all its men, but cut this to $15 and $10 monthly before calling the strike at midnight last night.

James G. Conway, president of the Towboat Exchange, representing the owners, said a closed shop clause for the workers also would be recommended to the operators.

2,000 Workers Out

Ryan expressed belief that signing of contracts by owners of 75 per cent of the towboat tonnage would force the remaining operators to sign.

William V. Bradley, of the union, said 2,000 men on 225 boats in New York harbor and adjacent waters answered the strike call. Even garbage scows were being moved only at Mayor LaGuardia's request.

The only tugs moving in the harbor today were those serving coastwise ships, railroad tugs, self-propelling oil tankers and tugs from the Erie Canal which happened to be in the harbor when the strike started. The strike did not affect them.

"Give a Hand Up—Not a Handout" is the slogan adopted for the 1938 Community Chest appeal, Charles B. Dulcan, chairman of the volunteer campaign publicity committee, announced yesterday.

Army Chases Civilian Plane In War Games

Ainr Lines Pursued Mistaken for Bomber Warning Net Works

By the Associated Press.

Fort Bragg, N. C., Oct. 15.—An unwary air line pilot learned today about the efficiency of the civilian warning net being tested in air defense maneuvers here.

During today's exercises warnings began to pour into defense headquarters of a strange craft entering the defense net from the north and heading toward Fort Bragg.

The leader of a pursuit squadron on day patrol north of Fort Bragg was ordered to intercept the stranger on the supposition that the invading forces were attempting to sneak a bomber through th net.

About 30 miles north of here the big airliner suddenly found itself surrounded by a howling horde of 250-mile-an-hour pursuit planes.

The Army pilots soon discovered what had happened, while the air liner pilot turned on full speed out of the area, his every move traced by the civilian observers until he disappeared.

AFL and CIO Cool to Plea Of Miss Perkins

Labor

drop of a hat," but should be "disinterested" and experienced "in the art of mediation."

"If the ten can't agree on the public members, then some outside trusted person can be asked to select and appoint them," she added.

A particular obstacle noted to the Perkins' plan was her suggestion that the mediators be given power to bind their organizations to the settlement concluded upon.

Federation spokesmen noted that only an A.F.L. convention can give this power over jurisdictional claims to a committee. The annual A.F.L. convention adjourned Thursday at Houston, Tex., without authorizing new peace gestures.

Whitney Cites Objections

In this vein, A. F. Whitney, president, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, an independent organization, said yesterday that while "the effort is a worthy one, neither committee could bind the hands of its union without convention-delegated authority."

But Whitney added that the plan, even "without 100 per cent results, would probably be beneficial."

Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, affiliated with the A. F. of L., did not say that he was definitely opposed to the plan, but he remarked that it would have been "much better" if President Roosevelt had made the proposal instead of Miss Perkins.

Dublinsky Hails Plea

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, a C. I. O. leader who has been outspoken in his demands for a labor peace, made the following comment:

"I am glad to note that the Secretary of Labor came out with a definite proposal. It should receive definite consideration from both parties."

Max Saritsky, president of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers International Union, who is one of the founders of the C. I. O. although his union has remained affiliated with the A. F. of L., said that the proposal should not be ignored.

Utility Chief Comments

From an outsider's viewpoint, Henry L. Harriman, New England utilities official, said at Boston, it was a question whether mediation could successfully settle differences between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L.

Harriman, member of President Roosevelt's committee which recently studied labor conditions in Europe, saw difficulty in selecting disinterested persons to settle the labor dispute.

"If they could get three disinterested persons to sit in with the representatives of labor and settle this, I think it would be a very good thing," he said.

It was certain, however, that members of both camps were paying close attention to the words of the Secretary at Columbus yesterday, particularly:

"Co-operation within the now divided movement is needed if labor is to achieve its proper place of responsibility in the United States. As I have said before, dissension and division inevitably lead to loss of influence and prestige of all those involved, particularly in the matters where the public interest may be concerned."

Ruth Bannon, one of Radio City's Dancing Rockettes, appears quite interesting in this picture, but the featured subject happens to be the Rhode Island red she is holding, which had just been crowned "Hen of the Year" at the poultry exhibition in New York. The valued bird, raised by J. J. Warren, of North Brookfield, Mass., set a record of 341 eggs in 51 weeks.

Crowds Fill New Orleans For Eucharistic Congress

Even the canopy rising 75 feet above the stadium altar has the stamp of this city upon it. Its four supports are constructed of iron grill-work copied from a balcony of the old French quarter. Its cornice was copied from old New Orleans homes and the iron cresting from eighteenth century domestic decorations which abound in this city.

Surmounting the dome a cross was illuminated tonight, tipped with the fleur-de-lis, to recall that missionaries of France first held aloft the cross in Louisiana. Under the transparent illuminated golden dome of the canopy hangs an immense crucifix of Louisiana cypress.

In downtown New Orleans are flying hundreds of American flags and gold-and-white Papal banners, fluttering in a summer-like breeze. With the thousands of laymen, are most of those around whom the Catholic Church centers its ceremonials in this county—the hierarchy. Fourteen archbishops, eighty-six bishops, many a monsignor and hundreds of priests are to take part in the four days of ceremonies. The congress is "an assembly to glorify Jesus Christ through homage and devotion to His real presence in the Holy Eucharistic."

Farley to Speak

At the head of the New York delegation there arrived tonight the Most Rev. Stephen J. Donahue, who was named administrator of the arch-diocese of New York upon the death of the late Cardinal Hayes.

As a representative of President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley will arrive Monday. He is to be one of the speakers that night at the civic reception to be tendered in the municipal auditorium to George Cardinal Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago, Papal legate to this convention.

The arrival of Cardinal Mundelein at noon Monday will be the signal for such a din as New Orleans lets loose only at Mardi Gras time. Not only will all the bells of the city's 55 Catholic churches be rung, but almost every factory foreman plans to blow his whistle, and so do most of the "Steamboat Bills" whose craft are docked along the wharves of Ole' Man River.

Sixty-five per cent of the inhabitants of this city of a half-million are Catholics. Already more than 70,000 of them have registered as marchers in the 4-mile procession Thursday, a procession expected to continue from midday until long past sunset.

Hotels Overflow

Unable to find suitable accommodations in this city, many of the pilgrims are bunking tonight at aBton Rouge and Biloxi. Some went as far as mobile, 160 miles away, to find lodging.

Most of the hierarchy are being accommodated at the Roosevelt Hotel, in which 50 altars have been erected. At those altars the archbishops, the bishops and some of the visiting monsignor will say their daily masses.

Altars also have been put up on the second floor of the Municipal Auditorium for the use of visiting priests, whose numbers are too great for all of them to be accommodated for the daily celebration of the mass in the city's Catholic churches.

Cardinal Mundelein, who, as the Pope's personal representative, will be the ranking prelate at the Congress, is to be met by the Archbishop of new Orleans, the Most Rev. Joseph F. Rummel; Gov. Leche of Louisiana, and a delegation of other church and civic leaders. Robert S. Maestri, Mayor of New Orleans, left for Washington tonight to discuss the building of a ne wunion station with PWA Administrator Ickes, but announced he hoped o be back in time for some of the ceremonies.

Pope to Broadcast

From the station Cardinal Mundelein will be escorted to St. Louis Cathedral for a liturgical reception. A the civic reception Monday night, under the chairmanship of the Right Rev. Mgr. Peter M. H. Wynhoven, active chairman of the Congress, Cardinal Mundelein will respond to addresses by Farley, Archbishop Rummel of New Orleans, and Gov. Leche.

Tuesday's program begins with a solemn pontifical high mass n the stadium to be celebrated by Cardinal Mundelein. The Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit, is to deliver the sermon. As the mass reaches its conclusion Pope Pius XI will address his message, speaking through the Vatican's radio station.

Civil Service Holds Lawyers In Its Scope

Merit

signed to investigate the practicality of including the attorneys into civil service under the executive orders of June 24. The 12-page report was delivered on September 2, saying in essence:

"Each department or agency affected by the executive order should recommend that legal positions be excepted. The exception should not be a permanent one. There is general agreement with the civil service objectives and belief that legal positions should ultimately be placed under the civil service, but that should not be done until more satisfactory methods of selection are evolved. Until that time comes, the high quality of legal personnel can best be maintained by continuing present methods of selection."

Magazine Quoted

And in answer the commission said that "its recommendations to the President will be based on consideration of the duties and responsibilities of each group of attorney positions and the practicality of examination therefor."

The commission pointed to the report of the executive council of the Federal Bar Association, asking extension of the merit system to all lawyers "employed by Government under modernized civil service practice." At the same time, the commission said, the current issue of the Lawyers Guild Quarterly carries an article discussing the extended exemptions heretofore given lawyers, with the conclusion:

"The picture of wholesale exemption and evasion which we have considered constitutes a disgraceful commentary on our Goverment. It is inconceivable that any enlightened government will permit such abuses to continue."

Referring to specific allegations in the attorneys' report, the commission yesterday declared:

Objections raised on the ground of veteran preference requirements are based on a fear that unqualified veterans will be certified at the head of registers. No applicant, veteran or non-veteran, who is not fully qualified to meet the needs of the service in every respect need be rated eligible or certified.

Objection that highly skilled and able lawyers with great opportunity in private employment cannot be recruited by competitive examination does not stand up under the recruiting procedures which can be instituted under the new rules and the expediting of the examining process provided therein.

Objection that specialized needs for particular vacancies cannot be met from regularly established registers does not stand up in the face of the provisions for selective certification of specialists under the new rules.

"The Commission will make its recommendations to the President on the basis of the needs of the service and facilities available under the new rules for rendering prompt and effective service to appointing officers," it was said.

Taft Hits '2-Price' Farm Plan In Debate With Sen. Bulkley

Albright

letter requesting applicants for PWA jobs to "submit letters to show that he is qualified and politically satisfactory."

Then he opened an old-fashioned attack on what he called the New eDal's "price fixing and wage-fixing" policies, predicting they would lead to destruction of all State and local governments.

As in every other State where elections are a toss-up, the issue in this campaign is the New Deal.

Bulkley Chooses Topic

Subject of the Dayton debate was chosen by Bulkley. It was "The New Deal's Recognition of New Responsibilities for the General Welfare."

Bulkley spoke for the first 35 minutes. He said the Federal Government has new responsibilities to the farmer and to labor, which the New Deal is meeting. He charged Taft wants to go back to the old laisse faire policies of "devil take "the hue and cry of the great corporations in their shallow pretense that they are really interested in states' rights." He challenged Taft to tell "where he stands."

In a 45-minute rebuttal, the pink-faced, sandy-haired, bespectacled Taft said he recognized "new Federal responsibilities" but not as against local self-government. He attacked the WPA relief set-up. He favored local relief with 80 per cent Federal grants. He assailed the Social Security Administration. He favored State old-age pensions and unemployment insurance with aid from the Government on "a pay as you go basis."

Taft Assails Farm Plan

Then he left the Bulkley issues to launch a bitter attack on the new "two price system" for domestic consumers proposed by Wallace, which he called "another jack rabbit just out of the hat." He termed it "the final admission of the failure of the New Deal" and predicted it would wind up "with two-thirds of the people being under-privileged."

The outburst of boos came in Bulkley's nine-minute final rebuttal. Above the din, Bulkley could be heard shouting "He's trying to fool you about what is the real truth."

Bulkley said Taft was quoting from a Washington news dispatch "that might be of consequence and might not," adding: "Mark my words, any plan to distribute financial help to those who need it is not going to prove unpopular."

Which Is Lincoln

Booing, which often all but drowned out the speaker, twice brought remonstrances from the chairman. Once Bulkley put in: "It's alright to bo me, but I hope no friends of mine will bo Mr. Taft."

Thus ended the second of Ohio's "Lincoln-Douglas debates," with four rounds to follow in succeeding weeks, and a shade of doubt about who is playing the Lincoln role.

Twice now, independent observers have awarded Taft, who has the better speaking voice and delivery, the edge in these engagements. But in the final analysis the election won't be decided on a debating platform. Democratic leaders here smile knowingly and say: "Wait and see."

London's Air Defense Weak, Expert Says

Liddell Hart Critical
Berlin Hints Plane Pact
Britain Cold to Idea

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 15.—Britain pushed toward greater armaments and defenses today, indifferent to suggestions of an aviation limitation pact with Germany.

War Minister Hore-Belisha, who announced a hope of doubling in the next year the nearly 50,000 men operating anti-aircraft guns and supplementary equipment, with the necessary guns now in mass production, was spurred by B. H. Liddell Hart's slashing criticism of London's anti-aircraft defenses.

Liddell Hart, a military expert and writer, declared to the Emergency Youth Peace Conference, that "barely 100 guns" were available for London's defense against air raids during the crisis over Czechoslovakia.

Surrender "Justified"

Comparing London's defenses with those of Paris, he said the latter was ringed with 700 guns and that, moreover, London's defenses were "improvised with various weapons much more dangerous to civilian life and property tha nto attackink aircraft."

Under the circumstances, he said, the surrender of Czechoslovakia at Munich was justified.

Meanwhile, there was unfavorable reaction in authoritative quarters to what was termed "feelers through press and otherwise" suggesting that Britain accept an air pact with Germany making the Nazis supreme in the sky.

These quarters said Britain's aviation policy is still based on the statement in 1936 of the former prime minister, Earl Baldwin, that Bratin's frontier is "on the Rhine."

Her air fleet must be equal to that of any power "within striking distance"—in other words, Germany's—was the opinion of these quarters.

(Berlin advices said that when Reichsfuehrer Hitler is ready to discuss an air pact with other nations it was well understood in foreign embassies he would demand an air force sufficiently large to match the combined air fleets of England, France and Soviet Russia.)

Berlin Denies Pact Plan

(The foreign office there denied, however, that an air pact with Britain was now under consideration.)

Aside from Hore-Belisha's project for an "overalls army"—industrial workers wearing overall uniforms and assigned to operate anti-aircraft guns and other equipment to protect their own plants in time of air raids—it was expected legislative proposals to establish a national register for war duty would be announced in Parliament November 3 in King George's speech re-opening Parliament.

Informed quarters said a special department of national defense, responsible for all branches of civilian protection, was planned. All Britains would register for some sort of service in case of emergency.

Nice, O'Conor Seek to Meet Every Voter

Primed for Battle
Comb Maryland
Routine the Same

You may have seen the Governor of Maryland cruising on Chesapeake Bay on the State-owned yacht, or living sumptuously in the historic mansion at Annapolis, or whipping over a highway with a State trooper at the wheel and with other State troopers on motorcycles clearing the way ahead. And seeing these things, you may have said to yourself, "Pretty soft!"

Now, if you will take the trouble to look, you can see the other side, the hard, grueling side, which is the campaign a man must wage to be Governor of Maryland.

This quadrennial campaign is now approaching a climax, and it finds the two candidates—roly-poly, 61-year-old Gov. Harry W. Nice, Republican, and handsome 42-year-old Herbert R. O'Conor, Democrat, seemingly determined to talk to and shake hands with every voter in the Free State.

They already have combed southern Maryland, and now they are whirling through western Maryland, trying desperately to remember names; eating each meal at a different place and sleeping likewise when they are too far away from Baltimore to return. Both Nice and O'Conor will visit every one of Maryland's 23 counties and, in the final week of the campaign, speak in every one of Baltimore's six election districts.

Sometimes Get Into Daze

A fellow has to be in pretty good physical shape to go through all that. If he sometimes gets into a daze, as Gov. Nice did in 1934, it is not surprising. Nice was campaigning up in Garrett County that year, stopping wherever he could find a voter to listen.

Nice had been talking to a group at a filling station for several minutes. His listeners appeared puzzled.

"Who did you say you were?" one finally asked.

"Harry Nice," the candidate jovially replied.

"And what did you say you were running for?"

"Governor of Maryland."

"Well, maybe you don't know it, mister, but you're in Pennsylvania."

Custom to Travel Together

In Maryland the custom is for the candidates on each ticket to travel together. Thus, when Gov. Nice sets out for the hustings, he is accompanied by former Judge Oscar Leser, nominee for United States Senate; Dr. W. G. Jack, nominee for comptroller; Leo Weinberg, nominee for attorney general, and E. R. Jones, nominee for clerk of the Court of Appeals.

Young O'Conor has in his cavalcade United States Senator Millard E. Tydings, seeking a third term; J. Miliard Tawes, nominee for comptroller; William C. Walsh, nominee for attorney general, and J. A. Young, nominee for clerk of the Court of Appeals.

Wherever they go, the routine is the same. Each nominee gets up and makes a speech, while the others listen. The speech a nominee makes in Hyattsville generally is the same one he made earlier in the day at Upper Marlboro, and the chances are it will be the one he will deliver later at Cumberland. The jokes are the same, too. Newspaper reporters get a chance to slip out and take a smoke, thus escaping the repetition, but the candidates themselves have to sit through it, and what's more, must laugh and applaud.

Senator Tydings tells the story about a Massachusetts Senator, jeeringly pointing to a line of mules as a new arrival of Texans.

"Yes," drawled Sam Houston, former Texas member of Congress, "they're on their way to Massachusetts to teach school."

One Remark Inevitable

That always gets a good laugh, and O'Conor and Tydings' other fellow troupers always join in, though they may have heard the story 50 times.

Gov. Nice may vary his speeches in some respects, but there is one remark that is inevitable whenever he faces a crowd.

"I am not making war on the Democratic Party," says the Republican nominee. "If it weren't for Democratic votes, I wouldn't be Governor today. The Republican votes I can count on, but I've got to have Democratic votes to win. I am going to get them, too, as sure as you are sitting here."

There is the key to the whole campaign. Nice was elected in 1934 by votes of Democrats who didn't like the idea of Albert C. Ritchie seeking a fifth term. This time he is running against a young man who says that one term is enough for a Maryland Governor.

The winner will not be known until the night of November 8. It is not too early, however, to extend some congratulations right now. Congratulations are due to all the candidates, Republican and Democratic, for their forbearance with each other.

Winchester Dinner Honors Retiring U. S. Farm Official

W. A. Sherman Feted After 43 Years' Service
Veteran's Executive Ability Lauded by Koiner
Was Head of Fruit and Vegetable Division

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 15.—W. A. Sherman, who has headed the fruit and vegetable division of the United States Bureau of Natural Economics, was praised by State Agricultural Commissioner George Koiner tonight for his 43 years' service in "promoting agriculture."

Mr. Sherman, who plans to retire to his own farm, was the guest of honor at a banquet arranged by his friends and associates.

The commissioner, in his prepared address, said rural life had advanced far from its isolation of 40 years ago.

"In this evolution," he said, "agencies for the promotion of agriculture emerged from the 'horse and buggy' age of service . . . agricultural economics was fitted into its essential place."

In this work, he said, Mr. Sherman "made a distinct contribution. In the early years of the 40-year period he was State statistical agent for Virginia and West Virginia, and later was scientific assistant in statistics. Then there followed service in the Civil Service Commission, in the Bureau of Plant Industry incident to sale and distribution of cotton standards, and as scientific assistant in connection with cotton handling and marketing.

"In 1913, when the officer of markets was organized, with Charles J. Brand as chief, he (Sherman) was promoted from scientific assistant to assistant in market surveys. Out of this organization, with a mere handful of employes, has grown the present Bureau of Agricultural Economics, with a personnel of approximately 4,000.

"In 1920, our honored guest of long service and versatile ability, was placed in charge of the newly organized fruit and vegetable division. In this capacity he has served until now when he elects to retire to a farm in his native State, Virginia, emulating another distinguished (public) servant who retired to Mt. Vernon."

Va. Livestock Revenue Exceeds Crop Income by $6,477,000

Continues to Lead as Farm Cash Source
Grossed $30,637,000 Against $24,160,000
U. S. Bureau Reports for 8 Months of 1938

By the Associated Press.

Department of Agriculture statistics revealed yesterday that livestock and livestock products in Virginia this year continue to increase their lead over crops as a source of farm income.

During the first eight months of 1938, the report showed, Virginia farmers realized a cash income of $24,160,000 from sale of crops, compared with $30,637,000 from sale of livestock and livestock products, a spread of $6,477,000.

Last year, for the same period, crop sales totaled $27,489,000 compared with $30,876,000 from livestock, a spread of $3,387,000.

In 1936, crop sale revenue topped livestock sales for the eight months period, crop sales totaling $30,885,000 and livestock $26,435,000. In 1935, crop sales totaled $24,224,000 against $26,925,000 for livestock.

Virginia led all other States of the South Atlantic division for the first eight months of 1938 in farm income from livestock and livestock products, but Virginia farmers' income from crop sales were far short of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Government payments to Virginia farmers during the first eight months of 1938 totaled $3,253,000, compared with $3,189,000 for the same period last year.

Receipts from crop sales in the South Atlantic area as a whole, the department said, were 13 per cent below the same months last year and more than offset a 5 per cent increase from livestock and livestock products.

Income from marketing of all principal farm products was 8 per cent below a year earlier, and the total including Government payments was also 8 per cent lower.

Police Doubt Skeleton Is Sen. McCoin's

Shabby Clothes Cited
Dental X-Ray Waited
Case Remains Open

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 15.—Doubt that a skeleton found west of here is that of R. S. McCoin, former North Carolina State Senator missing since 1932, was raised here tonight as officials awaited a report from Henderson, N. C. officials on a dental X-ray compared with the denial plate of the skull.

The body found near Martinsburg, W. Va., was shabbily dressed and since McCoin was a wealthy tobacco plantation owner some officials tonight expressd belief attempts to tie up the cases would prove futile.

The case remained open, however, pending a comparison at Henderson of a dental X-ray, taken three months before McCoin disappeared, and a dental description sent to Henderson by Hagerstown and Martinsburg officials.

"There were only four teeth in the skull, all of them in the upper plate," Police Chief Carl McCleary reported. The skeleton, he said, was rebuilt after being dug up for examination today.

McCoin disappeared late in December of 1932 after leaving Henderson for Richmond.

The only clew to his fate came in an anonymous letter from Chicago, saying the writer and two other men killed McCoin and buried him west of Hagerstown after he thwarted a scheme to get money from him.

The writer said the trio planned to intentionally sideswipe his auto, and then claim damages. McCoin, the letter said, was killed after a roadside altercation.

According to the letter, the body was buried in a spot at the approximate location where the skeleton was found yesterday. The letter was sent to Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy of the North Carolina Supreme Court, shortly after McCoin disappeared.

Further Doubt Expressed

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 15.—Police here doubted the possibility of a connection between the skeleton and the missing Senator McCoin. They estimated the body found here had not been dead more than a year or two, as against the six-year absence of the North Carolina man. Coroner Tonkin said there were no marks about the skull or other parts of the body to indicate violence.

Bids Asked On School for Bladensburg

To Be Opened Oct. 31
Gas Taxes Studied
Dudrow Rites Set

Bids on a new 12-room elementary school at Bladensburg have been asked by the Prince Georges County Board of Education, by Nicholas Orem, superintendent of schools, said yesterday.

The bids will be opened at 2 p. m., October 31, in the office of the board of education, Upper Marlboro. The school, designed by Upman and Adams, Washington architects, will contain an auditorium in addition to the classrooms and will cost an estimted $90,000. This price does not include $8,000 spent for the site on Defense highway, opposite the Bladensburg High School.

The Public Works Administration will finance 45 per cent of the cost of the building, which is part of a $411,274 school construction program in the county, being undertaken with money raised by local bond sales and a PWA grant of $165,072.

Meeting in Cheverly

All of Cheverly's property owners have been asked to meet tomorrow and Tuesday, at 7:30 p. m., with the town council to adopt a list of streets to be improved under a $100,000 paving program.

Only those streets will be improved, Mayor Raymond Fletcher said, on which a majority of the property owners indicate their willingness to pay 55 per cent of the cost, assessed on a front-footage basis and payable over a period of years.

The remaining 45 per cent of the cost will be met through a PWA grant of $45,000 which has already been accepted by the council.

To cover the town's share of the cost until householders' assessments are paid, the council will issue about $55,000 in bonds, the first to be floated in Cheverly.

Both mass meetings will be held in the Cheverly School, Mayor Fletcher said. Monday night streets in the First and Third Wards will be considered, and on Tuesday those in the Second and Fourth Wards.

Gas Tax Claim Studied

Prince Georges County commissioners are now studying a claim of the County Municipal Officers' Association for additional payments on the Maryland gasoline tax, it was reported to the association at a meeting in District Heights this week by Bird H. Dolby, president of the association and chairman of the gas tax committee.

Dolby told the municipal officials that sums paid to incorporated towns in Prince Georges County by the county government did not equal the share of the 1½-cent gas tax to which they were entitled. The tax is collected by the State for joint use on county roads and community streets in proportions laid down in the original tax law.

The county commissioners, said Dolby, have accepted his committee's report and referred it to their attorney, Ogle Marbury, for study. A report from the commissioners should be received in time for discussion at the next meeting of the Municipal Officers' Association, at Edmonston, November 10.

Dudrow Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. for Neuman G. Dudrow, 60, first vice president of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier, who died Friday night at his Hyattsville home.

Following services at Gasch's funeral home, Hyattsville, burial will be at Hyattstown.

Surviving are the wife, Mrs. Catherine Dudrow; a son, William, and a brother, Otis G., all of Hyattsville; a brother, Bradley H., of Hyattstown, and five sisters, Mrs. Margaret Hall and Mrs. Delmar Willard, of Poolesville; Mrs. Frank Karn, of Rockville, and Mrs. Minnie Horine and Mrs. Georgia Darby, of Hyattstown.

Night Air Cools House Cheaply

One of the cheapest means of cooling is to replace the hot air which accumulates in a house in the daytime with cool night air drawn in by a powerful electric fan placed in the attic. During the daytime a house absorbs heat through the roof, and the temperature of an attic on a summer day is often in excess of 130 degrees. Much heat is transferred through the ceilings to the rooms below, making the living and sleeping quarters uncomfortable.

At night the house gives off this accumulated heat very slowly. The night outdoor temperature may be 15 degrees below the daytime temperature but the house will have cooled off only 5 degrees. By the use of an electric fan in the attic, the accumulation of hot air can be blown out and replaced with cool night air, thus reducing the temperature of the air in the house to within 1 or 2 degrees of the outdoor temperature. All of the air in the house can be completely changed every minute.

All windows are left open at night to facilitate the rapid change of air. In the daytime windows and doors are kept closed and the house will not warm up as rapidly as would be the case if the warm air from the previous day had been retained.

Paint Preserves Wood Against Fire Hazard

Keeping wood well-painted prevents the exterior of a house from weathering to tinder dryness and therefore becoming a fire hazard. To apply enamels and varnishes to interior walls and woodwork is to create a film which will prevent combustible gases from escaping and igniting under surfaces exposed to extreme heat.

Shingled roofs, particularly, should be treated with some preparation containing a high percentage of pigments. This prevents their warping, curling and also fuzzing over on the surface which, in itself, attracts flame.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200

Civic leaders of Montgomery County will call on the county commissioners Tuesday to urge a survey of county government, Allen H. Gardner, chairman of a special committee of the Montgomery County Civic Federation said last night.

Ira C. Whitacre, clerk to the county commissioners, said yesterday the commissioners would go into executive session Tuesday to consider the annual report of the county auditors, the firm of Wooden & Benson of Baltimore. The auditing firm has completed an analysis of the county's financial affairs for the year ended July 1.

Whitacre said the commissioners will complete their routine business at the morning session so they can go into executive session in the afternoon, to consider the report.

The delegation will include representatives of most of the 37 business and civic groups which comprise the civic federation and is expected to number more than 100. A hearing before the commissioners had been set, but commissioners later decided they would wait until after election to hear the plea.

The civic federation last Monday voted to send a delegation Tuesday despite the commissioners announced opposition to the hearing. The civic group wants an appropriation of $5,000 for hiring an outside, non-political agency to make a survey of the county government and to recommend improvements in time for consideration by the next session of the State Legislature which begins in January.

Richard Horner Bales, the son of Mrs. Harry A. Bales, of Alexandria, has been given a fellowship at the Juilliard Musical Institute of New York City.

Metal Windows Aid Sun Parlor

The purpose of a sun parlor is to give a bright spot that may be used as a cheerful sitting room, as a porch, as a place for flowers and, frequently, as a sleeping porch. To meet these purposes a maximum of sun and light should be provided, while ventilation must receive equal consideration. For these reasons architects advise selection of windows and doors with particular care.

By the use of metal windows joined by vertical mullions an almost continuous sweep of window surface can be obtained for the sun room. An added advantage of such windows is that the strength of materials used in their construction permits sometimes as much as 25 percent more glass area in a given opening than when the conventional type of window is used, thus allowing more light to penetrate the room.

Ventilation is also provided. Outward opening steel casement windows catch any breeze stirring and deflect it into the room. Being weathertight, the windows afford excellent protection against cold and rain during inclement weather.

Davis-Elkins Trims St. Mary's

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—A fighting Mount St. Mary's team went down to defeat 19 to 0 here today before a heavy Davis-Elkins squad.

The Scarlet Hurricanes, after being held scoreless in the opening quarter shoved over a score in each of the other periods. The first Davis and Elkins score came midway in the second period when a long pass, Hudson to Tebor, put the ball on the Mountaineers' 9-yard line. On the fourth down Childers went over tackle for a touchdown and the half ended with Davis-Elkins ahead, 6 to 0.

Red, White and Blue Are Popular Colors

A well-lighted bedroom is made charming by the simple combination of red, blue and white. The walls are painted a restful shade of Delft blue, the woodwork white and the bed riche, which contains the windows, is draped with white, looped back curtains.

White, straight-hung curtains are used at the windows and the twin mahogany beds were covered by dark red and white striped spreads of taffeta with gathered side valances. The remainder of the furniture was also in mahogany finish.

Berlin Press Rails at British And U.S. Arms

Unprecedented Attack Hitler Pushes Onward Forces Duce Into Line

By the United Press.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Nazi Germany began forcing her new economic, political and military prestige on Central Europe tonight.

In a series of swift developments Reichsfulhrer Hitler demonstrated that annexation of the Sudetenland was only a beginning.

While the Nazi press railed against American and British armament plans, the Berlin government took these steps:

Intervened in the Hungarian-Czech minority dispute to force another attempt at peaceful settlement.

Tighened its trade relations with Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Turkey and Rumania.

Won a promise of "loyalty" from the Czech foreign minister.

Brought about lifting of the ban on the sale of Hitler's book in Slovakia.

Banned Jewish lawyers from the Reich effective November 30.

Ordered Czech citizens, especially Czech Jews, out of Vienna and German territory.

America Criticized

The unprecedented press criticism of American and British arms plans was significant in its relation to European peace. After the Munich four-power peacea greement, it had been expected that efforts would be made toward general pacification of the continent. Hitler was reported to desire an agreement with Britain which would assure Germany of aerial dominance, but the only British reply has been additional emphasis on rearmament.

In the Czech-Hungarian dispute, Hitler told representatives of both parties at Munich they should resume the interrupted negotiations and reach a compromise solution.

(In London, the preparations for new negotiations were regarded as an outstanding triumph for Hitler and a setback for Premier Mussolini of Italy, who was forced to back down after strongly supporting the Hungarian demand for quick action.)

Duce Overridden

Hitler's action in the Czech-Hungarian crisis illustrated most vividly his new position in Europe and demonstrated forcibly the Berlin-Rome partnership is centered chiefly in Berlin. Just as the Fuehrer advised Mussolini of the annexation of Austria after it had been achieved, he appeared in the case of Hungary to have opposed Il Duce's ideas and to have swung the Fascist dictator into line.

Hitler has not looked favorably on Hungary's demands, backed by Poland and Italy, for cession of the Czech Province of Ruthenia in order to give Poland and Hungary a common frontier. Such a frontier, for instance, might cut off the eRich's eastward expansion, and certainly wouldd further weaken Czechoslovakia. Now that the Sudeten problem is ended and Prague is firmly in the Nazi orbit, Hitler wants to keep the Czechoslovak republic as strong as possible.

Berlin Slaps at Brazil

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Because the Brazilian government had let it be known it did not wish the German Ambassador, now on leave, to return to Rio de Janeiro, the German government demanded today th eBrazilian government recall its Berlin Ambassador, Dr. Jose Moniz de Aragao.

The reasons for the Brazilian government's unusual measures were not revealed here. It was learned from diplomatic quarters that the charge against Dr. Karl Ritter, the German representative a tRio, that he supported the ill-famed putsch there of the Fascist-minded "green shirts" earlier this year.

Germany's counter-measure of demanding the recall of the Brazilian Ambassador here is termed "a lesson to Brazil" by the Berlin press. Dr. Ritter will be entrusted with a prominent part in the economics department of the foreign office.

ready to make sacrifices for their country. They will withdraw from the frontier only when peace is assured."

Foreign reports that Czechoslovakia had ceased demobilization were said here to misrepresent the real situation. The army, it was emphasized, is ready for any developments but two classes have been demobilized. The forces presently under arms are regarded as sufficient for any emergency likely to arise.

The most serious danger was regarded as arising from the activities of terrorists in Ruthenia and Slovakia, where the Czechs charged Hungarians were fomenting disorders.

Frame New Policy

Prague, Oct. 15 (AP).—Determination of the future foreign policy of dismembered Czechoslovakia awaited today full study of a report by Foreign Minister Frantisek Chvalkovsky on his conference at Munich yesterday with Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

As soon as Chvalkovsky returned, Premier Jan Syrovy called a night session of the cabinet to hear his report of Hitler's attitude regarding the Hungarian negotiations and Czechoslovak-German economic cooperation.

Syrovy, holding firm to a program of co-operation with both major and minor powers, urged divergent political parties to unite to promote development of a new independent state.

Deny Refugee Ban

By the Associated Press.

The Czechoslovakian government through its Washington legation denied yesterday reports from Prague that German refugees from Sudetenland who fled to Czechoslovakia proper to escape Nazi persecution were in a desperate plight because of the Czech government's refusal to allow them to remain.

The government said that only those refugees "who are not threatened with any danger whatsoever are being returned to territory now occupied by Germany."

Farm Workers Mobilized

Budapest, Oct. 15 (AP).—Hungary speeded up defense measures today by ordering mobilization of agricultural workers to ensure an adequate fod supply in any emergency arising from her dispute with Czechoslovakia on minority claims.

The official gazette will publish tomorrow far-reaching decrees supplementing the calling to the colors of five army classes of about 200,000 men, which boosted the number of Hungarians under arms to an estimated 500,000.

Authorities were directed to muster all unemployed farm workers for transfer from farm to farm to ensure continuity of agricultural output. Another decree will hold employers of agricultural workers responsible for payment of adequate sums to safeguard the interests of families of those men called to arms.

Victory Held Near

Shanghai, Oct. 15 (AP).—Spokesmen for Japan's forces of invasion in China expressed belief tonight the twilight hour of Chinese resistance was at hand.

Spokesmen for the army and navy, summing up more than 15 months of warfare, said the Japanese were fastening a straglehold on China in operations which, with the invasion of South China, now have reached the greatest dimensions since the undeclared war started July 7, 1937.

The South China drive, started Wednesday, appeared to be developing fast, promising a Japanese overlordship for 70,000,000 Chinese in southern provinces, while armies, warships and planes hammered closer to Hankow, Generalissimo Chiang's capital in central China.

Moreover, the Japanese army in North China, birthplace of the war, was reported prepared to enlarge operations westward into the untouched provinces of Shensi and Kansu or southward to the Yangtze Valley to assist the Hankow campaign, if necessary.

The northern command reported that its anti-guerrilla campaign, now weeks old, had reduced Communist hit-and-run fighters, organized around the famous Eighth Army, to impotence.

The Yangtze invaders were reported within 80 miles by river of Hankow. The Chinese said today that their shore batteries in that sector, southeast of Hankow, had sunk a Japanese munitions transport.

The Yangtze River fighting was in but one sector of a vast front arching from the Peiping-Hankow Railway north of Hankow, cutting across the great waterway above Kichun and terminating in the vicinity of Yangsin, about 80 miles southeast of the Japanese goal.

Mrs. Gorman died Thursday at Walter Reed Hospital after an illness of several weeks. She was the wife of Joseph P. Gorman, corporal of Cavalry at Fort Myer.

Army Considers Doubling Of Air Force to 4,120 Planes

Defense

the World War, recently called into conference by the President, advocated special taxation to meet the cost of increased armament, which he admitted might be "several billion dollars," in order to avoid piling the burden on future generations. Baruch also warned of a coming struggle between ideologies in South America.

Republics Fear Aggression

From Latin America, reports said apprehension of foreign aggression is spreading, with several republics, notably Brazil, preparing to follow the United States quickly in arming and every country planning to send its strongest possible delegation to the Inter-American Conference at Lima, Peru, in December, feeling that some sort of parallel defensive action may be worked out.

The tentative figure of 4,120 mentioned as the Army's new goal in fighting planes would combine its earlier goal of 1,800 and that of 2,320 set in 1935 by a special board headed by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War. With 1,500 first-line planes in service now and upward of 1,000 on order, the Army expects to realize the Baker objective two years hence.

Speed Is Objective

At the same time, Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps, disclosed that it intended to concentrate more on speed and other factors than size, in future construction.

For the time being no more 32-ton "super-flying fortress" bombers, of whic hthe Army now has a single experimental model, are to be built. The 17-ton "flying fortress," such as made the round-trip flights recently to South Amedica and of which 39 already are in service or building, is to be the largest for some time to come.

Gen. Arnold said the Air Corps needed light, fast craft to serve with troops and heavy, four-engined planes for distant strategic objectives and for reinforcing garrisons in Hawaii, Panama and also Alaska, "if and when we establish bases there."

Designs Ready

It is understood the Army has ready plane designs to put into early effect the President's suggestion regarding mass production of at least some types of planes.

Defense circles believes plans to combat the menace of foreign spies here will take the form of organizing a centralized service of "career" men drawn from both military and naval intelligence services and to be trained at the Federal Bureau of Investigation and postgraduate counter-espionage schools.

Warns Americas

Warning the United States to look to South America, Baruch said:

"It is in the Americas—north and south—where the great future development of the world will take place. The natural course is for the aggressor nations to seek penetration into this hemisphere and, with their usual thoroughness, they have been doing it for some time.

"We have seen them trying to put over their ideologies with their unfair methods of trade. Some may thing it farfetched to talk of danger in this. But we should see the danger quick enough if their system should be enforced upon some country in this hemisphere and the aggressor nations should obtain naval and air bases on the American continents."

From Latin America it was reported that the retreat of democratic countries before Germany's threats against Czechoslovakia and economic inroads already made in South America by Germany, Japan and Italy have alarmed many of the Latin states as to their future safety.

Brazil's Concern Noted

It is recalled here that, in connection with a request, which subsequently lapsed, for the lease of six ageing American destroyers, Brazil—six months before Germany marched into Austria—informed the U. S. o fits "increasing concern with certain tendencies of the world political situation."

That apprehension now is said to have spread to practically every corner of the southern continent, with every country mustering the strongest delegation it can to send to the Pan-American conference which opens at the capital of Peru in December, where the problem of mutual defense is expected to be discussed, although it may not be on the official agenda. Secretary of State Hull is to head the United States delegation.

One suggestion made here is that the destroyers Brazil sought last spring now may be provided in a correlated program to help all the Latin countries prepare to defend themselves. Other countries would be given the same privilege of leasing ageing United States vessels if the Brazilian request were granted.

1938 Enrollment In Red Cross Sets Peacetime Mark

An all-time high peace-time membership enrollment of 5,523,585 persons and widely increased activities in public services was revealed yesterday in the report of the American Red Cross covering the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938.

The report pointed out that 10 of the 48 States have no official health service and that only six States have full-time county or district health departments despite "increased interest" in extension of public health work.

Greater emphasis will be placed upon health instruction by the Red Cross, it was said, as result of recent consolidation of three nursing services into one to be known as the Red Cross Nursing Service, with Miss Mary Beard, formerly with the Rockefeller Foundation, as the director.

Emergency, disaster, epidemic and governmental service registers maintained by the Red Cross show an enrollment of 42,059 nurses, the report stated.

Arabs Cut Off Palestine From World 19 Hrs.

Wires Are Torn Down Restored by British More Troops Landed

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Oct. 15.—Palestine, at grips with an Arab rebellion, regained communication with the outside world today after 19 hours of isolation.

Telephone and telegraph facilities were broken between 7 p. m. last night and 2 p. m. today after bands rebelling against the authorities brought down virtually every wire in the country.

Repair squads worked throughout the day to replace poles, slashed wires and broken insulators.

British Troops Arrive

The Third Battalion of the Coldstream Guards and the First Battalion of Northumberland Fusiliers arrived in Haifa from Egypt and reinforcements were dispatched immediately to centers of disorder.

There were murder, arson and sabotage in various parts of the country.

Mustafa Darwish, an Aram police inspector, was shot and killed by an unidentified assailant outside the Jaffa central police station.

Jerusalem itself was being patrolled by troops, armed with machine guns, and reinforced police.

City Gates Closed

Police combed the old city for suspects after a bomb was thrown at the Damascus gate. All the gates of the old city except the Jaffa gate were closed.

Jews worshipping at the wailing wall were forced to leave.

The old city fell prey to wild rumors due to the sudden closing of Arab, Jewish and Christion stores which followed the intermittent shootings and bombings.

Highway Blown Up

British troop reinforcements brought the total security forces in the Holy Land to approximately 20,000 men.

The Acre-Safad Road, the main military highway into the northern district, was made almost impassable by bands of men who blew up several culverts and tore up several miles of roadway.

Sir Harold Mac Michael, high commissioner for Palestine, was due in Jerusalem today but was delayed by airplane engine trouble.

Program Mapped For D. C. Shut-Ins

Music for patients and shut-ins will be furnished four nights this week by the WPA orchestra and concert trio, a schedule of engagements revealed yesterday.

W. C. A., a dance at the CCC camp at Benning, Md., by the orchestra, and a concert for patients at St. Elizabeths by the trio.

Child Welfare Outlook To Be Address Theme

The national outlook for child welfare will be discussed tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. by Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, head of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, at a dinner meeting of the Monday Evening Club at the Admiral Club, Seventh street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, president of the club, will preside.

B'nai B'rith Head Denounces 'Brutal' Nazi Oppression

By the Associated Press.

Henry Monsky, of Omaha, international president of B'Nai B'Rith, Jewish fraternal organization, denounced German oppression of minority peoples last night and questioned whether democracy could be preserved "if we stand by and give silent acquiescence."

The Jewish leader spoke with Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, in a radio broadcast on the hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Hay, Secretary of State under Presidents McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt.

Monsky declared it would have been difficult for Hay to havve reconciled Germany's interest in the Sudeten minorities "with Germany's brutality and long-continued persecution and oppression of hundreds of thousands of minority peoples in Germany and Austria."

"To observe nuns and clerics of the Catholic Church, and Jews by the thousands languishing in prisons and concentration camps; to observe the devastation of all things sacred to mandkind, would have been to John Hay an inconceivable tragedy," he added.

Monsky spoke from Washington, introducing Studebaker.

Flood of Telegrams

"The statesmen of the world should give heed to the teachings of John Hay, the great peace-maker, who worked and hoped for the time when all nations would settle their differences peacefully in conference, and not in blood on the battlefields of death."

Jewish leaders who have been active in Washington this week reported, meantime, that more than 64,000 telegrams had been sent to the White House and State Department urging the Government to use its influence toward keeping Palestine open to Jewish refugees.

Father of Two, Despondent, Ends His Life

Frank Miller, 38, of 500 Crystal Spring avenue, Seat Pleasant, Md., yesterday was found dead in his home with a shotgun charge in the heart. The weapon was found nearby.

His wife, Agnes, made the discovery after their children, Barbara and Frank, 5 and 7, ran downstairs to tell her their father was "playing with a gun." Mrs. Miller told police her husband was despondent because of ill health and unemployment. He had worked several months ago as a painter at Greenbelt.

Trade Board Unit to Inspect Waterfront

Remon Heads Group Thomas to Give Data Will View Projects

Headed by Chairman John A. Remon, the rivers and harbors committee of the Washington Board of Trade will make a thorough inspection of the District waterfront tomorrow afternoon from the U. S. S. Cormorant.

Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard; Director Arno B. Cammerer, of the National Park Service; Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and other Federal officials will be included in the party which will view improvements now under way.

Purpose of the trip, according to Remon, is to enable committee members to obtain a comprehensive picture of present conditions, survey progress on work being done and focus the attention of Government authorities on needed improvements.

The itinerary will include Gravelly Point, where work is under way on the new municipal airport; Washington Channel waterfront, where dilapidated structures are being replaced by modern piers, yacht basins and other buildings; the Anacostia Park development, and Georgetown Channel.

Technical information will be furnished by Col. R. S. Thomas, District engineer, and his staff of military and civilian experts.

125,000 Sought for New Mission

A city-wide campaign to raise $125,000 for a new wing for the Central Union Mission, 613 C street northwest, will be launched at the organization's 54th anniversary banquet on October 22 at the Mayflower Hotel.

Designated as a memorial to John S. Bennett, who died a short time ago after serving 22 years as mission superintendent, this form of testimonial was agreed upon by the mission's board of directors and ministerial council after Mrs. Bennett, present supervisor, told them:

"I am sure that if Mr. Bennett could speak to us, he would not say to provide a memorial merely as a testimonial to him but to put such money as might be available into additional dormitory room and chapel space for the men now being turned away for lack of these facilities."

Arthur G. Bishop is general chairman of the drive committee, and his aides will include W. W. Everett, John Trimble, W. H. Ramsey and Wilbur La Roe, jr. The 1,000 campaign workers will be divided into military divisions, with Mrs. Bennett heading the women's unit. Ten colonels, each with five captains, will work under her. Each captain will be in charge of 10 workers. Edward H. DeGroot, jr., will lead the men's division.

75 to Compete In Halloween Queen Contest

Seventy-five young women selected for their poise and beauty will meet at the Raleigh Hotel next Tuesday at 4 p. m. for the first judging in the 1938 annual Halloween queen contest.

This is the greatest number of contestants in any celebration, General Chairman Lawrence E. Williams of the Halloween committee, reported yesterday at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel. The celebration is sponsored by the Greater National Capitol committee of the Board of Trade.

From the 75 the first judging will select 11. Later there will be a judging at which the queen is selected. The other ten will be her court of honor.

The queen and her court will ride in the most beautiful float ever designed for the celebration, it was announced. The float is being built by the National Capital Display Club under direction of John L. King, president; Henri Lindemann and Arthur Gray.

Committee members reporting yesterday agreed that prospects are for the biggest and best celebration Washington has ever had.

Judges to select the queen will be Miss Ella Werner, chairman; Miss Mary Mason, vice chairman; John Heiney, Art Brown, Clifford K. Berryman, Gene Elderman, Mrs. Mary Padgett, Harold M. Talburt, A. F. E. Horn and Miss Betty Hynes.

DON'T LEARN ABOUT
Traffic Laws In Traffic Court

Violating a traffic law and pleading ignorance of the law doesn't excuse you. So why wait until you're hailed into court to learn about Washington's traffic laws, problems and regulations? Many individual motorists and large commercial organizations have joined the Washington Post-Jr. Board of Commerce Safety Institute—to have a better understanding of Washington's unique traffic problems . . . and how these problems can be solved through safe-driving habits. Whether you're an experienced driver or one of the 6,200 beginners who will file for driving licenses this month, you are invited to attend the Traffic Safety Institute. This Institute is a non-profit organization; its function is a purely civic one—to help eliminate the automobile death toll in the District of Columbia.

It Costs You Nothing to JOIN THE WASHINGTON POST-JR. BOARD OF COMMERCE TRAFFIC SAFETY INSTITUTE

You will not be questioned or examined about your ability to drive a car—or about the traffic laws in the District. These courses will start in a few weeks; they will be conducted by traffic control experts. There is nothing to buy; no restrictions; no solicitations of any kind; no donations will be asked or accepted. You have all to gain—what you learn may save your life. Attend.

Ex-Ohio Governor Attacks New Deal

Tazewell, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—Myers Cooper, former Governor of Ohio, today accused the New Deal of "crippling business" through "confiscatory taxes," lowering the standard of living "for all the people" and "demoralizing" business and agriculture.

Speaking at a rally for E. L. Gulliford, of Pulaski, Republican seeking the Congressional seat of Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., Cooper accused the Government of "assaulting private enterprise" to such an extent that billions of capital were idle and that coal, this area's principal industry, was a "glut" on the market.

Diseased Eye Removed From 16-Month Boy

Boston, Oct. 15 (AP)—Doctors tonight removed the right eye, afflicted with glioma (a malignant growth), from a 16-month-old child, and planned X-ray treatment in an attempt to save the child's left eye.

The case, physicians at City Hospital said, paralleled Helaine Judith Colan, Chicago child.

Physicians said the right eye of James A. Maloof, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Maloof, was "filled with glioma" and the tumor had spread to a lesser degree to the left eye.

10,400 Italians Sail From Spain

Cadiz, Spain, Oct. 15 (AP).—Four ship loads of Italian troops—10,400 legionnaires who fought with the Spanish insurgents—sailed tonight for Italy convoyed by three Italian cruisers and eight destroyers.

They formed the major part of troop withdrawals ordered by Premier Mussolini. Unofficial estimates are that 12,000 men who have fought in Spain for 18 months will be withdrawn.

The Italian legionnaires were reviewed by Insurgent Gen. Gonzalo Quiepo de Llano before boarding ship. Cadiz was gaily decorated in their honor.

Railway Postoffice Errors Curbed by Smoother Rides

By the Associated Press.

Fewer letters may go astray as a result of a new postal regulation.

It requires that henceforth, "when practicable, one or more cars shall be operated between the engine and the railway postoffice car."

It was drafted, explained Superintendent Stephen A. Cisler of the Railway Mail Service, to insure smoother riding. Sudden jerks, he added, sometimes make clerks sorting letters throw them into the wrong receptacle.

Boulder, Colo., Oct. 15.—Undefeated George Washington University's goal line remained unsullied here today, when the Colonials, superior both offensively and defensively, thrashed Colorado University, 13 to 0, before 8,000 spectators.

The victory was the Colonials' third of the season.

John Tonkavitch, substitute left halfback, raced 61 yards in the final quarter for a touchdown after Cic Sampson, regular left halfback, had tallied in the first period on a 12-yard thrust through right tackle.

Bob Nowaskey, who played a splendid game for George Washington at left end, passed to Tom Grady, sub back, for the extra point, following Tonkavitch's thrilling run.

An official ruling deprived the Colonials of another touchdown almost midway in the fourth quarter. Bill Richardson, substitute halfback, threw a pass to Bob Faris, substitute end, who bobbled the ball in midair, then grabbed it as he sprawled into the end zone.

Score Ruled Out

After the protesting Buff players milled around the goal line, Referee Middleton refused the score on grounds that the pass was not completed in legal territory.

George Washington also failed to cash in on conversion after the first touchdown. Nowaskey's attempted place kick was low.

The stubborn Colonial line prevented the Colorado team from advancing beyond the George Washington 27-yard stripe in the entire game. The Buff's farthest penetration came in the first period when Jack Broady, starting quarterback, took the second Colonial kickoff of the game and scampered to the Colonial 27.

But the invaders' line refused to budge and Colorado lost the ball on downs.

Statistics show George Washington's superiority. The Colonials made 9 first down to the Buffs' 2 and outrushed the Westerners, 219 yards to 78.

The Washington, D. C., eleven's initial score came after the first punt exchange. Starting from the Buff 39-yard line, Urich, in two plays, made a first down on the Buff 27. After losing yardage on an attempted end sweep, Sampson broke through the line and reached the 19.

Urich then plunged to the 12. On the next play, Sampson sliced through right tackle for a touchdown.

Tonkavitch's fourth-period touchdown jaunt was a blocking masterpiece. He found a wide hole at left guard, veered to the left and, without a Buff player touching him, dashed diagonally down the field to score.

A few minutes before the first period ended, Colorado matched its earlier offensive feat by reaching the Colonial 27. After Bob Hill, fullback, recovered a Colonial fumble on Colorado's 47, Dick Kearns, nationally known track athlete, skirted end to the 27 as the quarter ended.

Kearns, as the second period got under way, tossed a fourth-down pass over the goal line. Intended for Harold (Monk) Saunders, Buff end, the heave was far too long.

Most of the second and third periods were played in midfield with Art Unger, Colorado wingback, and Sampson staging a kicking duel. Unger recorded the longest boot of the game—66 yards—early in the third quarter.

George Washington uncorked a dazzling play near the conclusion of the opening half. Ken Batson, 5 foot 6-inch Colonial back, from his 28-yard line broke in the open. Just as he was about to be tackled Batson lateralled to Ed James, substitute center, who continued on to the Buff 47 before he was downed.

Unge rintercepted a pass a moment later to end the threat.

G. W. Foils Foes

George Washington employed quick kicks by Richardson and Colorado unleashed a passing attack in the fourth quarter. The Colonials' strategy kept the Buffs from approaching the George Washington goal line.

Strannigan and Kearns completed 3 out of 9 passes in the final quar-

Baltimore, Oct. 15.—Maryland University's injury-ridden team fought it's way back to football glory in a thrill-packed game with their ancient rival, Western Maryland, here today before a crowd of 7,000. The score was Maryland, 14; Western Maryland, 8.

Still staggering from the 53-to-0 blow dealt it last Saturday by Syracuse, and with many of its regulars still missing from the lineup, the Liners came through in grand style, under the pressure of an 8-point lead, piled up by her opponents in the first part of the game.

Jacola Beats Seabiscuit; Sets Record

Leaves Howard Ace Wall Rides Winner 20,000 See Events $500,000 Is Bet

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 15.—With her ears pricking and her mouth slightly ajar as if she really was enjoying her prominence, Jacola, a 3-year-old filly, broke a track record to hang a two-length defeat on the mighty Seabiscuit in the bargin. With 20,000 customers roaring, the majority pleading with Seabiscuit to make up the precious distance between first and second money, Jacola actually opened ground on her older rival.

In her saddle, riding for all he was worth, was an old opponent of Seabiscuit, Jockey Nick Wall. If it were not for Wall's victories over the son of Hard Tack, Seabiscuit would now be holder of the American record for earnings and perhaps safely installed as a sire.

Just as he held the 3-year-old Stagehand together to take a nose decision over Seabiscuit, in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap last winter and just as he brought Esposa through on the rail to whip Seabiscuit at Pimlico last fall, Wall refused to let Jacola "think" of the word "licked" this afternoon. He kept her out of trouble, nursed her along to reserve her speed and really went to work when the chips were down in the closing quarter.

Breaks Record by Fifth

Jacola clipped one-fifth of a second off the track record set in this same race by Jack High in 1932, and she rewarded her backers with a $15.80 mutuel. A year ago Jacola sprang to fame as a juvenile by winning the Selima Stakes while at last year's Laurel Mile, Seabiscuit was forced to accept a dead heat with Heel Fly in their memorable stretch battle.

The first thought after Seabiscuit's defeat was, "There goes the match race with War Admiral," but after considering the record time, the difference in weight of 24 pounds and the fact that the Howard star lost many lengths by going wide, the consensus of opinion is that Seabiscuit was a hero in defeat and as much of a threat as ever to War Admiral.

It was a great day for Edward Friendly, owner of Jacola, and for Preston Burch, Washington, D. C., trainer.

Friendly collects a check for $7,825 for the victory and Burch has almost a sure thing for next week's Maryland Handicap in the big-hearted filly. It also was a great day for the Maryland State Fair, Inc., which controls the track. The crowd bet close to $500,000.

The crowd installed Seabiscuit a 3 to 5 favorite despite the fact that he was carrying 126 pounds. Trainer Tom Smith ordered spurs to be applied to his charge for the first time, seemingly to help him gain a forward position in the short run to the clubhouse turn. If this was the motive, it failed for Seabiscuit, off

Georgetown Defeats R.-M. Jackets, 33-0

Hoyas Keep 1938 Record Clean Crowd of 2,000 Sees Slow Game D. C. Eleven Superior in All Departments

By Jack Munhall.

A careless, lackadaisical Georgetown eleven maintained its undefeated, once-scored-on record yesterday at Griffith Stadium by crushing Randolph-Macon, its third straight Virginia opponent, 33-0, in an uninteresting game.

The Hoyas, facing a decidedly inferior foe for the third consecutive Saturday, were far from impressive despite the lopsided score. ad storm signals were being hoisted on the Hilltop campus today as thoughts turned to next week's important game with Manhattan.

Georgetown, as some 2,000 persons who watched the debacle will attest, had no heart for its unwelcome task and, except for several breaks, would have bee satisfied with 3 touchdowns instead of 6. The Hoyas only sporadically flashed a consistent attack. Their blocking was far below standard; their pass defense, at best, inadequate.

Opponents Weak

But still Jack Hagerty's gang was far too powerful for the Yellow Jackets who had nothing to threaten with save one dangerous passer, Alex Waleski, and one troublesome tackle, Al Wajewski. The Vir-ginans playing with out Al Paliscak, their best back, offered feeble resistance, but Georgetown after the first half, in which it rolled up 26 of its 33 points was content to coast along, content in the knowledge that Randolph-Macon could not possibly catch up.

The statistics show Georgetown's superiority in every department, although they do not indicate how weak was its pass defense. Georgetown amassed 18 first downs, against Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 15.—The Army's stout-hearted Cadets rallied three times today after being mowed down by terrific aerial blasting to gain their seventh consecutive victory over a Harvard team, 20 to 17, before 45,000 football fans, largest the stadium has housed this season.

With five minutes remaining, Charles (Huey) Long prevented a third Harvard touchdown by intercepting a pass on his 1-yard line and running it back to his 20. There he launched an aerial that Woody Wilson caught in midfield and carried it to within 12 inches of Harvard's last line, where he was overhauled by Torbie MacDonald. Long then crashed inside his left tackle and Army banners were raised on high for the first time in the 55 minutes of heart-stirring action.

Score Tied Twice

Twice before, the Cadets, outplayed by a wide margin in the first half, pulled into deadlocks but Harvard appeared to have them beaten, after the injured Clarence (Chief) Boston broke a 14-14 tie by placekicking a 20-yard field goal, just a minute before Long and Wilson combined to dash Crimson hopes with devastating suddenness.

The two other Army touchdowns were turned in by Quarterback Art Frontczak on 27 and 80-yard runs, the second coming on the kickoff after Harvard had pulled ahead, for the second time, in the third quarter.

Harvard, with Fullback Ben Smith ploughing in magnificent fashion, and its tricky passing attack clicking to perfection, reeled off six first downs before it finally scored, on an 8-yard pass that Don Daughters received from Frank Foley in the Cadets' end zone, giving Harvard a 7-0 lead at the half.

Harvard March Halted

The slippery Frontczak scored on the sixth play of the second half, after he had returned the kickoff to Army's 30. Harvard set up its second touchdow, when MacDonald rolled a punt to Army's 3-yard line, and Wilson returned it to his 45. Bobby James, in for Foley at the time, wiped out 35 yards—a pass to Capt. Bobby Green—and then tossed to MacDonald in the Army end zone.

Harvard opened the fourth period by marching 45 yards to Army's 5, where Bill Kelleher, Cadet backfield replacement, prevented a score by throwing Sub Fullback Joe Gardella for a 10-yard loss, a Harvard

Yale Bowl, New Haven, Conn., Oct. 15.—A badly underrated and vastly improved Yale Bulldog sank its sharp fangs deep in the hide of Navy's hitherto undefeated eleven this afternoon, ramming over a touchdown and kicking a field goal in the last period of play to score a thrilling 9¹7 victory.

It was a Jekyll-Hyde Bulldog that 55,000 fans saw in the warm sunshine of an Indian summer day; a nice puppy in the first half that rolled over and did tricks for the visitors, and in the second, a snarling, vicious watchdog, jealously guarding Yale's reputation of never having lost to the Middies.

Wood's Placement Short

The sailors fought to the bitter, galling end, rising up in the last few moments of the game with a spirited charge to Yale's 9-yard line, but to no avail. It was a Yale day. A well-meant but poorly executed placement off Emmett Wood's foot, booted from the 15-yard mark, spun giddily up into the clear October air, and fell miserably short of the mark and Navy's hopes of winning sank with the kick.

Navy lacked a scoring punch today. The drive it evidenced in its early season games was missing, and its running attack failed to click consistently. "Bullet" Wood, the Tars' hard-hitting fullback—labeled highly inflammable by Yale scouts—was judiciously bottled up. Wood didn't get away on any long runs today; Yale's alert secondary saw to that.

Middies Wilt

The Middies started well, but when Yale rallied in the second half they seemed to wilt, and never did regain their strength. Navy was strictly on the defensive throughout the second half, while the previously punchless and docile Bulldog marched up and down the field. And it was no fault of Navy's that Yale's margin of victory was a mere 2 points, for twice white-helmeted Eli runners missed perfect passes with the goal line lying before them.

Gil Humphrey, a slim, willowy back, was Yale's margin of victory today, for it was his strong right arm and unerring toe that brought his mates from behind and shoved them out in front in that last, pulsating period.

It was his short, speedy toss into the waiting arms of Bill Snavely that gave Yale its touchdown, and his era-over-end placement from the 15-yard mark a few minutes later that provided the winning points.

Humphrey was on the dispatching end of a new pass combination that came into being this afternoon and promises to give Yale's future opponents many anxious moments. On the receiving end was Art Dyeis, who reached up between Navy backs time and again to haul in Humphrey's hard, accurate pegs. This pair accounted for most of the 120 yards Yale's aerial attack netted in the second half, and threatened Navy's goal line constantly.

Navy Scores Early

Navy's own passing attack was nullified by the Elis' ever-watchful defense. Cooke completed one good one, however, a long throw to Ulmont Whitehead, who took the ball over his shoulder on the 2-yard line and stepped over into pay dirt. That play followed one of the first breaks of the game, and Navy was quick to cash in on the opportunity.

Navy took the ball on Yale's 40-yard line, where Miller's punt rolled out of bounds, and that was tantamount to handing the Middies their score. Yale did not expect the bombshell that Lem Cooke heaved into their startled midst—a 50-yard pass of machine-like precision. Whitehead plucked it out of midair in full stride and in two steps was over the goal-line.

Wood place-kicked the point.

Once before Navy had reached Yale's 28-yard line through the medium of Cooke's 16-yard pass to Gillette, and Wood's 21-yard dash off right tackle. But Yale halted that drive with a bruising exhibition of excellent defensive line play such as Navy hadn't seen before this season. It could not, however, stop that pass.

Eli Line Holds

Yale did not have so much as a first down when Navy forged ahead, and fared little better throughout the remainder of the half. It was all Navy, and only a bristling, snarling Eli line that dug in for one of those vanishing goal-line stands.

Redskins Are Underdogs in Grid Battle Today With Lions

Tennessee Crushes Alabama's Title Hopes, Winning 13 to 0

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Oct. 15.—In Detroit's newspapers the paid advertisements would have you know that the Detroit Lions are "America's most colorful football team." That line is just a bit confusing.

Because for the past two seasons it has been generally accepted that America's most colorful football team is the Washington Redskins.

POVICH.

Whether that be true or not is beside the poin, The point is that the Redskins were the first to peceive color and sensationalism as an asset.

ther clubs in the league were either too busy with their 6-2-2-1 pas defenses or simply refused to be anoyed by the Redskins' claims. Anyway, the field was clear for General Manager Jack Espey, of he Redskins, a reformed sports wrier with a fetish for publicity stuns.

He organized a Redskin band of 60 pieces in the Redskin motif, wih Indian uniforms complete with headdress for the French horn tooter as well as the drummer. And then, not content with the heavy marching stuff, he hired a Redskin swing orchestra as a sop to the jjitter bugs.

From George Washington University, where he had directed guady publicity campaigns, Espey brought to the Redskins his cannon-firing stunt after every score. Redskin games began to ake on a circus atmosphere and the fans liked it. Anyway, attendance records skyrocketed.

Made Baugh 'National'

Early last season, Espey discovered Sammy Baugh. He had been known as a fine football player, but Espey discovered him as a character. He publicized Baugh to the extent that a few weeks ago when Slingin' Sammy suffered an injured shoulder it was something akin to a national disaster.

To Espey's complete satisfaction and surprise—the Redskins last year justified his terrific build-up by winning the national title in a sensational game against the Chicago Bears on ice-crusted Wrigley Field. The Redskins became important in the sports scheme.

Apparently the success of the Redskins gave another club—the Detroit Lions—ideas. They hired a press agent, and they chose well. They chose Bud Shaver, clever Detroit sports writer, conferred on him the title of vice president and put him t owork.

Since Shaver entered the lists against Espey it has been something of a pretty battle for the headlines. Like Espey, Shaver has a flair for showmanship. And he has more money to spend, for the Detroit Club is backed by the wealth of Dick Richards, radio station operator.

Shaver Uses Billboards

Shaver hasn't spared expense, either, in plumping for the Lions as a colorful outfit. He has not been content with the routine press notices of professional football. He has inserted paid advertisements of the Lions' home games and he has plastered the city with gaudy billboard ads extolling the Lions as an attraction.

This year the Lions, with Shaver in the driver's seat, have blossomed forth, like the Redskins, with a band. To the instrument makers Shaver went with a plea to manufacture some sort of a horn that would simulate a lion's roar. He got it, at a cost of $100.

But no mere band would satisfy Shaver. His band must be outstanding. It must have, among other things, the largest drum in all captivity. Shaver looked up their records, discovered that the largest bass drum ever manufactured was an affair 70 inches in diameter. Nothing less than 74 inches would suffice Shaver who dispatched couriers on a three-day hunt to hide plants for a steer skin that would cover a 74-inch drum.

The drum was built to specifications by a Chicago concern, but one difficulty was experienced. They couldn't get it out of the building on account of its size. At extra cost it was dismantled and brought to Detroit for assembly. Mr. Shaver's record-size drum cost the Lions $1,000, but Mr. Shaver was happy.

Lions Theme Song

A few days after Espey brought forth a Redskin varsity song entitled "Hail to the Redskins," Shaver blossomed with a Lions' theme song, an adaptation of Hi-Ho, Hi-Ho. For each home game, Shaver rewrites the lyrics, this week, for example, the chorus reads: "Hi-Ho, Hi-Ho, to Vic-tory We'll Go; We'll Fight and Claw, and Beat that Baugh; Hi-Ho, Hi-Ho."

At a late hour tonight, Shaver was still on the hunt for a steam caliope to wheel into Briggs Stadium as an added attraction for tomorrow's game.

It seems that Shaver is one down to Espey ever since Espey conceived the bright idea of painting the 50-yard strip yellow and red to designate midfield. It's Shaver's move again.

F. & M. Frosh Defeat Dragons

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 15.—The freshman team of Franklin and Marshall College outclassed Massanutten Military Academy's Purple Dragons, gaining yardage on line bucks and an aerial attack to win, 7 to 0, here this afternoon. Center Must Be Offensive Lineman And Defensive Fullback Today

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh,
Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.

Time was when any big beefy fellow who could snap a ball and then stay put was quite acceptable as a center. But the coaches are much more exacting these days. With the advent of roving centers several years ago, center play was revolutionized and became increasingly important.

SAMMY BAUGH.

Today a football team's center must be a combination of offensive lineman and defensive fullback, and a key man on pass defense. Weight helps, but it is not an absolutely necessity. Speed is more essential and ranginess is an asset in his pass defense duties.

But above all, the center must have football sense. He is of little value to a team unless he has an ability to diagnose plays. Coaches freely admit that the two men charged with the most responsibility on the defense are the defensive fullback and the roving center. Unless those two players are able to diagnose the trend and development of enemy plays, or anticipate them, a football team may be in foul shape.

Coaches give a center permission to rove back of the line on the defense only because he has faith in the center's ability to anticipate plays and get to the proper spot as soon as possible. And that means that the center uses his own judgment in pulling back for a possible pass. The defensive center, in the course of any game, will knock down or intercept more passes than any other player on the team, if he is a good center.

As a result of the added duties of the center in modern football, coaches no longer look toward guards or tackles when casting about for a center candidate. The custom was to convert the big, beefy guards and tackles into centers, but that is not done frequently these days. Coaches have learned that the easiest men to convert into centers are ends, or backs, who have natural speed and in most cases height.

On the offense the center's job does not stop with the snapping of the ball. He is expected to work on the opposing guard and he must do that with a handicap. Because of his snapping duties, the offensive center is always a split-second late with his charge and, bowed down as he is, he is not in a position to watch any shift of the defense.

As a result, he takes much punishment from opposing linemen who get the jump on him.

It is very well to talk of a roving center of great speed, keen football sense and tackling ability, but the center is of utterly no use to his team unless he is a capable snapper back. That is his first function and anything less than 100 per cent performance will raise havoc with his team's attack.

"All centers use the spiral pass, these days, of course. The end-over-end snap-back went out with the shin guard and the flying wedge. The spiral is easier for the back to take, easier to throw and gets to its destination with more speed, which is important.

The center who can snap back a light, fluffy spiral is fortunate. Some centers, like some baseball players, toss a so-called "heavy" ball which is difficult to catch. It is natural with them, however, and a center either has the ability to throw a light ball or he does not have it. It is difficult to learn.

The center can be a powerful help to a team's attack if he learns to know how and where his backs want the ball. Backs differ in that respect, some preferring to take the center's pass high, others low, and at different speeds. The center should make it a point to learn from the back what his preferences are.

But in the average cases there are well-defined rules for the snap-back from center. Most kickers, for example, I mean right-footed kickers, rock on their left foot before taking the center's pass. They like it directed about waist high, at their right hip, inasmuch as that is their kicking side.

If the back is passing, however, the chances are that he wants the ball snapped a bit higher, just above the waist, as time is saved that way.

And on the off-tackle, or other line play, most backs prefer that the ball be low, in the region of the knees, because the back who takes the ball is usually running from a crouch.

The center also should learn how to "lead" the back with his snap. Only in the case of a punt or a pass does the back take the snap-back in a stationary position. He is usually leaning in a certain direction at the snap signal and expects the ball to be snapped approximately a yard to his right or left as the case may be. That is called "leading the back" and the center who doesn't give the back the advantage of that momentum with his snap-back is ruining the precision of the play.

placement attempt for the extra point was blocked. The lead, temporarily gained by the Eagles, brought a keen spirit to the whole team, and for the remainder of the stanza they outplayed the Philadelphians, but during the last three periods it was all Swarthmore.

Midway in the second quarter, Jakle filled the air with passes, and one of the heaves found Don Weltmer on the other end. The pass, good for 29 yards came to rest on A. U.'s 1-yard line. At this stage of the game, Art Hartman, a hefty plunging fullback, was called in to service. Art proceeded to plow through the center of the line to even the score. Jakle's placement was blocked, but Tony DeGutis, a teammate, scooped up the ball and raced across the pay stripe to give his team a one point lead.

The third period found both teams waiting for the breaks, and it was the Garnets good fortune to get one in the last period that led to the last tally of the day. After recovering an Eagle fumble in midfield and working the ball down to the 26 yard marker, Jakle again flipped a perfect toss into the waiting arms of Weltmer, who was standing in the end zone. Jakle's placement kick was good.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 15.—Rising in all their might, the orange-shirted volunteers of Tennessee shattered the championship hopes of a heralded Alabama tide today with a stunning and soundly-administered 13 to 0 victory.

In toppling the crimson tide from the undefeated ranks Tennessee handed the Tuscaloosa gridders one of its worst defeats in recent years.

A jammed stadium that held close to 26,000 spectators saw George Cafego, the West Virginia flash, Len Coffman and other scrapping backs battle to a co-oparatively east triumph behind a line that opened big gaps in the husky Alabama forward wall and consistently outcharged the opponents.

Only four times did the Crimson Tide penetrate Tennessee territory, the chief threat being checked at the Volunteers' 22-yard line in the closing minutes after Alabama had resorted to a passing attack when the Tennessee line would not yield from end to end.

Tennessee drove 68 yards on straight running plays to score after 12 minutes of play in the opening period and counted again in the third on a drive of 51 yards, featured by a spectacular 33-yard dash by Cafego.

The Alabama team appeared extremely sluggish in dropping its first Southwestern Conference game since 1935.

With Cafego, Coffman and Sophomore Bob Foxx alternating on picking up yardage through the tackles and around the ends, Tennessee counted its opening score on a determined drive. Coffman vaulted across from the 1-foot line for the touchdown. Capt. Bowden Wyatt miss the extra point.

Dartmouth Routs Brown

Rallies to Win, 34-13 Brown Scores First 2d Half Tells Story

By the United Press.

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 15.—After a bad first period, Dartmouth's rugged eleven settled down today and scored a 34-13 victory over Brown to continue mrching along in the ranks of the undefeated.

Brown, which also entered the game with a clean slate, ran off a touchdown in the opening session and looked like it might score an upset. But Dartmouth's players, with a crowd of 15,000 cheering them on, rolled out in front in the second period and won going away.

It was Brown all the way in the first period as the Bruins completely surprised Dartmouth from the time Hall took the opening kickoff and returned it 45 yds. to the Dartmouth 45. Soon Atwell passed to Nash for a touchdown.

In the second half it was a different story. Coach Earl Blaik started his second team, and the first team evidently saw enough from the bench so that when they entered the game they ripped Brown to shreds.

D. C. Dog Takes Cup Performance Perfect Dr. Curry Entry 2d

By Bill Ackerman.

One of the most interesting field trials the National Capital Field Trial Club has ever run came to a close yesterday afternoon with an extra series run so that the judges could place second and third dogs out of an eleven brace run.

ACKERMAN.

Henry Davis, well known for work with the American Wildlife Institute, but better to dog owners and handlers for his judging of the Open National Field Trials, filled in for Tom Hunt, of Baltimore, to judge, with Dr. W. H. Hopkins, of Annapolis, the Shooting Dog Stake.

Performance of every one of the 22 dogs was outstanding to some degree. Each one found birds in spite of the fact the weather was unfavorable to them, particuarly those running from noon to mid-afternoon. That they could, with "hot" noses was the wonder of the gallery, which enjoyed far more the balmy spring-like day, than the blustery weather that usually is on tap for this fall running.

Reece Connor's entry, Connors Dash, from Washington, was placed first because of performance that was perfect from start to gnish, and was given the trophy that goes with this stake, which has never been won the necessary three times for permanent possession.

Homewood Constant Reminder, owned by the well-known local vet Dr. J. R. Curry, but handled by Elmer E. Huffer, president of the club, was placed second on a performance that was but little short of that of the winning entry.

O. L. Blackwell, running Franks Hawks Lady for Albert Frank, genial member of the Metropolitan Police Force placed third.

The All Age Stakes, two braces of which were carried over from yesterday, was also one of the best run stakes dog lovers in this area have seen for many a day.

Florendale Spider, the beautiful setter owned and handled by Contee Adams, of Hamilton, Va., with a fast going and perfect performance all the way had little trouble in getting the nod from the judges to take the Ford E. Young trophy that goes with the winning of this stake.

An extra series was required to place Bens Ikey and Huffs Ex, dogs, that in condition are in the running anytime. L. L. Stevens, from Quantico, Va., placed his Bens Ikey second, so that the fine pointer Huffs Ex, belonging to Elmer E. Huffer must take third.

The fine hospitality of Walter Johnson, who during all his years in the big league always found a few spare hours to run his dogs, was the highlight of the meet.

Whitney Plans To Bring Colors Back to Turf

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, who last year decided to retire from racing and sell off his stable, today announced plans to bring his colors back to the turf next spring.

Whitney announced that he had engaged L. Snyder as trainer and that he would race a few two year olds next year. His decision, he said, was made "in the hope of developing a stallion to replace Equipoise and a few mares for my breeding establishment in Kentucky."

When he decided to retire last fall he said it was because of "lack of time" to devote to racing and that he might return to the turf. He sold his entire string of racers, including such stars as The Chief and Dauber, but retained his brood stock and his stud farm.

Equipoise, his most famous color bearer and second only to Sun Beau as a money winner in racing history, died at the Whitney farm near Lexington, Ky., last August. As a racer, "Ekky" won $338,610.

Detroit, Oct. 15.—In the strange role of underdogs, Washington's world champion Redskins tomorrow will troop into Briggs Stadium, where other items among the scenery will be a football field, 50,000 fans and the Detroit Lions.

And in Detroit tonight the betting is 6 to 5 that the Redskins will take a licking.

But in the quietude of their suburban retreat at Dearmorn tonight, the Redskins were told by Head Coach Ray Flaherty that they can win this football game and that he expects them to do it.

Their hopes of winning the Eastern championship already jeopardized by two defeats this season, the Redskins were a serious, dead-earnest bunch today as they went through their final workout at Briggs Field. Flaherty was pleased by the mental attitude of his champions.

"If they go on the field in the same spirit, they'll beat the Lions," said Flaherty.

3 Redksin Stars Out

Flaherty expressed his confidence despite the absence of such figures as Turk Edwards and Max Krause from the Redskins' line-up and the probability that End Sharlie Malone may be able to play only a very few minutes.

On the brighter side of the picture was the availability of Sammy Baugh for full-game duty after a siege of inpuries. The forward passing champion of the league has virtually recovered from his shoulder injury and he will be turned loose against the Lions shortly after the opening whistle. Baugh will not be a member of Flaherty's starting line-up. The Redskins will toss three rookie backs against the Lions when the opening whistle toots. Bill Hartman, Andy Farkas and Jay Turner, playing their first year of pro football, will be in the backfield with Ed Justice.

On the achievements of Baugh and Farkas will ride the Redskin's hopes of maintaing their Eastern division lead today. Both of these names will merit the respect of Detroit fans, who know Baugh as the league's No. 1 passer and Farkas as the youth who for three years was a sensation at the University of Detroit with his zig-zagging dashes down field.

Wilkin Replaces Edwards

Into the gap left in the Redskin line by the injury of Edwards, Flaherty will send Wee Willie Wilkin, crashing 240-pound tackle who is beginning to bulk large as a tremendous asset to the Redskins.

Also a first-time starter for the Redskins will be Bob McChesney, handsome end. McChesney is Flaherty's choice to replace Malone, a choice that was made because of his defensive skill. Bob Masterson is rated a superior pass catcher, but the Redskins' coach is willing to sacrifice offensive strength in this case for a better guarantee that the Lions' attack will be checked.

The Lions, like the Redskins, will not be at their peak for the game. Coach Duch Clark and Ernie Caddel, the No. 1 and No. 2 backs of the Lions are both nursing injuries and are not expected to play.

But the Lions will present a powerhouse backfield, nevertheless. Ace Gutowsky and Jim McDonald will team with Leroy Cardwell and Vernon Huffman, the blocking backs, and Bill Shepherd will be held in reserve.

Aces of All-Stars

McDonald, late of Ohio State, was a potent figure for the College All-Stars in their victory over the Redskins in August. Huffman, from Indiana, was a star of the all-star game of 1937. Aside from his blocking duties, he will do the bulk of the Lions' passing.

With Edwards out of the line-up and Ernie Pinckert still nursing a back injury, the Redskins are not expected to withhold their passing attack for long. Anticipating a free scoring game, Flaherty is expected to order Baugh and Hartman to take to the air without delay.

Hampden Sydney Trims Emory and Henry

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 15.(AP)—An alert Hampden Sydney gridiron squad took advantage of the breaks today to push across two touchdowns and turn back the stubborn mory and Henry College Wasps 14 to 0 before a crowd of 5,000.

After playing on about even terms through the first period and most of the second, Emory and Henry reached the Tigers' 5-yard stripe on a double reverse with Mann carrying the ball on a 25-yard sprint. The Tiger forward was braced and an attempted field goal went wide.

Gopher Ace Suffers Serious Ankle Sprain

Minneapolis, Oct. 15. (AP)—Wilbur Moore, Minnesota halfback, suffered a serious sprain of his left ankle when he made the winning touchdown against Michigan today.

Coach Bernie Bierman, after studying X-rays and hearing doctor's reports, announced Moore hd not fractured his ankle, but the injury was serious. There was no indication how long he might be out of service.

Moore was removed from the student health service at the university to his home after the X-rays were made.

Inter-American Horse Show Will Open Thursday at Meadowbrook

Great Performers Entered in Classic

Army Teams of Chile, Mexico, U.S. to Compete
Many Celebrated Riders Will Appear
Maj. Cole Heads American Team

The Inter-American, the greatest outdoor horse show held in America, opens at the Meadowbrook showgrounds Thursday for a four-day run. The star performers of this, the third annual classic of the horse world, include the outstanding jumping horses of two continents and the supporting cast is made up of the best riders of three nations. It is more than a horse show—rather it is a horse Olympiad.

The army horse show teams of Chili, Mexico and the United States are the headliners in the four days of international competition over a variety of the toughest courses that could be devised to test the stamina and skill of the best timber-toppers and riders of the Western Hemisphere. This is a return engagement for our Southern neighbors for they were the main attraction at the inauguration of the Inter-American Horse Shows in 1936. That year the U. S. Army team won over the Chileans, the Mexican team, always in the running, taking third. Last year the Belgian Army's crack horse show team came three thousand miles to provide the stiffest kind of competition for our Army team, winning by a margin of half a point. The decision was reached only when the last U. S. horse around the course in the last class of the day dragged a hoof at water jump.

Governor's Cup Reward

Rivalling the international team jumping in point of interest is the State team jumping for the coveted Governor's cup, a handsome trophy annually competed for by teams selected from the top stables of Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. The meeting of these teams always results in the spirited competition and high quality of performance expected from representatives of the greatest horse country in the United State. A New York State team composed of blue ribbon winners of many Eastern shows has been entered by Donald Sutherland III of Long Island. Classes for civilian jumpers and hunters which make up a large part of the diversified program also attract entries from the best stables in the country.

Back of the military ceremonies and formalities that are a colorful background of this show, and aside from the punctilious courtesies that are so evident when Army officers meet, there is an intense rivalry between the military teams that ask and give no quarter. Thoroughly conditioned, trained to the minute, high strung, often temperamental, the horses entered in the military classes seem to relize the honor of their respective nations depends upon the quality of their performance. To ride such high-spirited horses over the stiff courses at Meadowbrook requires horsemanship of the highest degree, iron nerves and an expert knowledge of one of the most dangerous and thrilling sports.

Yanez Great Rider

Measuring up to what it takes in both horses and riders is the Chilean team, captained by Major Eduardo Yanez, one of the most expert riders, having had a world of experience in high class competition. He and his brother officers, Capt. Castro, Capt. Izurieta and Lieut. Vigil, have shown the best horses of Chile at the greatest shows on two continents and have taken many blue ribbons at Madison Square Garden.

According to experts who have watched the workouts of the team, Deseada, a bay mare with but a year in competition, may be the big surprise entry of the South American team. She is a six-year-old, 16 hands high, a natural jumper who likes to jump, and is ridden by Capt. Izurieta. Toqui and the speedy Chilena electrified Washington in 1936. Both are experienced jumpers and are generally ridden by Major Yanez. The other horses on the Chilean team, all high class competitors, are Esmeralda, Coco Colo, Gringo, Andino and Poroto. They will be ridden by Capt. Castro, Capt. Izurieta and Lieut. Vigil.

The Mexican army team is a much stronger aggregation than that of two years ago. Capt. Villareal who heads the team has an enviable international reputation and Lieuts. Zapet, Palafox, Chagoya and Montoya are all noted horsemen from below the Rio Grande. The No. 1 entry of the Mexican team is the bay mare Donaji, a jumper of the first rank that should stand at the top in individual competition. She, with Azteca, Tolteca and Muchacho competed in Washington two years ago and all proved to be spectacular performers. Tarasco, Monterrey, Charro and Jarocho are all sterling international performers that have greatly strengthened the team.

Maj. Cole Heads Team

Maj. John T. Cole, who heads the U. S. team, brings from Fort Riley 12 of the best horses that have ever represented the Army in international competition. Heading the string is the magnificent old campaigner, Dakota. This great brown gelding, standing 17 hands high, is not only a jumping champion but a comedian of the first order. It is worth a long day's travel to see this great international competitor romping about a difficult course, switching his tail as though he was winding himself up for the jumps ahead. Teammates of Dakota are Don, Masquerader, King High, Fralax, Flitter, Dinger, Podhorski and Billet Doux. This last entrant is a newcomer to Washington and from advices received from the officers at Fort Riley he will be one of the surprises of the show. The riders of the United States team are Capt. Matieson, Capt. Drake, Lieut Sanford, Lieut. Wing and Lieut. Wright, all experienced international riders who have represented the country in many contests.

The class of horses and the reputation of the riders that comprise the State teams assure the most stirring competition for the Governor's cup.

Miss Cotter Is Captain

The District of Columbia team is a quartet of outstanding ability all owned by prominent Washington horsewomen. The captain of the team is Miss Margaret Cotter, owner of Rocksie, a big bay gelding who always gives a fien performance when piloted by his owner. He is capable of sensational jumping. Recently Rocksie won a touch-and-out at six feet in treacherous going during a driving rain storm. Lady Jack, Mrs. Gardner Hallman's spectacular brown mare is the second nominee. She is an opponent hard to beat in any company. Modern Melody, Mrs. Nancy McDowell's chestnut mare, is an honest horse, always giving her best and a sure, capable performer. The fourth member of the team is Hi Ho, a tantalizing in-and-outer until asquired by her present owner, Lisbeth J. Steig. Under Miss Steig's expert handling Hi Ho has become a reliable jumper that can only be beaten by the best. It is a strong team and well balanced.

Maryland puts her best in the field against her rivals for the State team championship. First in reputation and ability is the celebrated Lacquer Lary, Fenton Fadeley jrs.'s remarkable chestnut mare, one of the country's great open jumpers. The second selection, Hunger Marcher, owned by Charles Carrico, is nearly the equal of Lacquer Lady. Another Carrico horse on the team is that beautiful chestnut gelding, Recall, champion of many shows. Fred J. Hughes jrs.'s eccentric stallion, Black Caddy, is the fourth member of the team.

Two Virginia Teams

Virginia is entering two teams. Team No. 1 comes from the stable of Morris S. Clark. On this team are two of the best open jumpers of the Old Dominion or any other territory, Whoopee and Gay Cockade. Hobo and Royal York are the third and fourth selections. They are all of a color, brown.

The second Virginia team is entered by Fritz Kleeman. Leading off is Kismet, a sterling old jumper in spite of his 32 years. Probably he is the oldest horse in active competition in the world. The veteran has as teammates a group of youngsters, the oldest claiming 8 years—King Rock, Gone With the Wind and Royal Beldin. It is a strong team.

Representing the Empire State is a team from the stables of Donald Sutherland 3d, a prominent New York horseman. He has entered his Night Life, Rocket, High Tide and Swing Easy, four excellent open jumpers that have won many blues in Eastern horse shows.

The setting for the show, Meadowbrook on the East-West highway, is one of the most beautiful horse show grounds in America. Situated in the Maryland part of Rock Creek Park, it is practically surrounded by great trees now brilliant in autumn foliage. The seating capacity has been enlarged and the 300 by 400 feet ring has been groomed as carefully as the horses that will compete in it. The jumps all are new and range in height from 4 feet to 5½ feet, representing every type of difficult and dangerous obstacle.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 15.—Scoring in the first and fourth periods, Princeton won its first major victory of the season by blanking Penn, 13 to 0, today.

Penn had won both its starts this year and came into today's game heavily favored after a 21-0 victory over Yale last week, but the Tiger eleven, mixing perfect team play on the offense with a stellar defensive exhibition throttled Penn's few threats with ease.

The Tigers jumped into the lead on the wings of a perfectly executed pass, Allerdice to Jackson, midway through the first period. The climax thrill was left, deservedly enough, to Capt. Tom Mountain, who broke off 57 yards worth of left tackle on the last play of the game.

Mountain was taken out of the game at this point to allow Stan Pearson to drop-kick the extra point.

Jackson's touchdown came after the speedy quarterback took Allerdice's heave over his shoulder and, running at full speed, easily outsprinted Jim Coulter and Frank Reagan to angle across the goal just inside the side line. His attempted place-kick was wide.

The Penn single wing-back formations, to right and left, were not clicking effectively as they had against Yale and the Quakers were forced to take to the air in order to gain. The farthest they could penetrate into Tiger territory, however, was the 33-yard line, in the second period.

Princeton outrushed and outpassed Penn, but had one less first down, 8 to Penn's 9.

Red Raiders Defeat Lions by 12-0 Count; Luckman Bottled Up

Lube Stars for Colgate
30,000 Fans Watch Contest
Columbia's First Loss of Season

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—Colgate's Red Raiders threw up an air-tight defense against Sid Luckman's passes when it was necessary today and in so doing handed the Columbia Lions their first setback of the season, 12 to 0, before 30,000 fans at Baker Field.

Not only was Luckman throttled in the pinches, but one of his aerials was intercepted and run back by Howard Herman 50 yards for Colgate's second touchdown in the final period. Out of the 16 passes attempted by the All-America candidate, only five were completed for a total gain of 48 yards.

The Colgate defenders gave the publicized Lion ace Luckman about his worst afternoon of the past three seasons.

Colgate on the other hand, brought out three ball-luggers, Joe Hoague, Harold Lube and Howard Herman, who took turns tearing chunks out of the Columbia line. They ripped down the field 50 yards to Columbia's 10-yard line the first time they got hold of the ball, and in the second period they made successive drives of 40 and 52 yards, Hoague plunging across from the one-yard line to climax the second. David's two attempts to dropkick the extra point were blocked.

Colgate came to town declaring that in Lube it had a better back than Luckman, and off Lube's performance today they at least have an argument.

The victory was the sixth straight scored by Colgate over Columbia in as many meetings in the last 17 years and wrecked what had looked like being one of Columbia's greatest seasons.

In the final period when their supporters were calling upon them for another of their spectacular finishes, the Lions started three drives toward the goal. The first collapsed when Herman napped Luckman's wobbly pass and raced to a touchdown. The next two blew up at midfield on fumbles.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 15.—Nothing Wisconsin could do was good enough today to stop the victory march of Pittsburgh, which defeated the Badgers 26 to 6 and extended its wins to four this season.

Playing on a dry, firm field before a crowd held to 26,200 by threat of rain, Pitt ran, passed and intercepted its way to touchdowns in the last three quarters, picking up seven points in the second, six in the third and 13 in the fourth.

Wisconsin's six points were scored in the last 10 seconds of the game by second string reserves against Pitt's third team. One of a barrage of passes, with halfback John Tennant throwing to Gordon Gile, an end, put the Badgers in the scoring column. Fullback Karl Schuelke missed the kick for extra point.

Marshall Goldberg, fast stepping fullback, started the Pitt drive for points midway in the second quarter after Coach John Sutherland had held his veterans on the bench for rest and instructions. Halfback Richard Cassiano sparked the drive with a 22-yard run to the one-yard stripe, from whert Goldberg easily stepped through a big hole in the line. William Daddio, end, kicked the extra point.

In the second half, Cassiano, Goldberg and Harold Stebbins, right half, made big gains on running plays. Wisconsin backs neglected to kick several times when backed to their own goal line and Stephen Etro, guard, finally capitalized on the practice by intercepting one of Halfback Roy Bellin's passes in the end zone for the second touchdown. Daddio missed the kick.

Several wobbly kicks by the Pitt quarterback, John Chickerneo, kept the Panthers in a hole until the fourth period. Then Cassiano intercepted Bellin's pass and set the stage for a 71-yard touchdown run by Chickerneo, who champered along the sidelines behind an impregnable group of blockers. A holding penalty spoiled Daddio's kick and the pass play for the point was incomplete.

Minneapolis, Oct. 15 (AP).—Minnesota's mighty men of the gridiron, their powerhouse dynamited today by a scrappy Michigan wrecking crew, unveiled a puzzling passing attack to come from behind with six minutes to play and win, 7 to 6.

Some 55,000 homecoming fans saw the Big Ten champions retain the historic little brown jug in a game in which Coach Fritz Crisler's huskies gained the edge in everything but the final score.

It was just a case of the Golden Gophers doing what the Michigan teams of old did—finish second in the statistics but pay off on the point needed to grab victory.

In the last quarter, with Michigan holding a 6-to-0 edge after a great 90-yard march up the field, Coach Bernie Bierman's squad called on the injured Harold Van Every, triple threat halfback, to search for success through the air.

Every's Pass Clicks

Van Every, out of action since the opener against Washington, shot a perfect strike from his own 48-yard line to Bill Johnson, substitute right end, who caught the ball on the Michigan 18 and plunged to the 14 with three Michigan players taking a ride.

Two plunges took the ball to the 10. Then Van Every stepped back and pitched another strike to Halfback Wilbur Moore. He grabbed it on the Michigan 3 and, with a trio of Wolverines hanging on, hit the goal at the extreme corner of the field. Quarterback George Faust placekicked the extra point, something that Dan Smick, Michigan end, had failed to do in the first few minutes of the last quarter.

Moore, smothered in a cluster of maize and blue behind the Michigan goal line on the winning touchdown, was carried from the field with a badly hurt leg.

Minnesota Outplayed

The last-minute Minnesota victory broke the hearts of Michigan's cagey outfit. It outgained the Gophers from scrimmage almost two to one, completed seven out of 16 passes and flashed a terrific ground gaining attack behind a hard-hitting line.

Without those two last period passes, the big ten champions got little success in an offensive that had wrecked Washington, Nebraska and Purdue.

The only time Minnesota power threatened was after a poor Michigan punt in the second quarter. Moore, Buhler and Franck blasted to the 19 where the Wolverines held and Horace Bell missed a place kick.

Michigan got started then and seconds before the half ended Danny Smick, an end, vainly tried a place kick from the Minnesota 35.

Using a plain, old-fashined buck, with Harmon and Kromer feeding Purucker the ball, Michigan stashed straight up the field, ripping Minnesota's heretofore impenetrable defense into bits.

none too well, seemed to lack footing in the first 50 yards.

When he reached the turn, he began banking around on the outside of horses. In the meanwhile, Finance, Aneroid and Accolade fought for the pace-setting honors, three abreast. Wall had Jacola fifth at this stage and she, too, was losing some ground, but she was out of trouble.

With Aneroid hemmed in between them, Finance and Accolade drove along in front on the backstretch. Suddenly the red and white blouse of Jockey Woolf flashed forward on the outside. He moved up to fifth place at the turn as Wall put Jacola to a drive.

Open Ground On Rival

On the swing to the stretch, Accolade, Finance and then Aneroid began to tire. This was Wall's signal. He bounded Jacola to the front and the stands fairly rattled as Seabiscuit shot around horses to move into serious contention. Woolf swung him in toward the rail from Jacola and pumped on him for all he was worth. In midstretch it appeared that Jacola might toss in the sponge. Seabiscuit narrowed the margin between them but Wall was to be reckoned with. He worked with the filly and she seemed to co-operate. She darted along and opened ground on her mighty rival.

The original overnight field was sliced from 18 down to 12 when it became certain Seabiscuit was a sure starter. Only two 3-year-olds were in the field to face Starter Milton and they finished in front and directly in back of the West Coast star.

Challedon, starting for only the fourth time, ran a game race to take the Maryland Futurity. The colt was trained for the race by Lou Schaefer, who specialized in 2-year-olds in his jockey days and has since proved his mettle as a trainer. The son of Challenger II, who stands at the Branncastle Farm near Frederick, Md., did not have any the best of the early running. He was hemmed in, and Jockey Seabo wisely did not try to better his position.

Closed With Rush

Mystery Miss, owned by C. F. Hoekley, had the early speed of the field of 12. She stepped to the front and, although Balkan War, Of Course and Licketysplit dogged her, she turned back these rivals. War Moon, a fast worker, then appeared on the outside to challenge Mystery Miss. She felt the whip, but weakened as War Moon went to the top just inside the eighth pole. Then came Challedon's closing rush. He fairly bounded out from under Seabo as they went to the wire on the inside of War Moon.

Challedon was clocked for the 6 furlongs in 1:13 2-5, well over the track and race records. The victory brought his owner $4,720.

Sun Egret, in the colors of A. C. Compton, turned in time of 1:11 4-5 for 6 furlongs and romped away with the Bowling Brook Handicap, better known as the sixth race. Lavengro was second and Benjam was third behind the $7.20 shot.

Invermark, owned by A. Rosasco, won the seventh race, coming from behind to lead Black Grouse and Wild Count to the wire. He paid a $7.30 mutuel and was well handled by Jockey George Seabo, who had previously ridden the Maryland Futurity winner, Challedon.

Johnstown Wins Remsen

Best Time in Stake Lovely Night Second Beau James Shows

By the Associated Press.

Jamaica Racetrack, N. Y., Oct. 15. Scoring his second straight triumph since proving the big disappointment of the Belmont Futurity, William Woodward's Johnstown today captured the twenty-sixth Remsen Handicap, which featured the final program of Long Island racing for 1938. Fresh from victory in Laurel's Richard Johnson stakes, the bay son of Jamestown carried 126 pounds and won by a half dozen lengths in 1:11, fastest 6 furlongs of the meeting.

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's two-time winner, Lovely Night, was second by five lengths over Warren Wright's Beau James. Book Plate was fourth, followed by Hants, which broke badly from outside the stalls, and Paddy, a Wheatley Stable representa that was coupled with the winner.

Johnstown's backers got odds of 4 to 5 at closing time. The Belair colt, in chalking up his sixth success out of 11 starts, earned $7,100 to make his total winnings amount to $22,085.

Taking advantage of their last chance to see the horses perform on the island, th ebiggest crowd of the meeting was on hand, estimated at close to 15,000.

Johnstown's time was the best ever made in the stake. Master Charlie, winner in 1924 under 130 pounds, made 1:11 3-5.

Jimmy Stout, as usual had the mount on Johnstown. The fast-stepping beauty of Belair took instant command, but Beau James rushed right after him and the pair were lapped going to the first turn. However, Johnstown bounded into a clear lead rounding the bend, opened up eight lengths advantage and coasted the remainder of the journey. Lovely Night picked up Beau James straightening for home and moved away with ease. Hants, which many had figured as the one most likely to offer some competition for the winner, went into the air at the break and was virtually eliminated.

CHALLEDON, steadied along when lacking racing room in early stages, came between horses to better position entering stretch, was taken to inside for final bid and soon drew away. WAR MOON, in thick of contention, disposed of MYSTERY MISS to take command between calls in stretch, but could not resist winner while under pressure. MYSTERY MISS was hustled to front, set strong pace, but weakened when placed to whip. BALKAN WAR, off well, moved up menacingly approaching stretch, but tired suddenly. FAIR ROCK closed with rush from slow beginning. LICKETY SPLIT stopped. GENERAL MOWLEE raced on inside throughout.

JACOLA, forward factor from start and kept on outside of leaders, rallied when put to drive to take command leaving backstretch, drew out and held away to end under driving tactics. SEABISCUIT, off slowly, circled horses gradually to reach contention on outside and was held safe while under strong handling and had no excuse except losing ground. THE CHIEF swung wide for racing room entering stretch and could not threaten seriously. ANEROID was forced to race between FINANCE and ACCOLADE while forcing pace, and weakened in closing stages. GREY GOLD made up some ground. ACCOLADE began to tire after a half. MR. CANRON closed full of run. NEDAYR weakened in closing stages. MOWER was through after a half. FINANCE stopped badly after setting pace and saving ground. MASKED GENERAL had early speed.

Richmond U. Is Beaten By V.M.I.

Scores 13-6 Victory Jones Runs 92 Yards Keydets Tally Early 12,000 See Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

City Stadium, Richmond, Va. Oct. 15.—V. M. I.'s hard charging Keydets handed the heretofore undefeated Universtiy of Richmond Spiders a 13-6 defeat here today before 12,000 spectators.

Playing amid a colorful surrounding, the Flying Squadron's superior blocking told the story of the Spider's undoing.

Authur Jones, Richmond's brilliant halfback, proveded the biggest thrill of the game and the Spiders' lone touchdown when he raced 92 yards on a punt return.

The Spiders went into the game undefeated and a victory would have more than likely given them the undisputed State title.

The Keydets pushed across a score before the game was four minutes old and were never headed.

After the kickoff, the Spiders were forced to kick. Then after an exchange of punts, the V. M. I. eleven took the ball on the 45 and it was from that point that the Keydets started their scoring drive.

Passes from Son Shelby, V. M. I.'s stellar back, put the ball on Richmond's 43. Paul Shu, Keydet all-State halfback, then raced around end on a reverse from Bud Kovar for the score on a beautiful 43-yard dash. Shu missed the extra point from placement.

V. M. I.'s second touchdown came late in the second period when Randy Huyett, a substitute end, recovered Lawless' fumble on Shu's punt on the 15-yard line. The Keydets were penalized 5 yards for offside but made it up on the next play, when Budy Kovar broke off tackle for 8.

Trzeciak Scores

Paul Shu, again figured in V. M. I's scoring, when he flipped a pass to Capt. Andy Trzeciak for 10 yards and the latter stepped over for the touchdown.

Shu's kick from placement added the extra point and gave V. M. I. a 13 point lead.

Late in the third, Jones, who had been the spearhead of Richmond's attack, took a kick from Trzeciak on his own 8-yard and raced 92 yards for a touchdown. It was the longest run made in the Richmond stadium. The brilliant halfback failed to convert the extra point from placement.

It was the final whistle which kept V. M. I. from scoring the third touchdown as the game ended with the ball on the Spiders' 1-foot lline.

It was hard and furious blocking that proved the difference between the two teams. The Keydets' line opened holes in Spiders' forward wall large enough for a truck to pass through. Their down-field blocking paved the way for the first touchdown of the game.

V. M. I. gained 240 yards on the ground and 68 in the air. The Spiders were able to account for only 35 yards on the ground and 34 in the air.

V. M. I. gained 12 first downs and the Spiders got only 2.

Spectators were given an added treat in the half time as Richmond's freshmen cavorted on the field in varied costumes in the traditional "rat" parade.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Jim (Sweet) Lalanne, North Carolina's highly publicized backfield star, didn't do his well-known stuff here today, but his understudy, a former Fordham Prep School star named George Stirnweiss did and the Southerners made it three in a row over New York University, 7 to 0, before a gathering of 15,000 in the Yankee Stadium.

The result was something of an upset for Coach Mal Stevens' big and powerful Violets were favorites to hang up their first triumph since the two schools began their intersectional gridiron warfare three years ago.

Stirnweiss attended to that. Not only did he fling the pass that paved the way for the lone and winning touchdown, but he kept the Violets in the hole most of the afternoon with his kicking. His boots averaged 49 yards—good kicking in any league.

Harris Moriarity, of Birmingham, La., who umpired the game, was stricken with a heart attack midway in the final perfiiod and died before he could be taken from the field. Following a play in midfield, Moriarity collapsed. The game was halted and physicians summoned from the "stands." They announced later the official had died instantly.

The Tarheels took a kick on New York U.'s 37-yard line and pushed the ball across in three plays. Jack Kraynick, the big fullback, lugged it down to the 20. Here Stirnweiss cut loose an overhead good for 20 yards into the waiting arms of George Radman who was on the job behind the goal posts. Steve Maronic, one of the Tarheel co-captains, came through with the extra point.

New York U., which seemed big and powerful, but slow and listless, didn't really hit its stride until far into the fourth quarter, too late to do much good. Then the Violets gave a demonstration of the power North Carolina had been led to expect.

Noxnany Saddler Adjudged Best-of-Show in Old Dominion Event

Competition Is Close, Exciting

Big Crowd Sees Show
Stylish Peg a Winner
Also Moneybox
And Merrymker

The big show is over, the tents have disappeared, the grounds cleared and the curtain has been drawn on the Old Dominion Kennel Club's annual dog show. For nearly two days Alexandria has listened to the barks, howls and whines of almost 600 dogs as they sang in unison and sometimes in a slight resemblance of harmony at the show grounds.

The barkers and howlers represented over 50 different breeds, some of which were familiar, but many others looked like anything but dogs. Some resembled lambs, some monkeys and one breed looked for all the world like a giant powder puff with a tail.

All shapes and sizes were there, too, ranging from the long and lanky wolf hounds to the underslung dachschiunds, and from the Chihuahuas, at 1½ puonds to the St. Bernards and Danes at nearly 200.

The grounds were crowded throughout the day, leavnig no doubt as to the interest of this section in dogs, and the crowd was undoubtedly composed of more contrasting individuals than the dogs. Some of the spectators arrived at the show in limousines, some in second-hand jalopies, others by bus, and many walked. The society matron and the day laborer rubbed elbows and forgot their different stations in their mutual interest in man's best friend.

The judging started promptly at 10 o'clock and continued throughout the day in the grand elimination among the blue-bloods of dogdom. At last the best dog of each breed had been selected and the large crowd gathered to watch the group judging, awaiting the decisions which would select those dogs to be considered for the top ranking honor of best dog of the show.

At 5:30 the stage was set, all rings were emptied and the crowd was hushed, even the dogs on the benches seemed to be quieter as the winners of the groups entered the ring to compete for the supreme honor. The quality of these dogs was surprising, the best this country has to offer, handled by the most prominent professional handlers in the business.

After careful consideration, the nod was given Chacpion Nornay Saddler a veteran of the show ring. This little Smooth Fox Terrier has been selected as the best dog in thirty-four shows and is without doubt the top ranking show dog in the United States today.

Navy Plebes Win, 18-0

Outclass Bordentown Werner Scores 2 Simms Stars in Line

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Oct. 15.—The Navy Plebes unleashed a gang of powerhouse backs who ran over a game but outclassed Bordentown (N. J.) Military Institute team for three touchdowns and an 18-0 win today.

The Plebes set sail after an exchaneg of punts in the first quarter and had their first touchdown in four plays from 55 yards out. Leonard passed 35 yards to Lee. Butch Werner hit the line for 5. Leonard galloped 20 yards to the 1-foot line. Then Werner went over.

Bordentown made its big bid in the second period. Navy rammed the ball to the 1-foot line again with a series of passes, but Werner fumbled going over. Byrne recovered for B. M. I. Leonard fumbled the Bordentown punt out and Herr recovered on the 30. Sparked by the break, the visitors punched to the Navy 15 before losing the ball on downs. Second quarter play was largely in Navy territory.

Navy marched steadily down the field through the tiring Cadets in the third, Werner finally skirting right end for 25 yards and the second Navy touchdown. Capt. W. E. Sims, a Georgia-Tech transfer to the Naval Academy, made the final Navy score when he intercepted a last-ditch Bordentown heave on his own 30 and scampered 70 yards for the tally. Sims, a center, played in the backfield all afternoon.

Episcopal Loses to Hill

Marrons Bow 26-13 Pass Attack Fails Visitors Powerful

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 15.—Episcopal High School's vaunted aerial attack couldn't match the sheer power of the Hill School eleven here this afternon and the Pottstown, Pa., gridmen scored twice in the final period to turn back the Maroons, 26 to 12. Twenty-five hundred fans saw the visitors score their first victory since the intersectional rivalry was inaugurated three years ago, tying up the series at one victory, one loss and one tie apiece.

The Maroons made a game of it throughout the first half, and at the intermission they held a one-touchdown lead.

Hill drew first blood, marching 80 yards to score early in the second period.

Both of Episcopal's scores followed in short order. Their first touchdown was scored on a 70-yard sustained march, featured by the passing of Stump Caighill, with Stanley Woodward finally going over from the 4-yard line after Red Bradfield had taken a pass for a 20-yard gain.

An intercepted pass by Billy Suhling paved the way for the second Maroon score, giving the locals possession of the ball on the visitors' 42-yard line.

Hill lost litle time in tying the score, marching to its second touchdown from the kickoff.

Late in the third quarter Episcopal repulsed a Hill advance on its own 5-yard line, but Bradfield got off a poor kick to his own 22, and the visitors were again in scoring position. After a line play failed to gain, Drumheller went wide around end for his third touchdown of the game. He then added the extra point on a pass from Rehor.

The Pennsylvanians marched to their final score after Heneage intercepted a Maroon pass on the Episcopal 42-yard line, and a series of power plays carried to the 6-yard line where Whalen broke off tackle for the touchdown. A kick for the extra point was blocked.

Spartans Beat W. Va.

Win 1st Meeting, 26-0 Stray Passes Help Winners' Line Strong

By the Associated Press.

Morgantown, W. Va., Oct. 15.—A smart Michigan State eleven scored on a break early in the first quarter and rolled up the count on intercepted passes today to down West Virgina University, 26 to 0, in the first meeting of the teams.

Dave Diehl, the Spartans' great left end, recovered a blocked punt for the first marker; Halfback John Pingel scored the second on a 1-yard thrust in the third period after a pass carried the ball to scoring position. Diehl and Pearce, substitute back, added the other touchdowns on intercepted passes. Pearce racing 66 yards to score.

The Mountaineers tried desperately to score in fourth period with passes after a strong Michigan State line smothered their running plays. They threatened seriously only once at the outset when Harry Clark, halfback, scampered with the opening kickoff from his own goal line to the Michigan State 37.

Dogs . . .

By George Berner

Well, the show's over and members of the Old Dominion Kennel Club can lie back on the oars and unlax knowing that they put on a very successful event for this year. The grounds were crowded from early morning until dusk when the little smoothe for terrior was judged the best dog in the show.

BERNER.

The quality of the dogs exhibited must rate as the highest ever shown here. How many champions and near champions were there we don't know but every handler of any importance was in attendance and those fellows don't handle mutts.

The competition was very keen in nearly every class of every breed and while the judges were just about as busy as men can be there was absolutely no "sqwaks" which is something lmost unheard of at an affair of this kind.

Raymond Scaggs, who is chairman of the Bench Show Committee, ably assisted by Mrs. Scaggs and Chief Steward, Fred Sherry thought of just about everything before hand and a smooth running show was the result. Everybody worked to make the show a success except the President. That worthy gentlemen arrived in town just in time to get to the show. He did manage to support his badge of office for the day though, and that's something.

The members of the club are to be congratulated. Their show was certainly a success, the lunch counter, managed by lday members, was mobbed and the home-made cakes moved out as though they had sprouted legs. Fielding Huesman left the grounds with his pockets bulging and it is hoped that financially the club broke even.

Local dogs were very much in evidence and some of the highly-touted visitors were very much surprised to be nosed out for the money by our home growns." John Kimes, of Wirehaven Kennels, took Winner's dog and best of winners and then rubbed it in a little by taking the Best Parti-Color Cocker award. Mrs. Edith Groves, of Jonedith Kennels, had no pity at all for the little weiner dogs that had come hundreds of miles and walked away with practically every Dachshund award that amounted to anything.

Dr. Ernest M. Butz, of 711 E. Capital St., showing for the first time, took Winner's Dog and Winner's Bitch and for the rest of the afternoon his feet barely touched the tips of the grass. That boy was walking on air, and well he might. If he gets himself in condition to pull teeth by Monday morning he should get another medal.

That sad faced bloodhound of Mrs. Ceceli Coulon's walked in crying and although he won everything there was to win, came out the same way. Son George left the grounds with a handful of ribbons.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Scott took their little Boston bitch into a ring with some of the best Bostons there are anywhere and came out with the winner's bitch ribbon and goodness knows what else. Mrs. Birney, of Aspin Hill Kennels, as usual, took her share of the awards, but that was to be expected from that old campaigner.

Mrs. Carter Hall held up her end very nicely and added some nice wins to the score of the local dogs, among them Winner's Bitch. Miss Helen E. Samuel, of Arlington, wasn't foolin' at all. Dog and Best of DatsilanoRg oE She won winner's bitch, winner's dog and best of breed with her Pekingese, and that's all there is.

She came, she saw and her Pekes conquered, and how.

There are undoubtedly many more local folks wh owon, but we can't remember all of them. Suffice to say that the local entries received more than their share of the cash and trophy awards.

The Dog Mart

Don't forget the Dog Mart at Fredericksburg, Va., on Thursday. This is not a dog show, is nothing like a dog show and is completely different from anything we have ever seen. We have harped about it now for about three weeks but we will gamble that a lot of you will miss it nevertheless and if you do you are really missing something.

The judging, selling, swapping, lieing and horse trading go on all day and they tell us that this year there is to be a dance or something in the evening. Here's a dog show (of a sort) a dog mart, a dog auction, and a dance in a city which has more places of interest than any of its size anywhere and it's free and only 50 miles away. Don't pass this up.

QUERIES

Q. Is it necessary that a dog be registered with the American Kennel Club in order to enter him in a dog show?

A. No, it is not.

Q. Why is it that some dogs have such a dozzy odor while others, even of the same litter, living together and eating the same food, do not?

A. A clogging up of some very small glands is often responsible for a strong dozzy odor. They are very easily drained and we are sending complete instructions by mail.

Q. Every time I give my dog a bath he scratches for hours continually. I have tried various dog soaps and am at present using——. Can you account for this?

A. It is entirely possible that your dog's skin is too tender for those medicinal soaps, use Ivory soap or any good Castile soap and rinse thoroughly.

Q. What do you consider the best dog food?

A. We printed in this column a few weeks ago the name of the food we have fed for years. Naturally, we think it is the best dog food or we wouldn't feed it, but any of the DRY dog foods, supplemented by meat, make a very good diet. By DRY dog foods we mean those that come in meal form and need only be mixed with enough water to make them crumbly.

Q. Is it true that eczema is caused by improper feeding?

A. The exact cause of eczema is unknown. It is though that improper feeding may be a contributing factor, but this has not been proven. A change of diet, however, will usually help to clear it up.

Q. My dog seems to have very little natural oil in his hair. When I wash him, his hair is terribly dry for weeks. Can you suggest anything?

A. Give him an olive oil rub the night before you are to bathe him. Moisten the finger tips in the oil and rub it on his skin, exactly the same way as they do in the beauty parlors to the fair ladies' scalps. Remember that he is all nails and act accordingly.

The writer will answer all questions about dogs, either in this column or, if a stamp is inclosed, personally by mail. Address him in care of The Washington Post.

Tee to Green

NICE GOING DEPARTMENT

AL TREDER, MANOR PROFESSIONAL—For the second time this year two of your original proteges, Helen Dettweiler and Marion Brown, have reached the finals of a major local tournament. Two youngsters that you started in competitive golf have more or less dominated the local scene, Bobby Brownell, National Amateur Qualifying leader and Billy Dettweiler, District Amateur medalist and semi-finalist.

WHITTLESEY.

The Dettweiler gained National prominence for their feats at early ages while under your tutelage, as did Maury Nee.

Your hard work on Marion Brown's game has been culminated with a string of victories over the last few years. Preceding last year's Washington Post Match Play affair, Miss Brown had not scored an important triumph. Each day that week Miss Brown played in the morning and took a lesson in the afternoon. She defeated Mrs. Meckley and won the tournament, followed by winning two club championships, and was medalist and finalist in the Middle Atlantic.

This year she captured the District Amateur, and then added the Middle Atlantic championship, in addition to the Manor and Idnian Spring titles again. She looms as one of the finest women golfers ever developed here, if she stays under your wing, taking a tip from the help the last year. Your trip to Rodgers Forge to watch her in the finals was something that very few pros would have done. Nice Going, Al.

COLUMBIA COUNTRY CLUB GOLF COMMITTEE—For the fine way you conduct your annual Club Championship, outstanding affair among the club tournaments. The week-long event creates the old time spirit around a club that is missing from so many tournaments.

"Reds" Bannigan's first tee and last green quips enliven the event. The Saturday night dinner party, the fine prizes, the daily "19th hole" and just the tournament atmosphere make it popular. The gallery that followed the Tommy Webb-Harvey Johnson match in the quarter-finals was one of the most enthusiatic of any tourney this year, and the cheer that went up on the 19th green when Webb won, would compared favorably with the student bodies of the schools the players represented at one time, Georgetown and Maryland. Nice Going Marty West & Co.

MARYLAND STATE GOLF ASSOCIATION—Your season that officially ends today with the teom match finals between Indian Spring and Congressional was a successful one. Despite the fact that most of the weekly tournaments had small fields, your Maryland Open, Amateur, Womens, Team matches, Intercollegiate championship, Junior Open, two-ball championship, pro-amateurs, and Washington vs. Baltimore team match were well attended, well publicized and successful.

The regime of John Tweedy, Edgar Lucas and Emmet Gary, the latter doing another fine job, lifted the association several notches above previous years and made it a much more popular group with the tournament players and fans than its adjoining bodies, the District and Middle Atlantic, mainly due to the fact that it has a larger schedule. Nice going, men.

THEODORE S. GRAPE, PRESIDENT OF THE CONGRESSIONAL CLUB, and WIFFY COX, CONGRESSIONAL PROFESSIONAL—The Cingressional Club, scene of the Maryland Open, District Amateur and National Amateur qualifications, has handled the tournaments in a manner that will have the golf asosciations on their list for next year. The club tournaments, including the club championships, also have been commendtable affairs.

President Grape and Professional Cox have made a virtually unbeatable duo for any club. The new golf shop, one of the finest; the application for the Women's National Tournament, that is still pending; the club activities and co-operation with the press have all been well handled. Nice going, Cox and Grape, Congressional's batteries.

SLAMMIN' SAMMY SNEAD, Boy, you've done all right.

Johnny Burke completed one of the lowest 54-hole totals ever scored in the District yesterday at Capital to win the top berth in Georgetown University golf team qualifications, but at the same time the team was weakened by the loss of Capt. Billy Dettweiler, who failed to play in the qualifying rounds and was dropped from further consideration.

Team coach Tony Sylvester, Capital professional, has arranged the 54 hole trials, and the low six were to be named to the team and the next two alternates. Dettweiler did not play in the 36-hole round Friday, as he was in Baltimore, where his sister, Helen, was playing in the Middle Atlantic finals.

Georgetown athletic officials decided in a meeting yesterday morning that there would be no exceptions to the rule, and Dettweiler, who had been elected to the captaincy after two years of competition,

Argyle Golfers Score, 1, 2, 3, 4

An Argyle Country Club foursome, bookbinders from the Government Printing Office, made local golfing history yesterday when they performed the nameour own odds feat of scoring a 1-2-3-4 on the same hole, and in succession. The scene was the 170-yard eighth, a par 3.

James Fay, a member of the club, stepped on the tee first, and for the first time since playing the hole he dared use a two-iron. The ball hit in front of the pin and dropped in the cup for a hole-in-one.

After the usual whoops and hollers that follow an ace, O. W. Herrman stepped and hooked his tee shot to the left of the green. James Walker trapped his, and Patrick Fogarty was just off the edge of the green.

Herrman proceeded to knock the chip shot in the cup for a deuce. Walker knocked his shot fuor feet from the pin and holed the putt for a par 3, and Fogarty exploded from the trap on the green and holed out for a 4 to complete the seldom-performed feat.

The incident has appeared in the various "Dou You Believe It" cartoons, and has happened only a few times, and rarely ever has it been done with the players holing out in succession.

The foursome reached the clubhouse near the ninth hole and Fay rushed in to Manager John Smith and quietly said, "I dropped my tee shot on eight." Meanwhile, Herrman, Walker and Fogarty were putting in their bit, "I made a 2," and down the line.

They were so excited they rushed home to tell the families, and wouldn't even wait for a photographer. However, they'll be back at Argyle today to tell you all about it.

Durham, N. C., Oct. 15.—Duke's powerhouse struck quickly at the first of the second half and defeated Georgia Tech, 6-0, here today in an inter-conference game witnessed by a crowd of 28,000.

The touchdown, a 7-yard right tackle slice by Wesley McAfee, ended an advance covering 85 yards, which was started by Bob O'Mara's spectacular 60-yard return of the kickoff opening the last half.

All the scoring power then was packed in the next five plays. McAfee in two tries got 4 yards at tackle, then tried a pass which failed. On the fourth down he shot the ball like a bullet to Jim Marlon for 14 yards to Georgia Tech's 7-yard stripe. McAfee then ran far to his right, cut back through a wide hole and crossed the goal line virtually untouched.

Coach Wallace Wade rushed Anthony Ruffa, a tackle and point-kicking specialist, into the game to try for the extra point from placement, but the ball sailed wide.

Duke rolled out nine first downs, compared with three for Tech. The Devils gained 125 yards from scrimmage, compared with 81 for the invaders. But the Yellow Jackets had the edge in gains by passes, 76 yards to 63, when they completed 6 of 20 efforts, as compared with 5 completions in 14 tries by Duke.

Lain Owls' Star

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Oct. 15.—Tulane University's up-and-coming Green Wave not only stole Rice's air thunder, but counted on the ground as well in a magnificent 26-to-17 victory over the Owls today.

The contest was spine-tingling throughout and showed Tulane possessed a backfield, sparked by Warren Brunner, with a versatile attack.

Today, too, Rice's 226-pound Ernie Lain rose to the height and, almost single-handed, nearly gained victory on his unerring passes and runs before 24,000 fans.

Umpire Falls Dead in N. Y. U. Game

Harris Moriarty Stricken
Heart Attack Fatal
Carolina Wins, 7-0

New York, Oct. 15.—Harris Moriarty, one of the leading footfall officials in the South, died of a heart attack during the fourth period of the North Carolina-New York University football game at the Yankee Stadium today, in which he officiated as umpire.

Moriarty, a graduate of Mount St. Mary's College, was vice president of the First National Bank of Birmingham, Ala.

He collapsed durng a play late in the fourth period and the game was held up several minutes until physicians arrived. They said the official died immediately, although first reports said he was conscious until carried on a stretcher to the dressing room under the grandstand.

Moriarty had been about to pick up the ball near the side lines during the final period of the game, when he was stricken, and fell to the ground.

Attendants carried him under the grandstand and a physician was summoned. Moriarty died before the physician could make his examination.

North Carolina won the game, 7-0.

Adobe Leads Winners at Trinity Show

Upperville, Va., Oct. 15.—A large number of fine horses, ideal weather and excellent performances in a grove shaded with red and gold oak trees marked the fourth annual Trinity Church horse show held today on the Upperville show grounds.

Adobe, Mrs. G. P. Greenhalgh's Springsbury Farm entry, ridden by "Billy" Jacobs Weatherall, and Harry Worcester Smith's Sobersides, with the veteran rider in the saddle, won the largest number of blue ribbons. Paul Mellon's horses also placed well. Peach Brothers' Mr. Carter won first place in the half-bred division of the selling class and Miss Dorothy Neyhart's Valonda placed first in the thoroughbred division of this class.

Miss Anne Duvall Peach, afixen-haired daughter of Dick Peach, rode beautifully in the children's pony class to win the first place.

A gorgeous pageant, depicting historical, humorous and miscellaneous vehicles, was called into the ring at the end of the horse show and entertained the large crowd for more than an hour. First place in the historical division was awarded to a splendid portrayal of King Richard and his band, with James M. Plaskett taking King Richard's place and Col. J. C. Butler portraying Robin Hood. Society people of this section made up the band.

Ross Lipscomb's goat wagon won first in the humorous division and Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Cushman's Mexican wagon, with a group of society leaders in costume, captured the miscellaneous division. A Gymkana tournament, with B. E. B. Hall capturing the first place, closed the program.

Following the noon hour there was a hound show, in which the Middleburg Hunt hounds captured most of the ribbons, with Orange County a close second. Judges today were: Pageant, Mrs. Henry T. Oxnard and Mrs. John B. Anderson; horses, Dick Kirkpatrick and Howard Fair, and dogs, Jack Carpenter.

Webb Wins Columbia Title Over McCarthy

Winner hree Over Par for Match
Sixteenth Hole Halved in Deuces
Prizes Presented to 21 Winners

The upset theme was continued through the final round of the Columbia Country Club championship as Tommy Webb, jr., playing in his first tournament in three years, defeated the slightly favored Martin F. McCarthy by a 3 and 2 margin.

A superior putting touch was responsible for the former Maryland U. grid ace's win, as they matched stroke for stroke from tee to green. Webb had 24 putts for the round and McCarthy 32, the winner one-putting twice, while McCarthy three-putted the same greens.

Webb ended the Miller B. Stevinson-Harvey Johnson reign, as between the two they divided the title the past seven years, the former five times and Johnson in '35 and '37.

Out in 38, Webb was 1 up at the turn, won the twelfth and thirteenth to go 3 up as McCarthy's putting touch failed, and then ended the battle on the short sixteenth by dropping a 12-foot birdie putt after the loser's 30-foot putt for a deuce dropped and apparently gave him life.

Prizes for the medalists, winners, runner-up and consolation in each of the seven flights were presented at the annual championship dinner following the play.

Stage Beauty Wins Feature

Victory Is Surprise
Pays Backers $55.60
Rough Time Is 2d

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 15.—Mrs. P. A. Shaw's Stage Beauty, the lone 3-year-old and the only filly in the field of nine, ran some of the smartest sprinters in the East dizzy today to score a surprising victory in the $5,000-added Worcester Handicap at Narragansett Park.

A nose back of the daughter of Strolling Player at the finish of the 6-furlong test was Yancey Christmas' Rough Time, a heavy favorite after his good performance in the Interborough Handicap at Jamaica Wednesday. Then came another invader from New York, the Sanford Stud Farms' Sunport, half a length back of the public choice but only a neck before Paul Andolino's Gay Balko.

This was by far the most important victory in the short life of Stage Beauty, netting her Boston owner $4,390 and paying her backers at the mutuel windows $55.60, $14.10 and $7.10. Rough Time paid $4.10 and $3.20 and Sunport $5.20.

Ramsey and Coppage's Mucho Gusto was first out of the gate but Rough Time quickly overtook him and went out in front by a slight margin. Gay Balko was right up with him all the way with Stage Beauty, carrying only 106 pounds, running third.

Gay Balko forged ahead coming out of the far turn but neither he nor Rough Time could withstand the closing bid of Stage Beauty, which finished the course in 1:10 4-5.

Kentucky U. Loses Upset To Generals

W. & L. Wins, 8-0
Craft Crosses Goal
Intercepts Pass
Ky. Rally Fails

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 15.—An underrated Washington and Lee team outplayed the favored University of Kentucky today before 10,000 sweltering fans to score an 8-to-0 victory.

Both Washington and Lee and Kentucky pushed inside the 20-yard line in the first period, but neither team had sufficient punch to drive over a score. A short pass—Justice to Wadlington—put the Generals in a scoring position first, but the attack bogged down short of the goal. Ishmael ran 32 yards to the General's 15, but Kentucky lost the ball on a fumble as the period ended.

A Kentucky pass was intercepted by Ray Craft, Washington and Lee fullback, who raced 35 yards to Kentucky's 31. A series of line plunges and passes by Craft carried the Generals to the 1-yard line. Bishop bucked over for a touchdown. Dobbins' try for the extra point was blocked by Zoeller.

Drives by both Washington and Lee and Kentucky were checked by interception of forward passes as the third period went scoreless. Wadlington grabbed a Kentucky pass stopping the Wildcats and Zoeller, of Kentucky, snatched two W. & L. aerials. The Generals forced Kentucky deep into the home team's territory as the period ended.

At the start of the final period, Zoeller, of Kentucky, was thrown back of his own goal by a swarm of fast-charging Generals to give the visitors an 8-to-0 lead. Kentucky rallied and made six first downs, but none of the drives were sustained.

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 15.—Northwestern, braked down by forward pass interceptions, was held to a scoreless tie by a dogged Ohio State eleven before 38,000 spectators at Dreite Stadium today.

The outcome was decided on the first play of the second period. Jack Ryan, Northwestern's brilliant halfback, failed to dent the Buckeye line from the 5-yard mark, with the result that the Wildcats lost the ball on downs.

Northwestern had the decided edge in the offensive for most of the game, but the Wildcats escaped defeat only by the narrow margin that kept Center Charley Maag's attempted field goal from whizzing over the crossbars in the final two minutes of play.

The Buckeyes had intercepted a pass, and Maag came back into the game to try to break the deadlock. With Quarterback Jimmy Sexton holding the ball on the 22-yard line, Maag was rushed hard by the Wildcat forwards and the ball sailed to left of the upright.

Northwestern's superiority showed up clearly. The Wildcats rushed the ball for 12 first downs for a total of 193 yards, as compared with Ohio State's 3 first downs and 126 yards. Northwestern struck through the air with 19 passes, completing 5 for 64 yards, against 43 yards netted by the Buckeyes on the three passes in 10 attempts.

very dark, late in the first quarter, when Charlie Weidenger fumbled behind his own goal line and recovered to give Western Maryland an automatic safety. With neither team's offensive power impressing anyone, at that point, it seemed very likely that the 2 points would suffice for a Western Maryland victory. The fireworks were yet to come.

Air Attack Bogs Down

Maryland opened up in the second quarter with a passing attack that bogged down almost before it got started. The two teams then engaged in a punting duel, with Murphy and Devlin doing the honors for the Terrapins against Drugasp of Western Maryland. The half ended just as Weidinger completed a 20-yard pass to Widener for their first decisive gain of the contest. Possibly an indication of what was to come, Maryland received the kick that started the second half but was unable to advance the ball from the vicinity of her twenty-yard line. Weidinger then punted to Drugasp who advanced the ball, from his own twenty to the thirty with some amazing running, aided by very well aimed passes.

Western Maryland started a sustained march that ended only after they had gained five first downs and climaxed it with Knepp's 3-yard plunge into pay dirt.

Hansen's kick for the extra point was blocked by Dearney.

Maryland again received the kick-off and still was unable to crack through the stubborn Western Maryland line. They took to the air, and after two unsuccessful tries, Weidinger found his mark in Murphy, who advanced the ball 9 yards for a first down. Again Weidinger found his mark, this time in Fred Widener, who reeled off 20 yards to find himself deep in Western Maryland territory. Then came a 20 yard pass from Weidinger to Murphy, who was stopped on the Western Maryland 2-yard line. Weidinger then hit the line for the remaining yards and Widener converted with a place-kick.

Knepp Halted

Knepp received Widener's kick-off and was halted almost in his tracks by fleet-footed John Dearney, who seemed to appear on the scene from nowhere. The Terrors, after a series of unsuccessful line plunges, were forced to kick. Maryland took the ball on the Terrors' 39-yard line and again set their ground-gaining department to work. With a march that very closely resembled that displayed by Western Maryland in the early minutes of the half, the Old Liners advanced the ball to within striking distance. With a second down on the 2-yard line, Skotnicki carried the ball over for the score that stole the lead from the Terrors. Widener again converted for the final point of the game.

University of Virginia Team Turns Back Techmen, 14 to 6

Gillette Shines for Victors

Scores 2 Touchdowns Demuro V. P. I. Star Cavaliers Fumble 7,000 Turn Out

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 15.—A cavalcade of dashing backs, with Jim Gillette the spearhead, led he Universiy of Virginia to a 14-to-6 victory over Virginia Tech here today, but not before the outclassed Techmen had marched from behind their own goal line to score on an electrifying passing attack in the last minute of play.

Tech, cheered by a somecoming crowd of 7,000 sweltering in Indian summer weather, and aided by Virginia fumbles, fought the heavier invaders in their own territory during the first quarter, only to have Gillette, Cordozo and Dinwiddie rip the V. P. I. line to shreds on two successful touchdown marches in the second and third periods.

Gillette took the bal over twice, first on a double reverse from the 3-yard line and again on a line smash from the 19. Fullback Harry McClaugherty made both the extra points good from placement.

With less than a minute to play in the final period, Phil Demuro, Tech's mainstay back, fired a pass to Halfback Sonny Powers, who lugged it to Virginia's 42-yard line. With seconds to play, Demuro shot another pass to the other side of the field straight into the arms of Capt. Frank Pierce, who leaped high to make the catch on the 25-yard stripe, and dashed down the right side line to elude the Cavalier secondary defense and score Tech's lone touchdown. His effort to convert from placement failed.

Navy

kept the Middies from scoring again.

Cliff Lenz started it by snagging Ray Anderson's daring pass on Yale's 28-yard line, and following up with a pass of his own to Georgie Ghesquiere that gave Navy first down on the 10. Lenz took the ball personally through tackle for four more yards before the quality of Yale's line began to assert itself.

Lenz hit the line again, but little Ed Collins and Joe Stack brought him down for no gain. Lou Mayo tried to run, but Felix Caraccolo nabbed him at the line of scrimmage, and Lenz finally was forced to attempt a pass, and it fell harmlessly in the end zone, Yale acquiring possession of the ball on its own 6-yard line.

Yale Drive Frustrated

The eventual victors opened the second half with a rush, moving the ball from their own 26-yard line to Navy's 8, where Navy's line held, and Yale's pass receivers did just the opposite. Charley Miller was the goat of this drive, dropping a pass in the end zone.

But Yale needed more than one incomplete pass to make it quit, and after an exchange of punts took the ball on Navy's 45-yard line and launched a drive that brought its first score. But there was many an anxious moment for the boola boolas in the stands before the drive produced a score. It began to appear that it simply wasn't Yale's day.

Humphrey shot a pass to Miller for a first down on Navy's 22, and followed up with another pass to Dyeis who dropped the ball in the end zone. Humphrey then faked a pass, and whisked around right end for 9 yards, and when Wilson hit the line for 3 more Yale had another first down on Navy's 9-yard line.

Wilson circled left end for 5 yards, and Humphrey dove through center for 4 more as the period ended. Navy braced itself for the shock of the next line plunge, but Humphrey crossed up the Middies by whipping an 8-yard peg at Snavely, who took the ball just over the line for the score. Humphrey's placement was wide.

Yale marched from its own 48 to Navy's 10, before the Admirals mustered enough power to halt the drive, and then Humphrey booted his field goal. But it was only by the grace of Snavely's poor pass receiving that Navy escaped having a secon dtouchdown charged against it. Trappings for the play were arranged by passes from Humphrey to Dyeis and Miller, with an 18-yard run by Wilson sandwiched in between. Yale was tossing passes with abandon, and making them godo.

Navy made one last gesture, and with Wood running the ball, Cooke and Powell taking passes, it reached Yale's 9-yard line before the Eli halted the charge. Wood attempted a placement, but it fell far short of the mark.

occurred to forestal such a happening.

Jack Spencer Stars

Jack Spencer, substitute halfback, was the individual Georgetown star. The cool sophomore scored two touchdown and two extra points in the little less than three quarters he played, and passed well khen called upon.

Spencer first went into action in the second quarter, with Georgetown holding a 12-to-0 lead, gained midway of the first period. After Earl Fullilove had intercepted Waleski's pass on the Randolph-Macon 22, Spencer passed and plunged to move the ball to the 2-yard line and scored on a straight line smash.

Spencer added his seventh point on a conversion from placement and then, scarcely three minutes later, completed his scoring for the afternoon. Georgetown got its chance when a short punt grounded on the 42 and immediately marched to the score in exactly nine plays. Spencer and Moulin threw passes to End Lascari and Frank Meglen to push the ball to the 24. Here Georgetown received an odd break when a pass thrown by Moulin bounced off two Randolph-Macon players before settling into Spencer's hands on the 5-yard line.

Score in Third Quarter

Meglen went to the 2and then Spencer plunged over. Spencer added his second point after touchdown to make it 26 to 0.

This was upped to 33-0 in the third quarter when Georgetown, after taking over the ball on downs on the Randolph-Macon 29 received another important break. Failing to gain, Spencer kicked a long, spiraling ball 53 yards to the Randolph-Macon 1. Here after two plays, Halfback Crutchfield fumbled and Bob Kercher, G. U. end, fell on the ball over the goal line for the touchdown.

Before we forget, the first Georgetown score was made by Fullback Jim Castiglia, who capped a sustained drive of 53 yards by smashing over right tackle from the 1-yard line. In this drive the running of Joe Mellendeck, G. U.'s fleet junior, wa soutstanding.

The second Georgetown touchdown was credited to Myron Darmohray, substitute fullback, in the second quarter, after Bill Burke had recovered a fumble by Walaski on the Randolph-Macon 13. Moulin passed to Charlie Wychunas on the 7. Wychunas and Moulin bucked the line to the 1, and then the hard-hitting Darmohray went across standing up.

The George Washington backs' hard charging impressed the crowd. Frank Merka, Tonkavitch and Lud Urick time and again carried Buff tacklers on their backs as they moved forward.

Sampson, however, sparked the Colonial offense with his running and kicking. Strangely enough, he appeared in three different jerseys during the game. His first sweater —No. 38—was torn in the first quarter. He finished out the half in No. 18 and played the second half in No. 52.

It Takes All Kinds of Doggy Togs to Follow the Beagles

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

These fair huntswomen who participate in one of the weekly Buskram Beagle hunts at Westbury, Long Island, choose a variety of costumes to follow the hounds afoot through the woods and across meadows in one of society's favorite sports. Beatrice R. Brown (left), daughter of Mrs. H. B. Thompson, jr., of Old Brookville, Long Island, wears a bright hunting jacket and cap with white skirt and scarf. On the fence (center) awaiting arrival of the dogs, are Marie and Eleanor von Rath, clad, respectively, in heavy suit and sweater and slacks. At the right is Cecilia M. von Rath wearing a two-color combination. The Von Raths are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William H. von Rath, of Glen Cove, Long Island

Notre Dame Downs Illinois, 14 to 6

Sheridan Stars for Victors Returns Punt 68 Yards for Touchdown Visitors Score on Blocked Irish Punt

By the Associated Press.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 15.—Two spectacular maneuvers, one a sudden bid through the air and the other a breath-taking thrust on the ground, carried Notre-Dame's football legions to a 14-to-6 victory over Illinois today.

Before the 45,000 spectatirs hardly had settled into their seats, Notre Dame scored a first period touchdown on a long pass from Harry Stevenson to arl Brown. In the third period, fleet Ben Sheridan brilliantly returned a punt 68 yards to score.

Illinois got its touchdown shortly afterward by recovering a blocked Irish punt a yard from the Notre Dame goal line—but didn't have quite enough left for a serious threat to the Irish triumph.

Playing at Notre Dame for the first time, Illinois depended on a line which had whipped Indiana a week ago. Today the Illini forwards were outplayed from start to finish. Illinois, stopped on the ground, took to the air only to encounter an alert Irish secondary which permitted only three completions in 12 aerial attempts.

The game was barely five minutes old when Notre Dame scored. Taking the ball after an Illinois punt, Notre Dame failed to move the ball from the Illini 35-yard line on three running plays. Then Stevenson faded back and shot a 47-yard pass into the end zone, Brown making a great finger-tip catch for the touchdown.

After a hard-played second period, highlighted by strong play of the Irish forwards and Sheridan's handling of punt returns for consistent gains, the throng was treated to two scoring thrills. Rettinger, Illinois fullback, got away a long punt which Sheridan took on his own 32.

Twisting and doging from the entire Illini team, the little speedster from Havana, Ill., streaked down the field for a touchdown.

Illinois, after several nice runs by Bob Wehrli, a 10-yard pass and a 15-yard penalty on Notre Dame, drive 50 yards to the Notre Dame 10. The Irish line held for downs, Stevenson's punt was blocked by Phillips and several Illinois players recovered on the 1-yard marker. Ralph Ehni, reserve quarterback, hit center for a touchdown, but his try for point was blocked.

Early in the final period, Phil Pezzoli intercepted a Notre Dame pass on his own 10 and returned 81 yards to the Notre Dame nine, but Longhi intercepted a pass to ruin that Illinois chance and the battle was over.

Harris Moriarty, Football Umpire, Dies During Game

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Harris Moriarty, one of the leading football officials in the South, died of a heart attack during the fourth period of the North Carolina-New York University football game at the Yankee Stadium today, in which he officiated as umpire.

Moriarty, a graduate of Mount St. Mary's College, was vice president of the First National Bank of Birmingham, Ala.

He collapsed during a play late in the fourth period and the game was held up several minutes until physicians arrived. They said the official died immediately, although first reports said he was conscious until carried on a stretcher to the dressing room under the grand stand.

HARLAN MILLER, POST COLUMNIST, Scoops FRONT PAGES WITH SPY STORIES

From Harlan Miller's Columns:

January 17, 1938:
The spy scare in Washington has flared higher than ever . . . one office has begun to burn its wastebasket castaways in a fireplace, and apother is keeping a close eye on charwomen and janitors.

April 28, 1938:
The rumor that a few Americans prominent in Washington's social life are suspected of accepting "foreign gold" for propaganda—much of it merely conversational—and for occasional "reports" has been confirmed by a high government official.
Off the record, he named one man positively, not an official. Recently this important official was invited to address a select high-grade group at lunch. His remarks were to be confidential and strictly off the record.
"I'd like to come," he said, "but I regret that I can't, because Mr. So-and-So will be there. Anything I said would be known at the German Embassy by 3 o'clock."

Such propaganda is so subtle as to be almost imperceptible . . . It is well flavored with lofty patriotism and 100 per cent Americanism . . . It aims to show that this country's interest would be most wisely served by taking certain positions and doing certain things—which would play into the hands of certain foreign powers.

June 29, 1938:
SPIES IN WHITE TIES: Gossip persists that a foreign power whose name begins with a "G" has our eastern seaboard all charted for aerial bombardment; that lectures have been delivered to bombing squadrons, with maps and aerial photographs, by aviators who have flown over our cities; that the bombing planes would be piloted by men familiar with our vulnerable spots from the air. This friendly power has two fast ships which can catapult big bombers into the air within easy range of our coasts.

HARLAN MILLER long ago proved that he can write about Washington interestingly and amusingly. And now with everyone taking the spy situation so seriously, Harlan Miller proves also that he can scoop the boys who view things with alarm. As you can see from these excerpts from Harlan Miller columns, he pokes jibes at the spies as far back as January 17, 1938.

If you like a column about Washington that's written interestingly and amusingly you'll enjoy Harlan Miller's column, "Over the Coffee."

A Breath of the Past Unearthed in a D. C. Attic

Mrs. George L. Beam with a copy of the London Chronicle of 1790

There is a saying that nothing is quite so dead as yesterday's newspaper, but Mrs. George L. Beam, of the Metropolitan Apartments, 200 Rhode Island avenue northeast, does not subscribe to it. From her late husband, she has inherited a collection of old newspapers and pamphlets that unroll the past and make its highlights seem as exciting as today's maneuvers in Europe and Asia.

In yellowed newspapers and pamphlets, Mrs. Beam reads of Benedict Arnold's treason, of the French revolution and the flight of Louis XVI and Queen Marie Antoinette, of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

And reading about these world-shaking events, chronicled by the reporters of the day, the past seems not dead at all to Mrs. Beam, and she is grateful to her husband for the rich legacy.

Beam, an avid collector, brought together British and American newspapers and pamphlets that go back as far as 1680, and constitute a valuable example of early journalism.

The account of Benedict Arnold's betrayal of his country is found in The Independent Ledger, of Boston, dated October 9, 1780.

The Gazette of the United States, published at Philadelphia, then the seat of the Federal Government, announces in its issue of April 24, 1793, that Uncle Sam's budget for the year will be $1,589,044.72, a sum which, in these days, wouldn't run the government for an hour.

Then there are copies of the London Chronicle which graphically describe the flight of the royal family in the French revolution in June, 1791, and their recapture and return.

FDR's Popularity Up 6% After Peace Plea to Hitler, Poll Shows

Attention Diverted From Purge

Polls 59.6% New High Point Low Was 53.3% Upswing Sharp

Many Americans have wondered what effect a European war, or a serious threat of war, would have on United States politics. The following Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows the effect of President Roosevelt's peace messages in the recent crisis on the President's own popularity.

By Dr. George Gallup.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—President Roosevelt's dramatic action in appealing to Chancellor Hitler and other European leaders for a peaceful settlement of the Sudeten issue has been followed by the sharpest upturn in the President's popularity's ever measured in an Institute of Public Opinion survey.

GALLUP.

The Institute has followed the President's popularity month by month for more than 4½ years, but no event in that period has changed the trend of Roosevelt's popularity in such a short time.

The latest Institute index shows the President with 59.6 per cent of the major party vote, as compared with the last reported figure of 55.2 on September 18. This is still, however, below the 62.5 per cent which the President polled on election day, 1936.

The most remarkable fact about the President's upsurge in popularity is that it brings to an end an almost equally sharp decline that set in after the ill-fated "purge."

Surveys conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion in the fortnight after the purge elections in Maryland and Georgia, september 12 and 14, show that the President had dropped to 53.3 per cent in the Institute index.

But the war crisis obliterated the purge from the front pages of American newspapers and overshadowed it in the public mind. Roosevelt's first message to Hitler, Prime Minister Chamberlain and President Benes, September 26, was the turning point.

Will Roosevelt Hold His Popularity?

Political writers who reported that President Roosevelt's peace messages had enhanced his popularity were correct, the survey shows. Some of these observers are now wondering whether the President will be able to hold the gains that he has made.

As the war scare ends, new problems and several old ones may detract attention from the President's peace role. Some of these are the farm surpluses and the problems of spending and relief. It is even possible that the reaction to the Munich peace agreement will hurt President Roosevelt, even though the United States was not a party to its terms.

On the effect and countereffect of these trends in the next three weeks probably depend the fortunes of dozens of Democratic and Republican candidates for Congress, and the Institute is now conducting a survey to measure the prospects of the two parties.

Message Swung Sentiment, Comment Study Shows

Even the Republicans could find no fault with this. Former President Herbert Hoover, speaking at a Kansas City Republican rally, said that Republicans would gladly support the President in his appeals for reason and peace abroad.

The general public took the same line. Typical comments of voters who support Roosevelt in the Institute survey are:

"I'm for him after his message to Germany; I thought it was a wonderful thing."

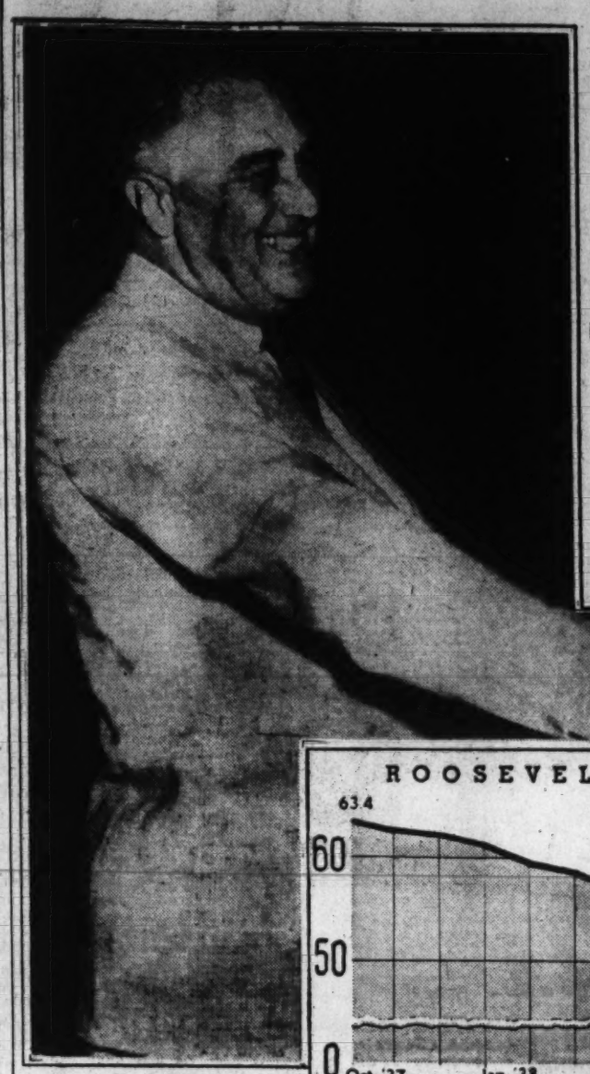
"I've sympathized with him all along, but I'm more for him than ever after his message to Hitler."

"Maybe I shouldn't be for Roosevelt, but with Europe the way it is, he's the only man for the job."

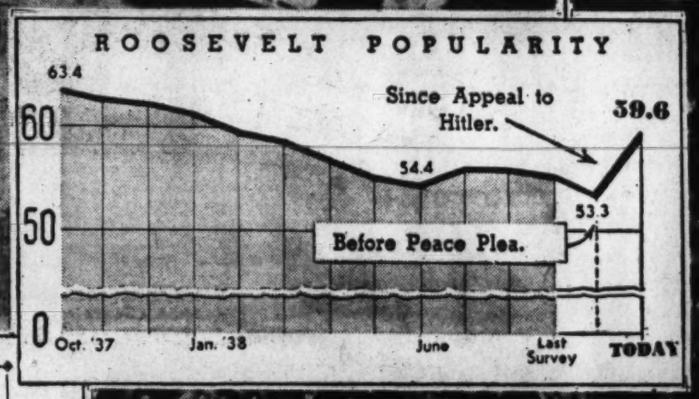
In less than a fortnight, Institute ballots show, the President's popularity jumped from its post-purge low of 53.3 to its present figure of 59.6—a gain of almost 6½ points.

The following table shows how opinion shifted in different sections of the country:

	Before Peace Appeals	After Appeals	Points of Change
N. Eng. States	45%	50%	+ 5
M. Atl. States	51	57	+ 6
E. Cent. States	48	56	+ 8
W. Cent. States	55	59	+ 4
Southern States	65	69	+ 4
Western States	60	70	+10



President Roosevelt's popularity with the man in the street (a group of them below) has risen sharply since his peace plea to German Fuehrer Adolf Hitler (above). The chart below shows Roosevelt's popularity since October, 1937.



The Political Barometer

The following is a summary of reported figures in American Institute of Public Opinion political surveys. These surveys are conducted among a cross-section of the voting population in all States.

Within each State the Institute reaches Democrats, Republicans and third party voters, farm, city and small-town voters and persons in all age and income levels, in proportion to their numbers in the voting population.

The American Way Is This Campaign's Issue

By Mark Sullivan

WHAT IS THE ISSUE in this November election? It is not wholly Democratic versus Republican. A more nearly accurate way of stating it—though not a perfectly accurate way—would be to say the issue is the Roosevelt Administration. Yet in several States election of the Democratic candidate for Senator will be as much a check to Mr. Roosevelt's Administration as election of the Republican candidate would be. For example, triumph of the Democratic candidate in Missouri, Mr. Bennett Champ Clark, would really give more pain to Mr. Roosevelt than election of the Republican candidate. For Mr. Clark was an outstanding opponent of Mr. Roosevelt's court measure. As Mr. Clark's renomination by the Democrats was one rebuke, so will his re-election be another.

The Republicans Recognize That Some of the New Deal Is Good

The issue is not wholly New Deal versus anti-New Deal. For Republicans know that some of the New Deal is good and will be kept, whatever party is in power. Some of the New Deal was advocated, and even begun, before the New Deal, by that name, was heard of. What the Republicans would do, if they come into power, would be to save some of the New Deal, throw overboard that part of it which is unsound, and then, as to the part that is kept, administer it sanely.

BUT THERE IS A WAY of expressing the issue accurately. The issue is authoritarian government versus American government.

To state this issue clearly it is necessary to go back 21 years and necessary to consider America not as America alone but as a part of the world. For the real situation is a world one; the true question is what attitude America shall take toward a world movement. To understand this world movement and its bearing on America is just about the most urgent duty of every American as he considers how to vote in November. To achieve this understanding no amount of reiteration is too much.

In Russia in 1917, a small group of men of revolutionary minds, took advantage of the chaos into which that unhappy country had been thrown by the war. They imposed on Russia a revolutionary form of society and government which they called Communism. Outstanding features of it were denial of the right of individuals to own property, denial of free speech, extermination of religion, denial of any rights of minorities or of individuals—the whole pressed down by a dictator form of government.

Once the little group of leaders had imposed Communism on Russia, they set out to impose it on other countries. To country after country they sent agents, money, trouble-stirreds, organizers. In no country did they succeed fully. But in Italy they succeeded far enough to bring the condition of chaos which is the first step in imposing Communism. But when Italy had reached the point of chaos Communism did not follow. Instead, an Italian leader arose with a type of government which he called Fascism and which he put forward as an alternative to Communism.

In Germany the same thing occurred. The Communists went far enough to achieve the stage of chaos, but in Germany as in Italy, a leader arose who proposed and established a variation of Fascism which he called Nazism.

THUS WAS A WORLD-WIDE controversy staged. On the one side Communism, on the other Fascism or its variation Nazism. In the struggle the Fascist-Nazi conception is winning. In the several countries in which Communism and Fascist-Nazism have faced each other, the latter has triumphed.

Nazi-Fascism is on the march. Within the recent past German Nazism has taken over Austria and part of Czechoslovakia. It has opened the way to further conquest whenever it chooses to march farther. In addition, German Nazism has achieved a relation to Britain and France which requires those countries to treat Nazism with tolerance. What the world faces now is a surge forward of the Nazi-Fascist type of authoritarian government. The world does not yet realize how far NaziFascism has advanced as a result of the events of last month.

HOW, NOW, about the United States? Go back some 20 years. Soon after Communism established itself in Russia, it took hold on certain areas of thought in the United States. Some college teachers, many writers, many of the type called "intellectuals," a few labor leaders, though not many, thought that Communism, or some features of it, were good. They wrote and spoke much about it, but made little headway until the 1932 campaign for the Presidency. During the campaign and after Mr. Roosevelt's election, the radicals got in contact with him. He, temperamentally attracted by the novel and the dramatic, temperamentally disposed to get pleasure out of opposing whatever is the established way, Mr. Roosevelt gave favor to the ideas of the radicals. After he was elected scores of the radicals of high and low degree and of many varieties trooped into his Administration.

The Radicals Proposed— And the President Adopted

The radicals proposed many ideas that were imitations of or inspired by the Russian experiment in Communism. Some of these Mr. Roosevelt adopted. But by no means all of the Administration's innovations were Communist in inspiration. Some are thoroughgoing individualism, some are utterly reactionary, a few of the novel ones are less like Communism than like Nazism. The Administration's body of experiments as a whole has no pattern. Yet the whole of it moves not straight but in a zig-zag fashion toward the authoritarian type of government.

As things stand in the world today, the authoritarian government and society that America will get if change comes will be not the Communist type but the Fascist-Nazi type. How any American can tolerate that possibility passes understanding.

HERE, THEN, IS OUR ISSUE in the November election. To elect Senators and Representatives who will oppose all such innovations, whether already adopted or merely proposed, that tend to take America toward authoritarian government. That includes: to resist destruction of the independence of the courts; to resist invasion of the rights of individuals, such as the right of a farmer to raise and sell what he pleases; to preserve the American principle that minorities have rights that are inherent in man and embodied in the Constitution, rights which no majority can take from them. In short, to resist the authoritarian type of government, to preserve the American one.

Farm Overflow Directed at Relief Rolls

Plan Ready Soon Fights Low Prices Cuts Surpluses

By Albert L. Warner.

ALL THE TELL-TALE signs in Administration quarters point to the institution in due time of a striking addition to the official farm program. It comprehends a domestic "two-price" system to expand consumption of agricultural commodities by subsidizing consumers of low income as well as of no income.

Overwhelmed by a bounteous production which flows over the control barriers of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and beset by complaints and even symptoms of rebellion in the farm belt at prices approaching the 1932 lows, resourceful Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, brings out his new plan. Its future significance is shown by the fact that President Roosevelt, privately, and Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, publicly, have approved it in principle. Masses of details, complications and controversies lie inevitably in its path but other Administration plans have persisted through the same kind of difficulties.

Tentative steps in the field of agricultural distribution, housing and relief roll activity are direct precedent for what is contemplated now in the new farm plan addition. Indirectly the Public Works program and other Federal projects seeking to expand consumption and purchasing power as well as to utilize existing productive facilities form a background for the latest proposal.

The Government has subsidized housing and sought to limit its benefits to certain specified low income groups. The same principle is involved in the program to transform farm tenants to farm owners. To the relief rolls the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation has distributed a lengthy list of products running from milk, butter, eggs, fruits and vegetables to flour and fish. The purpose has been partly to remove surpluses and sustain prices and partly to benefit those on relief.

In the same general movements the Works Progress Administration had workers making mattresses to distribute to the officially recognized needy. But the most recent and spectacular departure was the purchase of $10,000,000 of surplus clothing for relief roll distribution.

Biggest Innovation Along These Lines

Now Mr. Wallace comes forward with what might be the biggest innovation on these lines. He starts with the premise that there is an unpurchased surplus of farm commodities on one hand and a substantial portion of the population on the other hand which is either undernourished or underclothed, or so near that condition that its demands for products would increase immensely if the prices were lower. By Government intervention and subsidy in one form or another he would seek to transfer price-depressing farm surpluses into the hands of those who need the commodities involved.

"With a recognized need for cotton goods," Mr. Wallace said in the first exposition of his idea at Fort Worth, Tex., "why is the Government-held cotton (the staggering amount of 7,000,00 bales) not put to use? If consumption of American cotton is to be subsidized, the subsidies ought to be applied to domestic consumption, rather than exports. Why not, for once, give our own consumers and our own workers a break?"

At his press conference Wednesday the Secretary of Agriculture emphasized that his purpose was expansion of consumption. Therefore he would apply his plan to commodities in which there is an elastic demand, enumerating them as certain kinds of cotton goods, milk and other dairy products, fruits, vegetables and meats. Wheat is not included on the list. The theory is that flour or bread are basic articles of American diet, the

Voters Ask Increases in U. S. Defense

Back F.D.R. Demand To Preserve Peace Peril in Weakness Safety in Strength

By Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—One of the indirect results of the European crisis of the past month may be a new demand for further increases in the armed forces of the United States.

At a press conference this week, President Roosevelt forecast that expenditures for the Army and Navy would have to be increased, and meanwhile a survey of Nation-wide sentiment shows that the average voter is in a receptive mood for some such increases.

The survey, conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, asked a cross-section of voters in all parts of the United States:

"Do you think the size of the United States Army should be further increased?"

"Do you think the size of the Navy should be further increased?"

Throughout the country, 85 voters in every hundred thought the Army should be enlarged. Seventy-one per cent thought the Navy should be increased.

What American Voter Fears

There are good reasons, Institute surveys show, why the average American favors an even stronger national defense setup than that provided for in the record-breaking appropriations of 1938.

First and foremost is his belief that a large Army and Navy will do more to preserve peace than to draw this country into war. A typical comment from voters in the Institute survey is:

"England and France found that it doesn't pay to be weak. As long as the other countries are arming, America should keep up."

The American reaction to the "Peace of Munich" is that while war may have been postponed, it has not been postponed forever. In a survey published this week in The Washington Post 60 per cent of the voters expressed the opinion that the Munich agreement would result not in peace but in a greater possibility of war.

If there is another world war, an Institute survey indicated a fortnight ago, only 37 Americans in a hundred think the United States can stay out.

Taken together, all these straws indicate that the pressure will be on Congress to vote Army and Navy increases at the next session. How much resistance will be offered by peace and economy groups is hard to forecast.

America Led In Disarmament

In the survey reported today the greatest opposition to further Army and Navy boosts comes from the Middle West. Republicans are slightly less in favor of increases than Democrats.

Section by section, the vote in favor of increases is:

	Increase Army	Increase Navy
New England	67%	71%
Mid-Atlantic	70	77
East Central	63	68
West Central	56	58
South	71	75
West	66	72

In the Washington naval limitations conference and afterward this country led in the move for disarmament. It is possible that if a scientific sampling could have been made even a decade ago a majority of Americans would have opposed increases in the Army and Navy.

Nazi Drive on Jew in Germany Seen as History's Greatest Oppression

Local Man Horrified by Persecution

Sees Dark Europe War Lessons Lost Populace Wonders What of Tomorrow

By Melvin D. Hildreth

As Told to Alan David

Mr. Hildreth, Washington lawyer and national president of the Circus Fans Association, left Washington last August on what he thought would be an uneventful European tour—attending the Geneva assemblies as representative of the League of Nations Association, visiting zoos in England and on the Continent, meeting French and British circus fans. But when he disembarked from the Normandie last Monday his memories were of far weightier things than tanbark. Here he gives his first-hand impressions of those momentous late-September days he experienced in Munich, Geneva, London and Paris, a period he denominates as "the eve of oblivion."

ON NOVEMBER 1, 1918, I left the front en route to Saumur. The battle of the Argonne was under way. We had fought at Verdun, at Mount Faucon and at Brabant. In the evening, between trains, I walked to the Place de la Concorde in Paris. No lights were visible excepting blue globes marking the corners.

Twenty years later, almost to a day, I took the same walk. The same Place de la Concorde, the same obelisk, the same monuments, the same buildings. Again there was darkness, except for the blue globes at the corners.

I asked myself, "Was I actually 20 years older? Was the last war in vain? Must our generation witness another world conflict with practically the same forces aligned against each other? Has man so demonstrated his inability to place mind and spirit above the physical that he is about to use the scientific achievements of our century for world suicide? Was this, indeed, the eve of oblivion?"

The morning that the Munich accord was signed I was in Paris. With the immediate danger of war averted, the populace was enthusiastic at first. But it was only a matter of hours that wonderment took the place of joy. What would tomorrow bring?

Greatest Mass Oppression in History

From Geneva I had gone into Germany to check upon what I had read about the plight of Jews and Catholics there. The things I witnessed in Munich and Innsbruck and en route from one place to another inside the Reich borders convinced me that the horror of the Jewish persecution, together with that of the Catholics and many Lutherans, can never be adequately told because it is difficult to visualize what is undoubtedly the most awful mass oppression of human beings in the world's history.

There was the German Jew whose X-ray laboratory, a magnificant plant developed by him over a period of years, was confiscated without compensation. He was literally kicked out into the street and his place taken over by another.

On a train I enter the dining car to find that it is crowded, with many standing as they wait for places. But there are three seat vacancies at the table where a woman sits alone. No one will sit there, however, or if they would, they dare not. For she is a Jewess. On the same train a Jew is rudely searched and the few silver marks he has in his pocket taken away.

In Innsbruck I learned there were about 150 stores. Five of them were Jewish-owned, a ridiculously small precentage as far as offering serious competition to the other 145 was concerned. Nevertheless they were conspicuously placarded and painted with admonitions not to patronize the "Jude."

Streicher's violent anti-Semite publication, Sturmer, is posted in public places, its obscene pictures and inflammatory headlines demanding extermination of the Israelite.

Extermination of Jews Nazi Objective

Although it is on military record that hundreds of thousands of Jews fought for Germany in the Great War, Hitler repudiates all that they have done and states that the enemy of the German race is the Jew. He announces:

"The Jew must not only be expelled, but exterminated. That process in the end must extend beyond the boundaries of the Reich if civilization is to be preserved. Either the Jew must perish or night must descend upon the earth."

The fanaticism that surrounds these words has resulted in an effort to exterminate the Jew in Austria within a few months, a work which has taken several years in Germany.

One has only to visit the Place of the Eternal Guard, in Munich, to understand to what extent the Nazi philosophy has resulted in the deification of a single individual. There, from the earliest hours of dawn until late at night, flows a constant procession from all over Germany of those who come to gaze at the iron caskets of the 16 men who were killed in the famous "beer putsch." Upon each of the caskets are the iron letters, "Fuehrer, I am here."

People approach reverently this place of honor, which is guarded by silent and motionless men. The guard is changed every hour.

Christ as a factor has been definitely eliminated and has been replaced in the heart and soul of young Germany by a new Christ, Adolf Hitler. His picture, in which he is clad in shining white armor, mounted on a white horse and bearing a white flag, is to be seen everywhere.

To an irreverent American, it looks like Charlie Chaplin portraying Joan of Arc but to the serious-minded German it is an expression of the spirit of Sir Galahad who had the strength of ten because his heart was pure.

The restaurant in Munich where Hitler first spoke is today a shrine. There hangs the painting revered by all Nazis and Nazis sympathizers, entitled "The Beginning of the World." The theme is that of Christ in the temple talking to the Wise Men, but Christ is replaced by Hitler and the Wise Men by his German disciples.

How any one man can reach such a degree of fanaticism as to control completely the destinies of mankind is almost beyond belief. And yet, one has only to talk with the German exiles in Geneva—not Jews, but Germans who at one time were members of the Reichstag, who occupied high executive positions, but who were driven out of Germany because they dared reserve for themselves the right to think.

They told me that only five years ago nearly one-half of the people of Germany voted against Hitler and today they stand not as converts to his cause but as unwilling victims held in subjection. They told me that the so-called German air superiority is a myth, qualitatively if not quantitatively; that it is against the law for the names of those killed in airplane accidents to be published or for their relatives to wear mourning; that Germany is producing no surgical steel.

Is German Army Invincible?

Certain it is that the Reich has a magnificent parade army, fine upstanding young men marching in absolute unison. But old soldiers say that army is over-disciplined and lacks initiative, and its soldiers, inspired by fanaticism, would crumble if they thought their god had lost his power.

One cannot help but wonder, as he watches these pink-cheeked, downy-lipped young men march and march and march and sing along the streets, what will happen when they meet some opponent with a machine gun who refuses to bow to the magic name of Hitler.

In London and Paris, during the dark days just before the Munich climax, the prevailing feeling in the streets seemed to be one of perplexity rather than of excitement. First in London, then when I went to Paris I found the thoroughfares and promenades practically deserted.

At the British Museum they were packing away the priceless exhibits. Simultaneously the Louvre was wrapping and secreting underground its Winged Victory, Mona Lisa and Venus de Milo.

Going down into Italy from Germany brought many sharp contrasts. In Milan, Verona and Venice I was surprised to hear so much plain talk. In Germany no one dares to speak critically of Hitler or his policies, certainly not in public places and to strangers. But many of the Italians with whom I talked quite openly were amazingly candid in discussing Mussolini. They gave him credit for some things, derided him on other counts. I came away with the general impression that Il Duce would have a hard time whipping up enthusiasm among his people to side with Germany in a war.

Our trip was not as gloomy as it may sound here. In Aberdeen, Scotland, we were guests of the Mills Circus. From there we were taken for a visit to the King's castle at Balmoral. The Great Britain Circus Fans Association entertained us at Great Yarmouth and Les Amis de Cirque toasted us in Paris. We visited the zoos in Paris, London, Geneva, Edinburgh and Dublin.

At Innsbruck someone has painted on the side of the Alps a gigantic swastika. As one sits in the delightful little park, surrounded by "Juden Verboten" signs, and looks up at the eternal majesty of the peaks and at the painted swastika, one wonders which will last the longer.

Graphic arts in Germany, 1938 style. Melvin D. Hildreth, author of the accompanying article, is shown on the right reading a Munich newspaper whose anti-Semitic excoriations are mild compared to those in Der Sturmer (below). He succeeded in bringing this copy back to America, though the Streicher paper is not supposed to be taken out of the Reich.

In type and picture Der Sturmer rails against the Jew. "The Jews are our misfortune." "How much longer?" Publisher Julius Streicher devotes practically the entire contents to inflammatory propaganda

Irish Minister Talks of Detective Books and Jails—He's Spent Time in Both

By Gerald G. Gross.

This is the forty-seventh in a series of articles on members of the Washington Diplomatic Corps.

HAVE INSOMNIA? AND SHEEP COUNTING is becoming montonous? Then here is a bit of advice by the Irish Minister, Robert Brennan. Try composing detective stories when you lie awake of nights. You need not bother to turn on the light and find paper and pencil. Just write them mentally, the more rip-snorting the better.

That is what His Excellency does for sleeplessness. And it works beautifully. You may make your murders just as horrible as you like, he says, but take care not to fashion a mystery that is too baffling and challenging, lest you be unable to resist the temptation to keep awake until it is solved.

Fiction has a powerful fascination for the slight, ascetic-looking gentleman from County Wexford. Where most of his fellow envoys admit to reading only politico-economic tomes, history and current events, Mr. Brennan unashamedly confesses the consumption of much trash.

"Not that I read trash purposely," he explains. "It is simply that one has to go through rubbish to find the good things at times."

HE USED TO WRITE blood-and-thunder yarns for American pulps. He is the author of the plays, "Bystander," which was produced by a group of Abbey Theater players, and "Good Night, Mr. O'Donnell," a comedy in the manner of George M. Cohan's "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

"Bystander" is laid in a London prison. Its author possesses much first-hand information not only on prisons of London but also those of Dublin, Cork, Dartmoor, Gloucester and way points. (More of this anon). Michael Scott, who produced it, is the one and same Michael Scott, architect, who designed the glass building shaped like a shamrock which will house Eire's exhibit at the World's Fair in New York next year.

In less serious vein is "Good Night, Mr. O'Donnell," a farce based on the mysterious disappearance, some four decades ago, of the Irish crown jewels from Dublin Castle. Author Brennan has the gems cached in a lodging house in which a naive and unsuspecting Mr. O'Donnell finds himself in the midst of melodramatic goings-on.

Whatever he has done, Mr. Brennan has had fun doing it—reading, writing, giving Black and Tans the slip, knocking on a jail door for admittance, watching a baseball game, even being interviewed. His sense of humor has never failed him, even when a death sentence hung over his head.

ALTHOUGH HE RECEIVED one of the coldest receptions ever accorded a foreign visitor, he thinks American hospitality is wonderful. At the same time, however, he believes we ought to be ashamed of ourselves for failure to appreciate fully the genius of O. Henry.

"O. Henry," he says, "was the greatest of short-story writers. The recognition which his works have received among his own people is far below what it should be."

MINISTER BRENNAN.

Thornton Wilder's "The Bridge of San Louis Rey" he appraises as great literature, one of the finest of contemporary American novels.

About that cold reception: The mercury registered 14 degrees below zero when he disembarked in New York on that February day in 1934 on his way to Washington to take over as Secretary of Legation.

That's the only sort of coldness—meteorological—Minister Brennan has encountered in the United States. He finds American officials much easier to work with than the European. And his fondness for the people is quite up to that possessed by his predecessor, Michael MacWhite, who was transferred to Rome last winter.

Along about the fourth or fifth night of his stay in Washington Mr. Brennan walked past The Washington Post Building. Well, not past it. No one with as much printer's ink in his blood as he has could walk past a strange newspaper plant.

He climbed the stone steps, walked up to the front counter and said he'd like to be taken through. A guide was immediately obtained and the intensely interested guest, until a few weeks previously general manager of the Irish press, was given the works, from pressroom to engraving department.

"That was what I call hospitality," he says.

WEXFORD, IN THE COUNTY of the same name on Ireland's southeast seacoast, is the town of Mr. Brennan's birth. It is but 10 miles from the spot where John Barry, copatron saint with John Paul Jones of America's Navy, was born. The Christian Brothers took Robert in hand for his early education.

Later he matriculated at the Royal University, now the National University, but he wasn't graduated. The mounting agitation for independence from the British Crown was altogether too exciting for him to stay faithful to his school books.

He was chief of the Irish Republican Brotherhood, an outlaw organization working secretly for freedom from the royal yoke, at the time of the Easter Rebellion of 1916. Much to his disgust—"I never was a soldier"—Brennan had been placed in charge of a Wexford brigade of revolutionaries.

Heavily outnumbered, his brigade surrendered. Officers and men were marched off to the Dublin jail. Brennan and his six brother officers were sentenced to die, along with some of the men. One by one, the others went before the firing squad. Brennan resignedly awaited his turn.

BUT IT NEVER CAME. Suddenly the executions ceased, as much to Brennan's surprise as his relief. The reason was increasing protest in America against the reprisals, which England took very seriously because she wished the United States to enter the World War on her side.

The rebel's sentence was commuted to imprisonment and he was sent to Dartmoor. Next, Sussex jail, in chains. But there was a mutiny in Sussex and so to Parkhurst, on the Isle of Wight.

"A lovely spot it was," the Minister recalls. "Such scenery, such climate."

His next jail term was spent in Pentonville, in London. He was freed, only to be cast into the jug again shortly afterward. All of these difficulties with the law were the result, of course, of his Sinn Fein intriguing.

After Pentonville it was Cork jail, where our rebel had the honor of occupying the very cell which had held William Penn some two and a half centuries earlier. Brennan was elected O. C. (officer in charge) by his fellow prisoners. His lieutenants included Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, destined to die three years later after a 73-day hunger strike; Thomas MacCartain, later Lord Mayor of Cork, and George Clancy, later Lord Mayor of Limerick.

After two months in Cork jail Brennan was released, but his freedom was shortlived. Taken in custody once more because of his dissemination of Sinn Fein propaganda, he was put on a boat for imprisonment in Gloucester.

It was 6 o'clock of a Sunday morning, a few weeks after the Armistice, when the revolutionary and his three guards arrived in Gloucester and marched up to the jail. Tired and hungry all four, they were chagrined when a yawning turnkey came to the door and announced that the jail didn't open until 7 so wouldn't they please go away. Brennan argued persuasively for admittance, but to no avail. Whereupon he and his guards went to a river bank and fell into a sleep of exhaustion.

After an eight-month term in Gloucester, Brennan was freed, never more to be jailed, though he was a fugitive on many more occasions. Once, in Dublin, an American correspondent saved him from almost certain death by volunteering to hold some incriminating documents which Brennan had just received from Eamonn de Valera, the life-saving offer coming when the two men spied a group of black and tans waiting to board the tram on which they were riding.

In recapitulation, His Harassed Excellency spent most of the years, 1916-17-18-19 behind bars or in shackles, or both. He can sing "The Prisoner's Song" with feeling.

Toward the end of 1920 he received de Valera's invitation to become under-secretary of the foreign office. He accepted. The truce with England came in 1921 and the treaty in 1922. Shortly afterward he resigned to organize the Irish Press, republican organ.

After several years of fund raising, the journal was finally launched. Brennan proudly put the first issue to bed one day in September, 1931. He was its general manager up to his appointment to Washington nearly five years ago.

WHEN MINISTER MacWHITE was transferred from Washington to Rome last winter his secretary of legation became charge d'affaires ad interim. In August he was elevated to the ministership, much to the satisfaction of his many friends.

The Brennans have three daughters, Emer, Maeve and Deirdre, and a son, Robert Patrick. When they want to josh him they call him Mr. James Foster, one of his many aliases of underground days, and curl an imaginary mustache in reminder of the hirsute handlebar papa used to effect when he was trying to elude the Black and Tans.

Industry's Long-Idling Machinery Shifts Into Gear and Wheels Turn

The wheel of industry continued to gain momentum last week, shifting lumber, textile and steel mills and freight-car loadings into high gear production. Activity in these industries was leading the country to a new peak of recovery—September was the best month since October a year ago, and production so far this month is holding the pace. It means smoke in the stack of cargo-loaded steamboats—of steel town mills—and of locomotives. And if you think smoke doesn't make a pretty picture sometimes, just rub it out of the above photos. Smoke in those stacks means jobs and jobs mean eventually—prosperity

Business Moves Ahead, Leaving Fear Behind

Production Highest in Year
Billions Added to Shares Values
Inventories Down; Products Needed

By William V. Nessly.

The infinite processes that go to make a land's prosperity appear to be slipping back into gear, one at a time.

The abstract parts of the whole economic chart which, properly pieced together and balanced, can present a picture of roaring factories and speeding trade, seem to be dropping into position again.

Long months—long years, even—of dislocation, of mental anguish and physical distress may be drawing to a considerable diminution—or an end.

The recession that startled a people with memories of the depression's worst woes has spent itself, if one is to judge from mounting statistics and reports from business, industry and finance, and definitely the graph line seems upward.

The picture still is not all rosy.

While some factors surge forward, straining to lift the entire economy, others drag. They present problems engaging the minds of business and government alike—problems that may not be settled for many moths. But the fear paralysis seems to be well nigh gone and basic problems are being attacked.

June brought first obscure indications that the months-long decline had groaned to a halt, and througnout the summer some fields of activity—notably steel and housing—steadily defied the seasonal slump theory.

Now the positive indications of recovery have multiplied and quickened, and even the imminent threat of a war catastrophe and a disastrous hurricane failed to stop the swing.

A year ago this month the recession had set in. Prices and industrial production were declining. Over-production and heavy inventories had sharply curtailed buying orders. Plants were reducing operations and workers were being dropped.

Contrast Between Today and Year Ago

Today there are these contrasting situations:

Industrial production for September was found by the Federal Reserve Board to have been at the highest level since last October.

In the past two weeks an estimated $12,000,000,000 has been added to the quoted value of shares listed on the New York stock exchange, with stocks rising close to 20 per cent. Utility stocks on Friday reached the highest points in more than a year.

Inventories are reported down, with store shelves in a position to receive new merchandise. Production is reflecting the new situation and men are being called back to work.

Housing, as shown by reports of the Federal Housing Administration, has been setting new records monthly since March, with promise, contained in applications for appraisal, that it will continue through the winter. Money also is pouring out in the United States Housing Authority's $600,000,000 slum-clearance program.

PWA's $1,600,000,000 recovery drive is well launched, with orders for construction material expected to take about $900,000,000.

Activity in the cotton and woolen textile mills, increasing for months, had climbed in August to about the level of the summer of 1936.

Old Standby Steel Increases Pace

Steel, standby through the summer months had accelerated its pace still further and ingots production had advanced from 26 per cent of capacity in mid-June to 47 per cent at the end of September. Steel output as a whole was placed at slightly more than 51 per cent of capacity last week.

Improved business in steel, chemical equipment, mail order, copper and other industries and businesses sent their stocks high in stock exchange buying waves.

Railroad carloadings went above 700,000 cars in a week for the first time earlier than the normal year period.

There has been a slight increase in business loans from the banks' huge supplies of idle funds, and recent liberalizing of bank examination rules by the government is expected to provide a further increase.

Retail buying was gaining and practically all cities reported substantial gains in September over August, due to improved employment and payroll conditions.

Wholesale conditions, the Department of Commerce reported, are in even better condition than those in the retail business. Though most of the steady advance in buying was for immediate needs, some future committments for the winter were reported.

Automobile factories are calling back thousands of employes, as the new models emerge and dealer ordering is under way.

Cutting of prices in some lines, steel, crude oil and some factory products, helped stimulate trade.

Residential construction reaches high levels, the F. W. Dodge Corporation reporting that September home construction awards in 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains were 52 per cent higher in September than in the corresponding month of last year.

For 13 consecutive weeks heavy engineering awards were reported by the "Engineering News-Record" as ahead of those for corresponding weeks of a year ago.

Exports are higher and imports lower, and for the first eight months of the year the country had the most favorable trade balance it had enjoyed in three years.

Daily average sales of variety stores for September increased 10 per cent from August to September, more than the seasonal amount.

Rural Retail Sales Up

Rural retail sales, the Commerce Department's figures showed, increased 23 per cent from August to September, a gain greater than the usual seasonal amount.

Postmaster General Farley reported postal receipts in the fiscal year 1938 reached a total of approximately $728,000,000, the largest in history.

The National Industrial Conference Board said 338,000 additional workers were engaged in manufacturing in August as compared with July, and 475,000 were added to the total industrial employment, including the construction industry.

The farmers' situation, with bountiful crops but lowered prices, appears likely to be improved by Government purchase of surpluses to help the needy, and the farm buying power is better, when compared with that of 1937, than that of the country as a whole.

Effects of President's Policy Awaited

There was a strong tendency to expect favorable manifestations after President Roosevelt's new appeal for greater co-operation between business, government and labor, though some business and industrial circles insisted that they had not done the saber-rattling of which the President had complained.

On the other hand, there are unfavorable factors that tend to prevent full realization of benefits from the brighter scenes.

There were 10,000,000 or more jobless, and the WPA rolls, with more than 3,000,000 persons, are an all-time high. There had been a steady leaving of the rolls most of those departing doing so to take private jobs, but a larger number are going on the rolls, many of them for the first time. Age groups were thought to figure in the shifting—younger persons getting jobs while older ones were required to seek relief.

Plight of Railroads Disturbing Situation

The desperate financial plight of the railroads, which had led to a plethora of proposals, none of which found decisive backing, is one of the really disturbing situations. With the roads pictured as headed for financial collapse unless relief is provided from some quarter, their plea for a 15 per cent wage cut to save them $250,000,000 a year, is being stoutly resisted by rail labor before the president's fact-finding board. The strike vote by the unions, overwhelmingly in favor of a walkout if the pay cut it put into effect, had a depressing effect.

The Government's economic or "monopoly" investigating committee is at work, secretly, and despite assurances that it was to be no "witch-hunt," the realization that from the investigation were sure to come recommendations for changes in some economic practices, naturally cause some trepidation. Committee members have insisted that business itself will profit if whatever objectionable practices may be found are eliminated.

Tax Revision Faces Country

Tax revision faces the country when Congress meets again, a certainty in view of mounting deficits and the soaring public debt. Persons who have never paid income taxes before are likely to find the tax base broadened to include them, exemptions may be reduced, and those who have paid in the past may find their payments increased.

However, Secretary of Commerce Roper this month has summed up the situation at present as follows:

"One of the most significant factors at the beginning of the fourth quarter of 1938 is the low inventory situation in most lines of trade and industry at a time when seasonal and improved economic conditions are prompting stronger consumer interest. Furthermore, the country's reservoir of capital is abundant and should be put to work in assisting to solve the credit problems of small industries.

"Construction, particularly residential, is increasingly active and will affect many lines of industries as a greater amount of cumulative need swings into the market. All that is needed for the further stimulation of needed housing, is that such concessions be made by those who furnish the materials, the management and the labor as would bring costs within reach of the low-income group.

1939 Autos Boom Steel

"The 1939 automobile models are on the eve of going into large-scale production with stimulating reaction on the steel industry. Huge crops are being harvested; railway freight traffic has increased more than seasonally; the national income is rising; and the foreign trade outlook is further brightened by recent European developments that look to more normal trade relations.

"Since early summer, industrial output has recovered more than one-third of the loss recorded during the recession. While the improvement was first noted among the non-durable goods industries, it has spread gradually to include the producers of durable good. In the former group, gains have been quite general with textiles, paper and printing, and boots and shoes among leading contributors to the rise. Among the durable goods industries the improvement has not been so widespread, but output in the steel industry has nearly doubled in recent months with demands of the automobile industry yet to be reflected. In the aircraft industry, activity has continued at a high rate throughout the year without reflecting any appreciable recession influence.

"We have 130,000,000 people to be fed, clothed and sheltered. * * * We must not overlook the fact that the greatest purchasing power of the world is within the confines of our own country."

Perhaps America now is "going places" in an economic sense.

last to be surrendered when small incomes wipe out the purchase of other products. The demand for wheat is therefore not elastic. One opinion from the Agriculture Department is that a subsidy operation would not raise wheat consumption much more than 30,000,000 bushels above the usual domestic demand for 600,000,000 bushels.

To Create Extra Demand by Subsidy

For those products having an elastic demand Mr. Wallace would seek means of creating the extra demand by subsidy. He would try to benefit the needy and to avoid new Government competition with private processors and retailers by limiting the subsidy system to that part of the population lowest in the economic scale.

From this point the theorists in Mr. Wallace's organization go on to point out the beneficial changes that might accrue to agriculture from the extension of this system. In addition to reducing surpluses and thus improving prices the expanded demand might help to shift unfavorable production centers. If an adequate supply of milk were supplied, for instance, to all the children of the country, it is argued, the dairy industry would have to be greatly expanded. Portions of the cotton and wheat belts whose surpluses are far beyond domestic demand, even if the latter were enlarged, might gradually be diverted to cattle and feed, according to this reasoning.

How to do the subsidizing of the consumers is another matter, and Secretary Wallace is short of details as yet. In the case of cotton the processing problem comes first. Presumably he would want to turn out certain extremely cheap and simple cotton goods. He might turn to existing textile manufacturers, sell them Government-held cotton at below market price on condition that the output be made at a certain price and distributed in accordance with Government directions. The other and less probable avenue would be through processing work by relief roll people. There was once discussed in Washington a plan for operating idle factories with relief people but the manifold difficulties, with complaints from both organized labor and manufacturers, effectively forbade action.

Distribution Is Serious Problem

The distribution problem is even more of a hornets' nest. If distribution were to be made only to relief rolls, the machinery would already be available, tested often enough by the surplus commodities corporation. But Mr. Wallace is thinking of a wider distribution covering others with extremely small resources.

The cheap quality of the cotton goods might in itself limit the economic group to which they would be attractive. But vegetables, fruit, milk and meat are hardly susceptible to effective limitation by quality. Bulk distribution of milk at certain depots on a cash and carry plan might be partly effective for that commodity since only those needing to save a few cents each day would give up the service which at present goes with the retail handling of milk.

But another suggested distribution method for all the subsidized products would be to confine the prospective purchasers to those with accredited cards. Persons on relief rolls, recipients of unemployment insurance benefits, and others in old age and allied benefit groups might be included, but how to extend the cards to independent people with the smallest incomes would be an immense problem conductive to innumerable protests. Established retail merchants would naturally view the whole proceeding with suspicion, if not violent opposition, unless in some way they too were satisfied.

In subsidizing cotton products there is another difficulty. The processing cost is four or five times the cost of the raw cotton. Unless the Government wants to sacrifice its holdings by almost giving away its cotton in the subsidy program, the cost of the finished cotton goods will not be cut, materially.

Alexandria's Historic Past Is Revealed by Its Family Heirlooms

When Alexandria hostesses open ten of their colonial homes October 28 and 29, the public will be invited to look upon hundreds of interesting interior scenes. Here are a few seen by the Post Photographer who made an advance tour last week. The tour, and the exhibit of historic antiques being shown in conjunction, is sponsored by the St. Paul's and Christ Church. In the picture at left Cornelia Allfriend, of Alexandria, poses in the home of Mrs. Joseph Crocket, 819 Prince street. The photo at right show the attractive back door of Mrs. Ford Swetnam's home

8 Homes Open Mementoes Valued Descendants Proud Invite Public

By Katherine Barrett Pozer.

HERE IS AN appeal about the personal possessions of people of a bygone day which is universal. In museums and galleries the world over, in the section reserved for the intimate belongings of historical figures, one finds visitors who linger before the cases as if trying to come in closer touch with the great persons who have used these things in everyday life.

In America this is particularly true, for here the leaders who helped in the building of our country were plain citizens, whose gifts of leadership elevated them from the paths of commerce, agriculture and the professions, to help build the road to the America of the future. It is through the things used in their everyday life that one catches a definite picture of the real person which is not to be found in all history books.

To most of them their homes were one of the sources of their strength and a place of refuge in the trying days before and after the revolution. Many of their homes still stand, but a majority of the furnishings and their other possessions have been scattered in the intervening years. It is fortunate that some have been preserved and we are privileged to see them.

Many of these early Americans knew Alexandria well, and they lived, visited and took an active part in the life of the town. Old Alexandria families are proud possessors of things owned by them, many of which are family heirlooms. A collection of these will be on display on October 28 and 29, together with an exhibit of old silver, glass, china, jewelry, costumes and shawls, from the old homes. The exhibit is being shown in connection with a tour of old houses for the benefit of the two historic Alexandria churches, Christ Church and old Saint Paul's.

8 Colonial Homes To Be Open for Tour

A small display at the tour held in the spring proved very popular and so the committee has extended its efforts with the result it has gathered together a priceless collection. Through these one can follow the story of Alexandria from the early days when it was an important social, political and commerical center and great figures of the past were entertained in a manner fitting their place in the social and political life of early America. Famous generals were honored after their military successes, and the arrival of new officials from England was always the signal for balls and parties, to show them America was carrying on the Old World tradition of gracious living.

Eight Colonial homes will be open for the tour. In each of these there are fine pieces of furniture, some of which have been in constant use by members of the same family since the Colonial days. Old china still remains in cupboards and presses where it was placed by brides in the family when Alexandria was in its youth. In many homes silver stands on old sideboards which have reflected its glow for more than 100 years.

The special exhibits will be gathered together in three sections, to be shown at the homes of Mrs. William Lloyd and Mrs. Davidson Maigne and in the Parish House at Saint Paul's Church. Mrs. Lloyd's home, which was built in 1800, contains many pieces of fine furniture and she has an exceptional collection of rock crystal, Royal Worcester and Capo di Monti.

Mrs. Maigne's house has been in the family for five generations. It was built by an ancestor in the late part of the eighteenth century. It has been carefully preserved, and there are many pieces of original furniture and a great deal of china which was owned by the early American occupants. The special collection of old glass will be shown there, including a set of musical glasses. The only other set known to be in existence is in the Metropolitan Museum.

The exhibit of pieces owned by Virginia-born Presidents will be an outstanding feature. First in interest perhaps will be locks of hair from the heads of George Washington and Thomas Jefferson. The Washington relic is enclosed in an old "mourning broach," which Mrs. Washington made after the First President's death. It has a band of black enamel and the initials G. W. It was worn by Mrs. Washington, and given by her to Miss Cornelia Lee, of Green Spring, Williamsburg, who was an intimate friend of the first American "First Lady" and a frequent visitor to Mount Vernon. The broach is owned by Mrs. William Boothe, of Alexandria, a descendant of Cornelia Lee.

The lock of Jefferson's hair has come down in direct line from his daughter, Martha (who married Thomas Mann Randolph, of Edgehill, at Charlottesville), to Mrs. Joseph Crockett, the present owner, whose house will be open for the tour, and where there are many more things which have come in a direct line from Jefferson. Among the many other Presidential mementoes are a map drawn by Washington, a commission signed by Madison, a knife owned by Zachary Taylor and a fine portrait of Monroe.

In the china section there will be examples of all the finest china which was used by the early Americans. Many of the pieces have historic associations and interesting legends Two pieces of these have come in a direct line from George Mason at Gunston to the present owner, Mrs. Taylor Burke, one an Apostle pitcher and the other a handsome bowl. Mrs. Burke is also lending the child's tea set which Gen. Robert E. Lee gave to his daughter, Miss Mary Custis Lee.

A piece with an interesting history is the pitcher of Miss Cora Duffey, which has been in her family since it was given by George Washington to the wife of John Christian Ehlers, his gardener, who came from England in 1788. The pitcher is decorated with a ship, and bears the words "Peace and Plenty," which was a favorite slogan of the First President.

As a social and commercial center, it is natural that Alexandria attracted the finest artisans of the day, and the silversmiths of the old town were famous for a long period.

Old Silver And China Are Features

Also Glass, Jewelry Display Popular Efforts Extended Gather Priceless Art

Among the earliest there were several whose wares were sought by all in Colonial America, including James Adam, Charles Burnett and William Coen. James Adam (1755-1798) trained his son in the making of fine silverwork, and he became the most famous of all the Adam silversmiths who followed in this business for generations. The original Adam workshop still stands on lower King street, a quaint and interesting building.

In the display there will be pieces made by all the early Alexandria silversmiths. The Misses Elsie and Edith Snowden, whose family for many generations published the Alexandria Gazette, the oldest daily newspaper in the United States, are lending an Adam tea service. Another tea service, the work of Charles Burnett, whose silver pieces had a simple style and fineness of line which made them particularly desirable, will be loaned by Mrs. Howard Joynt.

Fine Collection Of Old Silver

Much of the old silver in the South is particularly dear to the owners, as it is surrounded by family legend. Some pieces were buried during the long period of the Civil War and others were taken by the owners when they fled from their homes. A piece which has particular interest for visitors to the tour is the silver loving cup which was presented to Mrs. Thomas Lawrinson by the city of Alexandria in appreciation of her kindness in lending her home to Gen. Lafayette and his entourage when they were guests of the city in 1824.

In the old Roberdeau house, which also will be open, visitors may see an old silver tankard owned by Gen. Daniel Roberdeau, soldier, patriot and statesman during the Revolutionary War. This piece is being brought from Texas by Sully Roberdeau, a descendant of the General. The tankard was made by James Musgraves in 1762.

Mrs. Rathbone Smith is lending a pre-Revolutionary cream pitcher and sugar bowl, which an ancestress, Mrs. Waller, of Stafford County, had made from old Spanish silver pieces, found in the strong box of her husband after his death. These two, pitcher and sugar bowl, were sewn in a mattress and taken when the family were refugees from the early days of the Civil War until after Appomattox. Several pieces from Fletcher, the famous silversmith of Philadelphia (1793), will be loaned by Mrs. Crockett, among them a pair of goblets and a sugar bowl; a teapot from Octagon House, which was owned by George Ogle Tayloe, its builder. Two silver "pounce boxes" will be shown. These are exquisite in workmanship, with a perforated innerbox which held a sponge filled with perfume. One of these was owned by Mrs. Richard Forrest, wife of Georgetown's first postmaster, who also was Secretary of State under Thomas Jefferson.

"Second day" dresses, christening robes, night dresses, wedding shoes and parasols of belles of two centuries ago will be displayed. Shawls of all periods—shoulder shawls, paisleys and those of exquisite lace—will in themselves form an interesting collection.

These treasures will bring the past very close to the present and give to those who are privileged to see them a real picture of the glamorous past of the old town across the Potomac.

Syracuse Convention Sounds New Slogan.

As a new battle cry in the war against Van Burenism in upper New York state the Conservatives, "unchanged Democrats," in solemn convention assembled have given to their brother Conservatives throughout the Union this potent slogan: Divorce the public money from the Executive; invest the people's money in the people's representatives."

What? Women in Politics!!!

To heighten the feverish pitch to which politics in the Union seems to be destined it is amazing to find that one woman, Miss Fanny Wright, would have the courage to enter the affray with the male of the species. Last Friday, according to the announcement made in placards posted all over the city of New York, Miss Wright mounted the speaker's platform in the Masonic Temple to deliver her lecture on national politics, using as the basis of her oration President Van Buren's plan for a Sub-Treasury system to break the monopolistic control by the banks of the nation's currency system.

Her speech was constantly interrupted by the males who hooted and hissed almost every sentence she spoke, not so much because of the facts which she presented but on account of her sex. The idea of a woman making a speech in public, and especially on a political subject was more than the men could tolerate.

Great crowds of men gathered outside the hall and when ladies in the audience made their exit the men who lined the streets through which they were forced to pass "lifted their bonnets and hurled ugly epithets at them." Women in politics!!! Disgusting!!!

Three New Diplomats in Washington.

Acting Secretary of State Vail presented to the President this week three new diplomatic representatives, who in turn submitted their respective credentials: Brig. Gen. Don Carlos Maria de Alvear, Minister from the Argentine Confederation; Gen. Maj. Baron de Mereschal, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty, the Emperor of Austria; and Mr. Anson Jones, Minister Plenipotentiary from the Republic of Texas.

Webster Comes Out for Harrison.

Much to the surprise of his friends, and somewhat even to their regret U. S. Senator Daniel Webster has signified his intention of withdrawing from the three-cornered race for the trip to the White House in '40 and of throwing his support to General Harrison, "Ole Tippecanoe." It is reported that Senator Webster does not believe that Senator Henry Clay, the other would-be candidate, is strong enough to carry the Whig banner to victory.

Sale of Royal Statues in London.

LONDON, ENG.—An unusual auction took place at the Royal Exchange this week in that statues of former Kings and Queens of Great Britain were offered for sale. This unique event caused considerable excitement. Prices were not very complementary. A statue of Queen Anne fetched 10 pounds 5 shillings; George II, 9 pounds 5 shillings; George III and Queen Elizabeth, 11 pounds, each; and Charles II, 9 pounds. No American bid on the statue of George III.

The Chartists Demand Manhood Suffrage.

LONDON, ENG.—Parliament is much disturbed over the revival of the Chartist movement marked by the presentation to it of the so-called "People's Charter" in which such radical political reforms as universal manhood suffrage, the secret ballot, annual election of Parliament, payment of salaries of members thereto, a division of the kingdom into 300 electorial districts and the limitation of membership to that number are demanded.

Not being satisfied with the reforms urged by Robert Owen, the Working Men's Association has drawn up the foregoing charter and has obtained the signature of thousands of their fellow-workers to the petition demanding its passage. The Association claims, and not without justification, that the Reform Act of '32 still leaves the masses disfranchised and was merely an act to transfer the control of Parliament from the aristocracy to the middle-class, ignoring entirely the working class. As a property qualification still remains a requisite to voting the worker is still deprived of the ballot. But the Tories ask; "Can anything be more preposterous than the demands contained in this Charter?

Military Parade Experiences Serious Mishap.

NEW YORK CITY.—During the great military parade of two brigades of city volunteers on the Bowery on Wednesday, one Michael Daley, an Irishman, drove his cart at high speed into the line of marching soldiers. Fifty or sixty of the marchers were knocked down and several fatally wounded. Instantly the enraged soldiers charged Daley and wounded him with their bayonets. In fact, they would have killed him had not their Commanding Officer intervened and saved the Irishman's life.

Dr. Holmes Lectures at Dartmouth.

HANOVER, N. H.—In the fall catalogue just issued by Dartmouth College it is announced that Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes will lecture in the Medical Department on Anatomy. Dr. Holmes is a graduate of Harvard "in the famous class of '29." A few years ago he gave up his literary work and went to Paris to study medicine. In '33 he returned to Boston and began the practice of his profession.

A Week-End Review of Current Publications

The Real Franklin

By Huntington Cairns

MR. VAN DOREN'S "Benjamin Franklin" is easily the best of all the biographies of that remarkable man. The writing of any biography is not facile task, and the writing of a life of Franklin is beset with unusual difficulties. There is the enormous bulk of material to be mastered; there is the more difficult job—the revelation of one of the most extraordinary personalities this continent has produced.

Mr. Van Doren is an old hand at biography, and he has a full understanding of the difficulties of the trade. In his time he has committed some enormous sins, but the present volume more than atones for them. He has given us all the facts we need to know, insofar as they are available, for a full understanding of Franklin's unique personality. He has given us also such history as is necessary for a proper setting for those facts. He has, moreover, preserved an admirable balance between the two. It has taken biographers many generations to realize, and the lesson is far from learned, that biography is not history. All the true biography in such a work as Ludwig's "Napoleon" could be compressed into three lines.

AMERICAN HAGIOGRAPHY has given us not a full-length figure but an ideal bust of Franklin, done perhaps in the manner of Daniel Chester French. We think of him as a thrifty, simple man in homespun clothes, who helped in the formation of the American Government and who had some entertaining notions about electricity and kite flying. Mr. Van Doeren's avowed purpose is to rescue him from the "dry, prim people" who have perpetuated this utterly misleading picture. He points out that Franklin could never learn frugality and gave it up altogether when relieved of poverty. As for his prudence, he merely observes that Franklin becomes at seventy a leader of a revolution and ran bold risks throughout his whole life. His plainness he dismisses with the observation that hardly another man of affairs has ever been more devoted than Franklin to the pleasant graces.

Mr. Van Doren's book is a long one, and a long book is much less difficult to write than a short one. Voltaire apologized for the length of a two volume work he sent as a gift to a friend, remarking that if he had had more time he would have written it in one volume. Undoubtedly there is more artistic creativeness in the short compass of Geoffrey Scott's "The Portrait of Zelide" than in the combined pages of Lockhart and Boswell. But such a book as Scott's is almost as rare as dragon's teeth. The great tradition of English biography runs to bulk, and it is a defensible tradition. What price would be too dear for a copy of Boswell's "Life of Jesus" or Eckermann's "Conversations with Shakespeare"—if they existed. Mr. Van Doren observes quite correctly that with the materials available to him his book could easily have been twice as long.

CARL VAN DOREN.

OPINIONS WILL DIFFER as to the artistic merits of Mr. Van Doren's book. He did not of course enjoy this opportunity of personal acquaintance which gave Boswell and Lockhart such a headstart. Neither has he sat out to produce a work of art as such, as was the purpose of Geoffrey Scott. His declared purpose was to find out, as truly as might be, "what Franklin did, said, thought, and felt." No one else, it may be safely said, has more successfully accomplished that task. At the same time, Mr. Van Doren knows that a biography must be more than that. If it omits that elusive element of art which makes the great biographies the notable works they are, the biographer has fallen short of a proper goal.

It seems to me that Mr. Van Doren's artistic accomplishment is considerable. His book has the easiness and the ardor that mark good writing. It is, above all, in spite of the vast amount of material he has assimilated, a personal expression of his own mind. It is full of flashes of insight which take us to the essential Franklin. Any discussion, for example, of Franklin's moral sensibility must be done with great delicacy if we are not to be given a distorted picture of him. Mr. Van Doren describes Franklin's numerous relations with women, discusses the phrases of gallantry which appear in his writings, and remarks that he was not a gallant and seems never to have fallen in love. In eight brief words he then sums up all that is essential to know on this aspect of Franklin's personality: "He went to women hungrily, secretly, and briefly."

Mr. Van Doren has given us a full portrait of one of the great men of the eighteenth century. It is certainly at the top level of American biographical writing. Whether or not the future will accord it a place beside the great biographies would be futile to speculate.

"KEATS AS DOCTOR AND PATIENT," by Sir William Hale-White.

KEATS, who died at the age of 25, spent five years as a medical student and during the year previous to his death was suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis. Both these aspects of his life need expert interpretation, as may be shown by the frequency with which non-medical biographers have gone wrong about them. Few have leaped to so grotesque a conclusion as W. M. Rossetti who, on reading that Keats was the better for taking "a little mercury," assumed forthwith that he was afflicted with syphillis! Apparently Rossetti was unaware of the nature of calomel. But even scrupulously careful writers on Keats have made minor slips due to ignorance of medical matters. The complete and authoritative monograph that Sir William Hale-White has prepared should obviate any future blunders of this kind.

All the evidence shows that Keats was a quick and capable medical student in spite of the fact that his heart was never in the work. At the age of 16 he was apprenticed by his guardian to William Hammond, surgeon. He passed through his apprenticeship in four years instead of the usual five, and was then admitted to Guy's Hospital, where he attended lectures, watched operations and served as assistant or "dresser" to a member of the surgical staff. Before he was 21 Keats had passed his qualifying examinations and was entitled to set up in life as a licensed practitioner. On attaining his majority, however, he quietly informed his guardian that he did not intend to practice his profession. He had discovered his capacity as a poet and had determined at all costs to succeed or fail in literature. But he never regretted his medical training.

There was no trace of sickliness in him. He was an active, lovable, pugnacious little fellow, essentially manly, and until his last year in sturdy health. He was not "predisposed" to consumption. The sore throat that he caught while on a walking trip to Scotland was not of a tubercular type. He undoubtedly contracted the disease while nursing his brother, Tom, who died of it in 1818. When some 15 months later Keats in turn began to spit blood, the doctors shut him in an air-tight room, bled him copiously, and put him on a starvation diet, all according to the best ideas of the time. When all hope was gone they recommended a nerve-racking voyage to Italy. In little more than a year Keats's naturally strong constitution succumbed to his physicians as much as to his malady.

African Pictures

"AFRICAN MIRAGE," by Hoyningen-Huene. (Scribner's, $3.75.)

THIS BOOK should be a welcome sight to travel readers who are weary of books with photographs by the author. This is a book of photographs with text by the photographer. It is a pleasant change. In the books with photographs by the author there is always a good deal of talk about the care that must be taken of the films and the trouble with authorities over the camera. But there are seldom any decent pictures to show for all this trouble. The highlight is usually a hazy shot of some famous building with the intriguing caption, "note native chief in background." Needless to say the native chief is indistinguishable.

Hoyningen-Huene's book has no such fault. As a picture book it is superb, for he is one of New York's ranking commercial photographers. It is true that he poses some of his gorgeous African men and women in poses which are familiar to every John Powers girl. But the natives of the Dark Continent have never been thus photographed in their habitat, and the experiment is interesting and eye-filling.

The Negroes make marvelous subjects for Hoyningen-Huene's art, but the best picture from a literary standpoint is that of Lutembe, a century-old crocodile who used to be fed the missionaries who followed Stanley and Livingston into Africa. The text, taken from the author's diary of the trip, is adequate at first, but is too sparse after the reader's interest has been aroused by the fine pictures. But that, after all, is hardly a fault. You can't expect everything, and the pictures are good enough to overcome almost any obstacle, even a text.

Paranoid Patriot

"THOMAS PAINE, LIBERATOR," by Frank Smith (Stokes, $3.)

"THOMAS PAINE, AMERICA'S FIRST LIBERAL," by S. M. Berthold (Meador, $2).

IN HIS OWN DAY Tom Paine's pen was violent enough to incite men to revolt, to give them courage in times of crisis or to stir such hatred in his enemies that their diatribes in reply were written in vitriol rather than ink. More than a century later his biographers are still affected by that uncompromising fanaticism that made Paine's work so superlatively effective. They condemn his oppressors with almost the same fine paranoic fervor that their subject himself employed.

But if Tom Paine did invaluable service for his country by his writings, he was certainly not insensible of it. Peace was not declared before he was seeking recompense from Congress. When he was imprisoned as a victim of the French Revolution and threatened with the guillotine, he continually pointed out to the American Ambassador how useful he had been. He charged George Washington with ingratitude for not interfering with the internal affairs of France to come to his rescue. When he finally escaped and returned to America, he lost no time applying again for pensions and reward.

Frank Smith's life of this self-satisfied patriot is thorough and interesting if somewhat pedestrian in its style. But this is almost necessarily true of a man of words rather than action. Though completely sympathetic and therefore impatient with Paine's enemies, he never becomes incoherrent with anger in dealing with them as does S. N. Berthold in his rather sloppily written and inaccurate biography.

Anne Lindbergh: Artless Artist

Her Story Has Beauty Great Professionals Might Envy

By William Soskin

ONE OF the finest writers in America is a woman who probably had no intent to become a writer, no torturing ambition to see her name in print or to feel literary laurels on her brow. She probably went through no great esthetic struggle with the philosophies of the arts and never cultivated her prose style to achieve verbal discipline and grace. Yet she as emerged to an artistry which the most meticulous of critics cannot challenge.

Her name is Anne Morrow Lindbergh. She is the wife of a famous flyer and the daughter of a famous American statesman. It happens that she has flown with Col. Lindbergh in hazardous journeys and that she has been able to feel the pulse of excitement, to know the core of experience in these flights.

Ho, you say, it's no great trick to derive good writing from anything so extraordinary as Col. Lindbergh's flights! Think, you say, what such people as Somerset Maugham or Kenneth Roberts or Kay Boyle would produce if they had the opportunity to cover the face of the globe with Lindbergh. You are wrong; these professional writers would undoubtedly have produced interesting manuscripts, but they would be touched with that synthetic reality that literary quality which distinquishes competently manufactured writing from warm, real experience.

MRS. LINDBERGH'S books have grown and flown naturally out of the flights, but they have been nourished and made beautiful by her thorough emotional identification with the experience, by her quick sensitivity to every overtone of danger and of heroism, by her exquisite imagination which can reach out from the cockpit of a plane in mid-Atlantic to touch moments of her childhood or intimations of other worlds.

To her, each flight, each take-off, each landing, each stay in some strange, distant port, each seminar with the stars and the navigation maps, each emergency of fueling or loading, is a complete drama contained within a carefully contrived pattern. She has the warmth of heart and the sharpness of mind to explore these dramas for their innermost and most subtle meanings, and so she can transcend the humdrum world of routine adventure narrative, the dullness of reportorial writing, to produce stories that must be the envy of the practiced professionals.

To many thousands of readers of "North to the Orient" this is not startling news, but it is a fact made even clearer in her new book, "Listen! The Wind," for she has chosen in this case to write of a specific factor in the Lindberghs' world-wide survey of Atlantic air routes in 1933—the take-off from Africa and the flight to Brazil across the south Atlantic—and she has thus confined herself to a carefully circumscribed plot that would test the artistry of any writer. It is a drama of fearful suspense, of nerves and emotions held tight and disciplined in the process of meeting the problems encountered in making the long overwater flight without advance organization and with a plane originally constructed for continental flying. It is a drama of the play of intelligence and human ingenuity in properly balancing constantly changing mechanical equipment and emergency stores, provides an object lesson in the meticulous care and engineering upon which romantic adventures are built.

MRS. CHARLES AUGUSTUS LINDBERGH.

THE WIND—the steady, dry, ominous wind in Santiago that was a wave which climbed and trembled in its height—and never broke; the little surges of wind that died out weakly in Bathurst and left them maneuvering to exploit the slightest breezes so that they might take off; the endless crescendo of anxiety about wind with Mrs. Lindbergh finally obsessed by the subject, dreaming about winds "you could bite into, a wind you could pull hard against, as you could in a boat, heeled over, the sail taut, bowed to the water; the tiller hard against your aching arm; your feet braced on the leeward seat, your cheeks in the wind, warm and tingling underneath but firm and chilled on the surface—like fruit. And the sound of water, rushing, gurgling, racing, tearing under you"—it is the wind that constitutes the main motif of Mrs. Lindbergh's story that holds them earthbound and chained to the strange destinies of peoples in oceanic islands, or sets them free suddently, to roar exultantly and arrogantly above the earth, no longer fawning on the earthly elements for favors.

Mrs. Lindbergh is extraordinarily successful in creating the atmospheres of menace and strangeness under which they work when they are caught on the earth. Whether they are trying to sleep on the vermin-infested cots of some tubercular natives in Santiago, or lying luxuriously in the scented and bathed comfort of the English governor's home in Bathurst, their hosts and their helpers seem somehow to become alien people insulated from the world of their plane and their flights, their radio stations and their navigation instruments, whole worlds apart.

Indeed, one senses a certain insecurity on Mrs. Lindbergh's part, a certain nervousness when she is alone on the kind of earth a simple native clings to, a longing for the world of currents and levers and radio keys and dynamotors by which "sound, mind and spirits cut across space, over water, through wind—unwavering, undeterred, like light through darkness." The air and the airwaves have become familiar to her—almost cozy, despite their vastness.

Her Adventures Richly Lived, Inwardly And Outwardly

TWO ELEMENTS of the book are most appealing. One is the gallantry, the cheerful, quiet courage of "my husband" who comes through all the emotional crises with fine stability. Occasionally Mrs. Lindbergh lets a note of admiration and lovely affection creep into her text, and the effect has much charm. Another element is her habit of reverting to childhood scenes and familiar places—conjuring up the drive from New Jersey to New York, for example, while she is flying the Atlantic, or feeling the lump in her throat when she leaves Bathurst, the same lump she used to feel whenever she left a loved place in New England. They would san then, "journey-proud. She's just journey-proud." And that, Mrs. Lindbergh decided, is what she is now—just journey-proud.

Beyond the obvious causes, there are good reasons for the vast success of Mrs. Lindbergh's writing. She gives us factual, real experience, autobiographical and thus satisfying beyond merely fictional invention. At the same time she gives us the fantasy, the imaginative excursions, the rich emotional reaction which make fiction so desirable to us. She is a gallant woman, exquisitely understanding, and she cannot keep these qualities out of her book.

IF MRS. LINDBERGH'S writing were merely a matter of interpolating such human observations it would be competent but not especially distinguished work. The really marvelous quality of "Listen! The Wind" lies in the fact that she includes so complete a factual story, painlessly and gracefully contained within the body of exciting narrative. The reader may go through agonies of suspense and feel an ominous fatalism because the Lindberghs do not seem able to get their plane off the glass-top water in the harbor at Bathurst; the reader may tremble with anxiety as the plane, trying to exploit the slight flutter of wind that finally arises, shoots against the waves blindly, slap-slapping and straining in the effort to lift its extraordinary load of fuel; but before he is through, somehow, he finds that every technical problem of navigation, every detail of lightening and balancing the plane's load, every mechanical difficulty has become miraculously clear to him—and all this without the show of technical learning which writers are wont to make in this field.

Of Democracies And Leadership

By T. A. B. Barefoot

IT HAS been pointed out that a democracy is only as strong as the aristocracy within it. Certainly a democracy can rise no higher than its leaders, and much of the ineptitude and incompetency of modern democracies seems to follow from a dearth of statesmen willing to take the responsibility of leading, instead of temporizing until the masses might perchance achieve agreement on some policy.

The masses are timid, ignorant, and without foresight, and statesmen who follow the masses can have no foreign policy except to talk peace and to give way to threats of foreign countries—as we have recently seen. But the most forceful democratic leadership would be very different from dictatorship, with its concentration of authority in one individual and its suppression of all play of opinion, rejecting the democratic testing and checking of leadership and the people's right to change their government.

Outside of dictatorship, an extreme form of the idea of leadership appears in the "great man" theory of history, namely, that history is primarily the result of the influence of its outstanding men. This theory seems to be held by two journalists, H. R. Ekins and Theon Wright, who have collaborated in writing of the Chinese scene. Their volume, described truthfully on its jacket as "essentially a reporter's analysis," is not to be read for depth of analysis or accuracy of detail. It does, however, give the general gist of twentieth century Chinese history as it affected Chiang Kai-shek and was in turn affected by him, and gives it in readable form with numerous apt phrases and clever figures of speech.

Its frequent evidences of carelessness and haste are perhaps inevitable in a book endeavoring to deal with last-minute news. The reader must not depend upon this volume for historical facts—whether for details like the date of Yuan Shih-kai's death and of the limiting of tariff rates, or for major points such as that the "scramble for China" caused the Boxer rebellion and not vice versa.

MR. EKINS, in a "Personal Note" claims to have had a ringside seat in the Far East "since before Japan began her Great Adventure on the Asiatic mainland." At the least this should imply having gone there before the Sino-Japanese war of 1894-5 and the seizure of Korea. He actually arrived in 1929 and throughout the book the tendency is to consider 1931 and Chiang Kai-shek as the roots of anti-Japanese feeling in China, and the current undeclared war as stemming merely from them.

But the Chinese feeling of resentment toward Japan has been present in greater or less degree throughout the whole period of aggression, varying with the amount of pressure exerted and the number of people who came in contact with Japanese. The Japanese in China have always displayed a talent for overbearing insolence which in itself is sufficient explanation of the anti-Japanese feeling.

Messrs. Ekins and Wright picture the famous Generalissimo developing from a hot-tempered young opportunist to a statesman with a Messianic concept of duty to his country. They give Mme. Chiang chief credit for this development, no doubt correctly. This is the best part of the book. But numerous comments show lack of mastery of the subject. For example, surprise over the rise of the Soong family in spite of its lack of famous ancestors. Chinese history is full of instances of men or humble origin rising to prominence. This constant turnover, this lack of an hereditary aristocracy, is generally considered one of the reasons for China's long national existence and a proof of her inherent democracy.

The authors are emphatically cynical about the Nine-Power Treaty, insisting that there never was any intention to live up to it. The Nine-Power Treaty was a product of the same period that saw the birth of the League of Nations, and was an honest attempt to prevent future war. It was a self-denying pact conceived while the world-suffering of 1914-1918 was fresh in mind, and it represented a groping effort toward a more reasonable conduct of affairs. To claim that everybody's tongue was in his cheek at the time of signing it is an easy cynicism but manifestly unjust. As evidence of Great Britain's lack of good faith the authors cite the fortification of Singapore as being a violation of the promise not to fortify the Pacific—although Singapore is not situated on the Pacific nor does it lie within the expressly defined area mentioned in the Nine-Power Treaty!

Regarding the future, our author's forecast is unsettled. At one point China and Japan are engaged in a struggle which may exhaust and destroy both nations, but a hundred pages later one or the other is bound to emerge victorious. If the victor is China, the question is posed whether the "Soong dynasty" (Chiang Kai-shek and the bankers of China) or the Communists who have for the time being teamed up with Chiang will prove the stronger faction. For the present this question is academic, and one man's guess (or two men's) is as good as another's.

Illustration by Charles Child for Branch Cabell's new novel, "The King Was In His Counting House," an ironic romance of Renaissance Italy, wherein the author reverts to the manner of the Poictesme tales. (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50.)

IN CONTRAST, "War In China," by Varian Fry, summarizes accurately, lucidly, and succinstly, the events leading up to the Far Eastern tragedy. It is one of the Foreign Policy Association's Headline Books—a primer of 95 pages at a cent apiece. The many graphic little maps and charts by Henry Adams Grant add greatly to its value.

The book closes with a discussion of alternative American foreign policies. This part of the work is weak, not merely because of the brevity but because Mr. Fry takes over from some so-called peace societies much of their defeatist line of argument and their cowardly attitude. Probably the only repetition in the book relates to the fear of being dragged into a war with Japan which "we would have very little chance of winning, and almost no chance at all of gaining anything from." The war would be a long-distance naval and air contest which would instantly cut off from Japan more than half of the raw materials which Japan uses to carry on her present war.

We presumably could not win the war in the sense of going over to Japan and imposing our will on her. But if, as I believe, war with the United States would force Japan out of China, and force her to abandon establishment of a world-conquering military empire, it would be worth billions or tens of billions of dollars to us. The sentence would be more accurate if it read. Let the United States pursue a firm and drastic course, Japan cannot wage war on us, for she could not hope to wage it successfullly and has everything to lose and nothing to gain from it.

'O, Pioneers!'

By Elizabeth Ford

"FIRST THE BLADE" by Mrs. May Merrill Miller, will be accepted, without any mental haggling, as a pioneer novel, the straightforward story of a man and a woman who helped to settle the San Joaquin Valley in California. It has all the trusted and expected props of such a story—creaking wagons stubbornly bound for the next horizon, bad weather, bad weather, bad crops, good crops. The style of the book is sometimes heavy; the words are planted in fourrows turned by a calm, persistent plow.

It takes a second look to realize that "To the Market Place" by Mr. Berry Fleming is also a pioneer novel, but a pioneer novel in reverse. Into New York City, by rail and by motor, throng the settlers of today. The Chrysler Building, the Irving Trust, are the mountains of El Dorado as seen from Hoboken. Instead of the clapboard settlement of Nuevo Esperanza, you have the cluttered, tenement-infested terrain of Greenwich Village.

Carolyn Menifee, bored with life on her father's prosperous tobacco farm in the South, takes an apartment in Manhattan. She is free at last, able to live her own important life. Before she realizes it, she finds herself bushwacking an uncertain breathing space through a jungle of subways and elevated trains. She meets and falls in love with Owen, who is engaged to and eventually marries her best friend, Louisa. Owen is a painter, planning a one-man show, starting his career. Then there is Quinny, the writer, desperately trying to turn out something as good as his first best-selling novel.

By the time Carolyn has got a job in the Museum of Natural History, it is clear that the author is flying, like a homing pigeon toward the familiar frustration novel, twentieth century style.

LEST, HOWEVER, you should think that Mr. Fleming is without resources, he flutters forth again in a new direction. He sends Owen back to the hinterland and the demands of his father's business, and makes of the anemic Quinny a psuedo-proletarian publicity man, pot-boiling with so-called ideas for the betterment of society.

Gradually they all lose sight of the "city of beautiful towers", all except Carolyn, who berates them for giving up their ideals, for deserting the arid plains of Forty-second street, without having conquered them with patience and strength, as Amelie and her husband, Edwin, conquered the San Joaquin Valley. Or, suggests Mr. Fleming through the mouth of Owen, isn't it possible that this country needs more businessmen, and less painters and writers? Weren't both Owen and Quinny "baying at the moon?" Isn't it possible that Carolyn is a triffe sophomoric? Taking that attitude in the best of faith, it remains disconcerting that the sense of futility should still hover about the book even up to the last chapter.

MAY MERRILL MILLER.

WHERE MRS. MILLER is slightly long-winded in getting her story started, Mr. Fleming is definitely long-winded in keeping his going. Once Amelie has weathered her trip from Missouri to California, things begin happening without stopping. Mr. Fleming gets off briskly enough, but later on slows the momentum of his plot with a slough of psychological conversations in which he as well as his characters seems bogged down by several opinions at the same time.

In "First the Blade" there is a walloping good fight between the settlers of the valley and the railway company, which is trying to cheat them out of their land; there is a real Mexican bandit, real sunshine and real fresh air. In "To the Market Place" there is just one mental hangover after another, all of them beautifully reported and beautifully ineffectual. However, you may like your novels chromium-plated and if you do, Mr. Fleming is your man.

Child's Eye View

"THOSE FIRST AFFECTIONS," by Dorothy Van Doren. (Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.)

THE compassion and the deep sense of responsibility which a child feels for the suffering of those it loves is a theme which requires the most sensitive and delicate treatment. So well has Dorothy Van Doren handled it in her latest novel, "Those First Affections," that the closing of the volume leaves the reader with an eerie feeling of having once again lived through the happiness and the anguish of his old childhood. The story of Sarah Powers, which takes her through eight years of adolescence, is the story of any child who has known the confusion of adult protection, who at one moment rests secure in its warmth and the next finds itself unreasonably exiled to a world of darkness and loneliness.

When Sarah, called Sally by her mother and Mike by her father, was six the Powers were secure in the conventional manner of the peaceful first decade of the century. There was a large brick house in Brooklyn, good silver, good linen and a servant. At the head of the household stood Dan Powers, handsome, self-confident, a little domineering, but entirely wrapped up in his young wife and child. He had been a newspaper man, now in some vague but lucrative way associated with race-track gambling. This phase of his life leaves a little disquiet in the reader's mind, for harkening back to that period it is a little difficult to understand that the source of his income brought no criticism from family or friends, all of whom were eminently respectable.

Before Sarah was seven the fragile supports of her father's success had vanished in a quarrel he had with his empolyer, and the seven years that followed were a steady descent into increasing poverty. It is in development of what the years do to the whole family, but especially to the girl, which gives this book its sterling integrity. Ably Mrs. Van Doren depicts the trying position of the tenderly nurtured child, living through crisis after crisis, never fully as a participant, never fully as a spectator. Whatever sense or meaning she gets from the increasingly tragic changes in the family fortunes comes to her from stray bits of conversation, from quarrels, from reconciliations. Seeking to keep her within the realm of irresponsible childhood, trying desperately to protect her against the knowledge of their critical circumstances, her parents condemn her to a nightmare world of fears and uncertainties.

With the years the outlines of the darkening pattern of her family's life become clearer. She sees the disintegration of the strength of a man whose pride had been his boast that his family should never know the meaning of want; she observes the gradual change in relationship between her mother and father, the dependency of the first transferred to the second; she is witness to the shifting bases of love between the two, strengthened in some respects by poverty but corroded by the man's self-hatred and shame at his incompetence.

The sight of her mother's tears brings to the child the first shocking realization that the adult world has no fortification against pain, but when several years later her father breaks down before her she is gripped by a sense of complete horror.

Vermont Valhalla

"VALHALLA AND OTHER POEMS," by Robert Francis. (Macmillan, $2.)

THE QUALITY of crispness in the poetry of New England is something we have learned to watch for as new poets from this venerable locale become articulate. And here is Robert Francis with that sure-fire New England idiom, in a vivid tale of a lonely Vermont family, written in the best blank verse I have read since E. A. Robinson's Amaranths, Talifers, and King Jaspers. It is not an epic—there are no heroes save the hill Valhalla where the family lived—but a dramatic narrative that moves toward its tragic close with gripping premonitions of catastrophe. The catastrophes come, one after another—appendectomies, shotgun weddings, heart attacks, Smith & Wesson suicides—until all the family are dead except the girl, Eden, who married and left the hill. No one is left there. Valhalla is a sort of Egdon Heath that claims them all.

Mr. Francis' blank verse is easy to read; there are none of the entanglements that you find in Robinson's. There are many memorable lines of restrained eloquence, especially when he is writing of the things of "this understated land," trees, food, thunderstorms and landscapes. In comparison with the long poem Valhalla, Mr. Francis' short lyrics seem spare; I wish he had saved them for his next volume.

The Tragic Sense

"REBECCA," by Daphne duMaurier. Doubleday Doran, $2.75.)

THIS IS a novel of the sens tragique de la vie, of intuitive perceptions long in advance of experience. It was her sympathy and understanding that made Maxim deWinter ask the young narrator of the story (except as Mrs. deWinter she is nameless throughout the book), to be his second wife, to help him build a new life over the tragic end to his earlier marriage. Rebecca, the first Mrs. deWinter, had drowned in a sailing accident.

The spirit of the brilliant and capable Rebecca dominates the life of the new Mrs. deWinter as completely as it dominates the life of Maxim, the household and the great estate, Manderly. The symbols of her energy and capability overwhelm the young bride who loses all self-confidence. To further this feeling of inferiority is her sudden rise from "lady's companion" to mistress of one of the great houses of the Cornish coast. Rebecca's dominance rolls in like a green and evil sea. The wave suddenly breaks, and after that the intricate foam of mystery covers the beach. When this is dissolved there is an edge of kelp left to mark the thrust of the wave.

In the facility, the talent to charm readers, Miss duMaurier shows the talents inherited from her grandfather, George du Maurier. There are traces of that devotion which made her "Gerald", such a poignant biography. "Rebecca" is a first-rate novel of characterization.

Dissension In The FCC

Rumors of a fight within the Federal Communications Commission over extension of the license of the country's most powerful radio station are an unfortunate sequel to the dismissal last week of Hampson Gary, general counsel of that agency. Whether or not there is any relationship between the two incidents, they certainly do not enhance public confidence in the FCC.

Chairman McNinch has indicated that Mr. Gary is only one of several members of the commission's staff to be dismissed. That move appears to have the support of a majority of the commissioners.

Insofar as these changes are designed to enhance the efficiency of the FCC they will not be criticized. No individual has any vested right in a governmental position. If a majority of the commissioners believe that the legal department has not functioned effectively, they have a clear obligation to place that division under new management.

The disquieting aspect of Mr. Gary's dismissal is its connection with the long-standing disagreement within the commission. In some quarters it is said that Mr. Gary has been dismissed for his independence rather than inefficiency. It is extremely difficult for an outside observer to formulate a conclusion as to the merits of the case. Matters of that sort must necessarily be left to the judgment of the commission.

For a long time, however, it has been evident that all is not well in the FCC. President Roosevelt is said to have transferred Mr. McNinch to the chairmanship of the commission to direct a "house cleaning." Reasonable efforts in that direction will doubtless meet with general approval. Yet it is obvious that any one individual assigned to the job of straightening out a bi-partisan regulatory commission has an enormous responsibility that calls for cautious procedure.

Chairman McNinch has installed a former associate in the office of general counsel. He has requested authority to make future appointments of attorneys, examiners, a director of information and certain confidential clerks without benefit of civil service when the commission decides that such deviation from the merit system is desirable. While these moves have the support of a majority of the commission members, they suggest the possibility of a dominating influence within the commission that might easily be carried too far.

The objective to be sought is improved efficiency within the commission without any impairment of its independence as a regulatory agency.

Clearer Division Needed

In calling attention to the 1938 mobilization for human needs the President noted the popular assumption that the requirements of private charity have substantially decreased since the Government assumed so much responsibility for relief. The objective of his address was patently to counteract that prevalent attitude.

Mr. Roosevelt has done well to re-emphasize the importance of the work done by social agencies financed through community chests. But it serves no useful purpose to assume, as he does, that "the scope of voluntary action can not be limited, because the very desire to help the less fortunate is a basic and spontaneous human urge." Indications are that this urge has been decidedly affected by realization that an increasing portion of mounting taxes is used to aid the indigent.

Of course, there is still tremendous need for the character-building and social-service activities financed through community chests. Private funds spent for boys' clubs, for hospitalization of needy persons, for aid to homeless individuals and scores of similar purposes are not duplicated by public expenditures. It is of the utmost importance that community service of this sort continue to be rendered.

It is not enough, however, to assure the public that "there is more than enough work for both" public and private agencies functioning in this field. The very fact that four different governmental agencies are engaged, along with the Red Cross, in rehabilitation of families stricken by the New England hurricane tends to weaken the appeal of the private agencies for funds.

A better line of demarcation between public and private functions in the relief of distress, and in providing for human needs, is obviously desirable. With their own responsibilities more clearly defined, the private charitable agencies would have a much stronger basis for their appeals to the public. And the Government would be less inclined to encroach upon fields of social work adequately served through private initiative.

Formula For Labor

Secretary Perkins has made a real contribution to the movement for peace in the divided ranks of organized labor. Prior to her address at Columbus there was little hope that leaders of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization would, of their own initiative, resume negotiations for a settlement of their differences. But neither can reasonably decline to accept the constructive formula which Secretary Perkins holds out to them.

The timing of this suggestion from the head of the Labor Department was perfect. A strong demand for resumption of peace negotiations has just been voiced at the Houston convention of the A. F. of L. President Green had reversed the belligerent tone of his remarks at the beginning of the convention and closed the gathering on a conciliatory note. John L. Lewis had manifested his willingness to resign as head of the C. I. O., if Mr. Green would also retire in the interests of a rapprochement between labor's hostile camps.

Neither organization seemed willing, however, to make the first move toward resumption of negotiations. Each is very much concerned over saving face. The situation definitely called for leadership from some source friendly to labor but aloof from either faction. Of course, Secretary Perkins is the ideal person to assume this responsibility. That she has done so at the psychological moment is evidence of real statesmanship in the delicate field of labor relations.

In calling for a mediation committee consisting of five representatives of each faction and three neutral persons selected by these ten, Secretary Perkins has wisely recognized the weakness of the last labor peace conference. She suggests that one of the neutral members preside and that as a group they "serve principally to keep alive the spirit of mediation and conciliation, to solve minor and immediate points of conflict between the partisan members and to suggest new and varied solutions for old problems."

The service of such mediators to smooth the way toward compromise may easily mark the difference between failure and success. Much will depend, of course, upon the conciliation experts selected. But if there is a will to peace on both sides it should not be difficult to agree upon neutral committee members with sufficient prestige to guarantee a fair examination of the entire dispute.

It is difficult to see how either the A. F. of L. or the C. I. O. can find fault with Secretary Perkins' proposal. Her formula is scrupulously fair to both. It would leave the solution of this futile row in the hands of labor groups where it belongs. And at the same time it offers more hope for a satisfactory agreement than any suggestion brought forward since the schism occurred.

Should either group refuse to do its part to make the suggested negotiations a success, it must be prepared to accept responsibility for prolonged warfare in the ranks of labor.

Better Out Of Politics

Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for Governor of New York, opened him campaign last week with a very effective indictment of the administration of that State's unemployment insurance act.

By citing instances of individual hardship, due to the delays and mistakes of the enforcement officials, Mr. Dewey undoubtedly has made the public realize the importance of efficient administration of social insurance laws. In so doing he has performed a service to the community. But one wishes that he had not made a political issue out of the inevitable errors and delays incidental to the inauguration of a very extensive experimental type of social insurance legislation.

It is easy to promise that a Republican Governor in Albany would provide a businesslike administration of the law. But the fact is that the task assigned the organization in charge of job insurance was so overwhelming that a partial breakdown could hardly have been avoided. The great scope of the insurance plan, and the fact that benefits began to be payable at a time when unemployment was rapidly increasing, go far toward explaining why a large number of insured workers have had to wait months instead of weeks before receiving the sums due them.

As in the case of other forms of social legislation applicable to workers, a difficult initial testing period was to have been expected. In the present instance, mistakes have had especially painful, even tragic, consequences for thousands of unemployed workers. If Mr. Dewey wishes to make a political issue out of such errors, however, he should view the problem in larger perspective. The delays encountered in administering the unemployment insurance act are a virtually inevitable outcome of launching complicated reform plans under unpropitious conditions.

A businesslike administration cannot be brought into existence suddenly to cope with the multifarious problems resulting from passage of a far-reaching unemployment insurance act. Efficiency in administration develops in course of time as the result of chastening experience. That is why it is important to introduce social reforms gradually, on a restricted scale that reduces unavoidable initial errors to a minimum.

Mr. Dewey might well point the moral of this experience while refraining from partisan attacks upon an organization that must be kept free of political entanglements if it is to become really efficient in discharging its responsibilities to the unemployed.

Workers' Rail Program

After the prolonged and expert study which for years has been devoted to railway problems, one would not expect many new ideas in the rehabilitation program offered by the railway unions. Nonetheless, the spokesmen of the employes have shown excellent judgment in the selection and presentation of specific recommendations.

One of the outstanding characteristics of the plan submitted by George N. Harrison, of the Association of Railway Labor Executives, is its recognition of the imperative need for action to assist the roads. Gone is the old attitude of indifference toward their plight, the former skepticism regarding the very existence of a financial problem.

The unions now realize that the roads are seriously handicapped by the lack of comprehensive regulation of competing transportation agencies designed to eliminate existing discriminations. Hence they urge that "all forms of transportation on land, water, and in the air should be subjected to substantially the same character of Federal regulation, with favors to none." Labor, in other words, has underwritten the steadily growing demand for a unified transportation policy.

Another helpful recommendation, adopted by the unions as their own, is a change in rate-regulatory policies that would permit the carriers to build up reserves in prosperous years so they would not be compelled to seek rate increases in years of bad business. Mr. Harrison also suggests Federal loans to enable the roads to secure new types of equipment, light and speedy, in order to "make the plant more flexible and adjustable to meet the seasonal as well as cyclical changes in the volume of business." The union plan even accords a qualified approval to consolidations declared by the ICC to be "in the public interest," despite the fact that they would entail loss of employment for rail labor.

The one great defect of the report is its failure to differentiate between long-range requirements and the present financial emergency which has compelled the current effort to reduce railway wages. Labor's program for the carriers is one that would require a long time to put into effect. Indeed, most of the reforms proposed have often been urged.

The immediate need now is for a reduction in outlay that would enable the roads to strengthen their financial position and save a number of those on the ragged edge of insolvency from passing into the hands of receivers. While wage cuts would provide no permanent solution of the basic problems confronting the carriers, they would afford temporary relief from the pressure of high operating outlays and low operating incomes. Further expansion of business would also relieve this pressure, but can scarcely remove it.

Leaders of the unions are evidently aware that their fortunes are bound up with those of the roads that employ them. This is clearly shown in Mr. Harrison's rehabilitation program. If the advance in co-operative thinking there shown is applied to the wage issue it will not prove the insurmountable problem it is sometimes pictured.

Good Eggs

How does you all want yo' aigs this mawnin'?

Why, naturally, with the sunny side up.

Well, then, sample this cheerful story reported by the ubiquitous AP from Federalsburg, Md.:

A "pretty, potent pullet," grateful (says the imaginative correspondent) for being saved "by a bare pin-feather" from the frying pan, laid three eggs in one day.

The incident furnishes additional proof (if any were needed) that, commercially or gastronomically speaking, the American national bird is not the eagle, celebrated in song and story, but the domestic fowl, which has been through the years, and still remains, the world's greatest manufacturer of breakfast food.

And the Great American Hen is more than that. She is the helpful friend of the newspaper worker (country correspondent and make-up man alike), the economist and the statistician. Whether it be in a coop, a newspaper column or a row of figures, she brightens the corner where she is.

There may be Doubting Thomases who look askance at such genial items as this one from Federalsburg. Let them do the natural thing. A little salt improves an egg.

And these are good eggs every one. It is unfortunate that they recall a more ancient and infinitely sadder story of three eggs. Two bad.

On The Doorstep

Diderot In Georgetown

ALTHOUGH I went in the antique shop looking for old andirons, I forgot about them when confronted with Mr. X's latest find. Mr. X is not old and bearded as antique dealers of tradition are; he is young and temperamental and this morning he was both mournful and excited, if you know what I mean.

"I don't want to sell it," he said. "But I have a nibbie, and things being what they are I may have to sell, but I hope not." He led me to an old mahogany cupboard and opened the doors for me to see his treasure. There were two piles of great leather-bound volumes. The title page of the top one he pulled out read:

Encyclopedie, ou
Dictionnaire Raisonne des Sciences
Des Arts et Des Metiers
Mis en ordre & publie par M. DIDERTO
M DCC LI

Yes, there was a full set of Diderot's Encyclopedia—17 volumes of text, 4 volumes of table and 13 of plates. What a handful of history! Mr. X was full of details about them—but he confessed he had been consulting the Encyclopedia Britannica!

My knowledge about the Diderot work was rather vague. I thought back to my school days and courses in European history. Every textbook on modern Europe has just a few paragraphs on the Encycopaedist. I can see those paragraph headings on the margin in heavy type: "Diderot," or, "Influence of the Encyclopaedists." It had always seemed very dull to me—one just couldn't imagine a mob being influenced by an encyclopedia.

But now seeing and holding these volumes stirred my imagination and interest in the French Revolution much more than did the recent Hollywood picturization. It is easier to feel that these very tomes had more to do with bringing on the revolution than all Marie Antoinette's follies. Maybe if I found the Queen's necklace in a Georgetown shop I would be stirred in the same way. But I felt that these volumes held something more sparkling—ideas. And they aroused an interest in the man who had so labored to gather together all the new ideas and knowledge of science of his time to make them available to the public. For it was the fact that Diderot tried to give the world the philosophical teaching of Voltaire, Rousseau and Turgot that made the encyclopedia a danger to the "entrenched greed" of the day—the French monarchy and the church.

Poor Diderot, his life was a turbulent one—privately and publicly. Privately he was in trouble with his wife and publicly with his pen. It is the latter trouble that made history. His essay on philosophic and religious questions aroused the enmity of the ecclesiastical party and he was imprisoned yet apparently not discouraged for he was no sooner out of jail than he embarked on his great work of collecting and editing the encyclopedia.

At first it was to be a French translation of an English encyclopedia by Chambers. Then Diderot conceived the notion of using the encyclopedia to give voice to the new school of ideas then stirring the intellectual minority.

One must realize how little widespread public enlightenment there was at that time in order to understand why the publication of these serious studies on philosophy, religion and economics was such a menace to the established order. The conditions which produced the revolution were developing and the trouble pot simmering. But without wider distribution of knowledge and discussion of the great social questions the pot would not have boiled over.

Threatened with suppression after the first two volumes appeared, and finally suppressed by arret du conseil after the eighth volume, Diderot continued his work clandestinely. He was protected by a few powerful friends—among them Malesherbes and Mme de Pompadour—but many contributors deserted him so that he was forced to do much of the writing and all the editing for the bulk of the work. In spite of his labors he found that at the last minute the printers were deleting his articles of material they thought too strong. When he discovered this he had a few copies made from the original manuscript but the main edition was expurgated.

There were about four thousand subscribers to the complete edition; but since the royal order called for all copies to be delivered to the authorities and burnt, it is doubtful that many complete editions survived. I wonder how many of them are in existence, besides the one in Georgetown.

One of the unexpurgated editions is in the library at St. Petersburg. (Leningrad to us.) Catherine the Great had befriended Diderot when he was in want and bought his entire library from him while urging him to keep it in Paris as long as he desired, I suppose he took it to Russia when he spent several months at her court.

The Soviet Government should appreciate the historical significance of this encyclopedia. They know something about the value of ideas in getting a revolution started as well as about the suppression of ideas in consolidating a revolution.

Few private collectors would be interested in these volumes, but no doubt some historical society or educational institution would like to add them to their shelves. But not many people looking for old andirons would be customers for the Diderot Encyclopedia. Still I can see why Mr. X hopes he won't have to sell them.

Totalitarian Muse

TOTALITARIAN fiction is not new, but it is new in the United States. When John Dos Passos writes a novel, he is no longer writing of the manners of a caste or a culture in the old sense. His characters are like boys studying in the blare of a radio. While they go through the routine of living, the wash and backwash of standardized social feelings runs through and over their minds. They are parts of all they hear, and their private thoughts are suggested by what everyone is thinking.

When Thomas Wolfe clipped off and published another section of that news reel which his death stopped in the middle of a scene, something equivalent was happening. In him the stream of consciousness, which Joyce had made a classic way of telling a story, had become a description of contacts. Here was America, no longer a land, but rather a familiar society which looked homogeneous until a sensitive soul "contacted" it (the word exactly suggests the experience). Then what he saw was a scurry of individuals who did not fit into the pattern trying to escape and failing, and a drift of the vast majority unaware that they were only half alive.

How far is this movement going? Must we be reminded by every novel we read that the price of nails is involved in many love stories, or that the rise of anti-Semitism in Europe sets off reactions in America which must be taken into account when telling over again the old story of the small-town boy who made good? Will the novelist of the future have to be a sociologist, an economist, a psychologist, and a historian?

Certainly not. And yet it is to be hoped that he will take all cargo of that kind aboard that he can safely stow under the hatches. It is folly to suppose that a society which reads a daily paper, sees a news reel weekly, and hears the radio every other hour, is going to be novelized successfully by the old-time story teller who assumed that a "character" was an independent personality instead of a consciousness, floating in a stream of impressions.

It would be interesting, for example, to rewrite "Vanity Fair" as a totalitarian novel with complete awareness of its proper extensions into the economics of Great Britain in the Napoleonic era. It would be even more interesting to retell "Oliver Twist" or "David Copperfield" in the light of the new science of adolescent psychology.

Would they be better novels? Yes—if done with the same genius as inspired the originals. Of course they would be better. But let no publisher rush to invite rewrite men to get out 1938 models of the classics of English fiction. There is a catch in the argument. Totalitarian fiction is much harder to write than the books in which the author did not have to know that his heroes were products of their social organism; or did not have to imitate a society in which printing, audition, and transportation had blurred the sharp edges of individualism.

Relativity Of Roominess

A FEW days ago the Old Timers traveled to Washington and visited Mrs. Arabella Mixing and her sister, Miss Cherry Simplee, in their new apartment. They were, they explained, a committee appointed by their wives, at the moment regettably unable to leave home, to make a report on the new place and its furnishings.

"Isn't it dear?" cried Miss Cherry. "Room to tûrn around here. Couldn't in the last place. Had to go into the kitchenette sideways."

Miss Cherry's laughter pealed and the Old Timers laughed with her. Miss Cherry's laughter always demands, and gets, company. Moreover, she wasn't exaggerating—much—for she is tall and broad and weighs an even 200 pounds.

Mrs. Mixing showed them around, explaining the good points of this and that; the full length mirror on the door of the commodious bathroom; the French doors in the living room, one to the hall and one to the porch overlooking the garden (mustn't forget the garden); the big bedroom and its twin beds; the good-sized and well-equipped kitchenette; the excellent lighting effects; the tastefully painted walls and ceilings; the fine woodwork; and other delightful little things as they occurred to her. And then, going swiftly from one thing to another, as is her habit, she concluded, "And the furniture and pictures show off to so much better advantage. What kind of a trip did you have?"

"Tolerable," said Casual Smith. "Our navigator and pilot, Mac here, tooled the car along at a spanking clip through the fog."

"Mixing your figures again," said Capt. Ebenezer Longbow.

"It's just as easy," said Casual Smith, modestly. "We started in the candlelight of dawn and the fog crept over the hill and snuffed out the candle. Then the rain poured down and the cars we met churned up the water like speed boats."

"All you need is a plane, a train, a bicycle and a kiddy-car to be a complete transportation system," said Demosthenes McGinnis.

"Well, you got here," said Miss Cherry, "and now that you're here, I guess I'll put a little more water in the soup."

Casual Smith eased himself into a comfortable chair and stretched his legs "It's a small world," said he, "but there's plenty of room in it for all its people without crowding. There's no sense in being cramped."

"And in a sense," said Casual Smith, "people are closer together in the country than in the town, for they know their neighbors; and in the city your next door neighbor may be a stranger. And there are other differences in crowded places. When Constitution avenue is lousy with traffic (and in this connection there is some justification for the disgusting slang expression—I have looked at the avenue from an airplane) there is still an impressive aloofness about the place with its imposing buildings on one side and its wide green spaces on the other. It hasn't the grubby homeyness, say, of Anacostia's busiest corner, at the foot of Good Hope road, the gateway to Southern Maryland, a corner where you can buy hundreds of things for a few cents apiece, scores of things for a few dollars, and a number of things, cars and real estate and the like, in the higher brackets."

Capt. Longbow looked reassuringly at the others. "He has probably a glimmer of an idea about something," he said, hopefully.

Casual Smith nodded cheerfully. "Right, Eb," said he. "Hidden in the murk of my rhetoric is the thought that while I like a friendly contact with my fellow man, I object to promiscuity."

"Some of these days," prophesied Casual Smith, "our big cities will disappear. Country planning will take the place of city planning. Manufacturing districts will know unity without congestion. Where there is an acre of floor space in a building, whether it be three stories or ten stories, it will be centered in two acres of ground. The same proportion will apply to public buildings and dwellings. Bungalow dwellers will still be near enough to each other for morning greetings. And that doesn't mean that every acre will have its building. The farmer may plow all the fields necessary and there will still be ground enough for golf clubs and for Mother Nature to turn around. She won't have to understudy Miss Cherry and go into her laboratory sideways."

"Yeah," said Capt. Longbow, "You'll have Mother Nature formalized and all her children regimented. I prefer her a little wild."

"But not too wild," said Casual Smith. "There's a lot of buncombe in this back-to-nature stuff. I notice that the most passionate lover of nature wants his jungles made passable and his turbulent streams bridged. And when he goes hunting he wants something more than a stick and a stone as weapons. As a matter of fact a man may love nature whole-heartedly in a kitchen garden. She is all the more attractive when she is somewhat disciplined."

"I have heard you say pretty much the same thing about women in general, Casual," said Mrs. Mixing.

"That was careless of me," said Casual Smith. "That's one of the universal truths that a wise man keeps to himself."

The League Today

By An Observer

Geneva During The Crisis

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THE NINETEETH Assembly was the most extraordinary in the League's existence. It opened the day of the Nuremburg speech; continued throughout the negotiations; and concluded the day after the Munich agreement.

The scene was extraordinary. War was on the threshold; mobilization orders were following one on the other; report and rumor flew wild; even the usually stoic Swiss had soldiers mounted on many bridges and plunged Geneva into an ominous blackout at the most critical moment.

Several hundred delegates and experts from over 50 countries, plus journalists from even more, paced anxiously back and forth in the Assembly lobbies, trying to do their daily work but in reality affixed to the latest rumor, telephone, or broadcast. It was almost impossible for them to keep their minds on their normal activities.

GENEVA was practically speaking, completely outside the negotiations, except for the startling speech of Litvinov defining Soviet policy for the first time and throwing a beam of light on previous private discussions.

Unexpectedly enough, the Czechs did not even present their case; they took the view that they were too hurt and wounded and their position too clear to justify explanation. For the first time since Locarno, neither the British nor the French foreign minister was present. Despite this, nearly a score of other foreign ministers were on hand, particularly from the smaller states, and Geneva again proved to be the clearest and most impartial observation post in Europe.

It would be rash to attempt to estimate what the long-term effect will be of the ceaseless discussions which took place at this international center at the moment of Europe's greatest crisis.

MAXIM LITVINOV

His speech startled the League Assembly.

Geneva circles, as a rough generalization, viewed the release from war with a relief as great as any others, perhaps even greater in the sense that war would have destroyed everything that the League for 18 years has been trying to build. Equally, however, they perhaps viewed the method with more alarm than others because they saw it as a startling triumph of violence in opposition to all the methods of peaceful negotiation and discussion which the League has tried, however, unsuccessfully, to establish.

OPINION as to the eventual consequences is divided. Some feel that the League has had a terrible blow, which weakens it greatly; others that there will inevitably be a comeback at a not too distant date. Perhaps the truth is between the two. The present debacle has certainly vividly illustrated the necessity of international co-operation.

Its biggest lesson is that the world is now unmistakably in the international era; that a conflict in Central Europe has brought in everyone, including the President of the United States and many Latin-American countries; that the days of isolationism, particularism, and provincialism are gone; that even the most obdurate foes of the consultative method, such as Hitler and Mussolini, have had to come to it; and that the very rawness of a settlement under ultimatum shows the necessity of a better and cleaner method. Already, within the first few days, a reaction is setting in; many elements in the big countries are becoming critical; and practically all elements in the smaller countries are frightened.

It is a tribute to the soundness and toughness of the League that even in these circumstances the regular work of the assembly was carried through. The committees kept up their various agendas; a large section of the worldlife of today was submitted to review and given what further stimulus was possible. This showed more dramatically than anything else possibly could that much of the League is grounded deep in the international life of today and is sure to build up even stronger in the future.

THE MOST general and long-term question was, perhaps, how best to organize international relations. The League took the opportunity, after recent shocks and experiences, to tidy up a bit and to concentrate on its organization. On the much discussed question of sanctions many important declarations were made which, while not formally amending the Covenant, tend nevertheless to make article 16 voluntary rather than automatic. As regards mediation and peaceful settlement, a preponderance of opinion was in favor of a freer application of article 11 by not including the votes of the disputants in the assessment of unanimity.

On the psychological question of the separation of the Covenant from the peace treaties, a protocol was opened for signature giving the former a wholly independent status. As regards the co-operation of non-member States in the League's technical and non-political work a wide resolution was adopted welcoming such co-operation and offering non-members the opportunity of making any suggestions they may desire to make for its extension. The budget was tightened up once again, despite the good news of a surplus of over 4,500,000 Swiss francs. Detailed plans for making better known both the ideals and work of the League were also approved, including a generous appropriation of 1,200,000 Swiss francs for participation in the New York World's Fair.

Specific political questions bulked large in the Assembly. Armed conflict in China and Spain provided an unhappy accompaniment to the major crisis in Europe. The Assembly reaffirmed that Japan's military actions could be justified neither by law nor self-defense, stressed the obligation of all states to help China "in her heroic struggle against invasion," and, while deciding that all elements necessary for co-ordinated action "are not yet assured," held, nevertheless, that League members are entitled "to adopt individually the measures provided for in Article 16."

As regards Spain, the Assembly received an unexpected proposal from the Spanish government to carry out the immediate and complete withdrawal of all non-Spanish combatants on its side, accompanied by a request for an international commission to see that the offer was fully executed. While certain elements opposed this on the grouds that Spain was a matter for the London non-intervention committee and not for the League, the proposal was eventually accepted and the commission is now in formation.

AND NOW the pity of it all—to think that the big and constructive work which the League is so well equipped to do for the betterment of mankind has to be held up or crippled by war and violence. Never did the contrast between what is and what might be stand out more clearly than when one came out of one of the committee rooms, with all its hopes and promises of something better for the human race, and found oneself in a group of anxious and strained individuals trying to see if the latest bit of news meant the irrevocable decision of war.

At times tempers were thin and emotions were expressed with violence against this indescribable folly. It must regretfully be recorded, however, that there was rather more a tendency to run away from the disaster of war than to concentrate with redoubled energy on the organization of peace.

And the future? Few would be categorical at this moment. Some feel that the world has merely postponed its crisis for an even greater one; others that we are at the beginning of a slow readjustment toward a calmer Europe. Both would agree, however, that we face a period of big power domination where for the time being force will be more powerful than law, where the small nations will feel uncomfortable and ill at ease.

It is that concentration of power in a few hands without organization or control, plus the apathy of others who should be aggressively active for another system, which constitutes the greatest danger to the movement for a central world agency of international co-operation based on law and justice.

Little fear is felt of the ultimate outcome over generations; the question is: what price chaos? In other words, the question in many minds is not whether the League method is right; it is rather as to how long it will be before the better, more positive, more constructive elements in human society wake up from their lethargy and demand that the rich opportunities which life has to offer be given full freedom of expression unhindered by relics of barbarism.

A sad illusion clouds the troubled eyes
Of weary statesmen, baffled by displays
Of monstrous arrogance. Their wistful gaze
Is taunted by mirages. Nowhere rise
The palms of peace, and Bedouin law defies
God's caravans that tread the chartless days.
The Nation's might must curb the tribe that preys
While no law bans piratical emprise.

From ancient springs that swell to floods are poured
Expanding tides of uncontrolled desire
Against whose lethal streams the Nations' breath
Is wasted. Vainly might the peoples' sword
Be limited; war, gutless, must expire;
Their States will cease to covenant with Death.

The Eternal Question Mark

Our Bus Drivers

Defended Against Charges of Recklessness And Rudeness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to an item in a Washington newspaper, the members of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association are complaining that the Capital Transit Co. bus drivers are a menace to the safety of motorists and bus passengers, and have requested the company and the Public Utilities Commission to investigate the matter.

If the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association thinks that the bus drivers are a menace to the safety of motorists and passengers, they should ask the Capital Transit Co. to give their drivers a longer running time on their schedule. Then the drivers can take the time to give the public a smoother ride.

The drivers have to stop and start as quick as they can, in order to maintain their schedule, as several slow stops take precious seconds, amounting to minutes in that distance, and if they don't maintain their schedules, they are called on the carpet to explain why they don't.

My advice to A. J. Briscoll is, don't hound the bus driver, but take it up with Mr. E. D. Merrill, who is in a position to do something about it.

My hat is off to the boys who drive on Connecticut avenue!—B. Fair, Brentwood, Md., Oct. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I appreciate the suggestion in the letter to the Editor that the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association take up with us the matter of unsafe operation by our bus drivers.

Schedules are designed to give sufficient time to operate between terminals within the properly designated speed limits and operating in a safe and reasonable manner. In addition to the running time a certain amount of layover at the end of the line is provided so as to make up for unexpected delays and to take care of the variation in running time due to unpredictable traffic conditions.

Our patrons as a whole, we believe, are anxious to have an expeditious journey to their destination, and I have just recently had complaints from a friend that buses are "killing time" in order not to run ahead of schedule at certain periods during the day.

Of course, our instructions are that operators shall drive safely at all times, regardless of whether or not they are behind schedule time. Frequent checks are made as to the time required and adjustments in running time are made from time to time to take account of changes in traffic conditions.

If any particular operator is observed driving in an unsafe manner, we would appreciate being advised so that we can give individual instruction, which is always more effective than general orders.

I appreciate the applied compliment to the drivers who are trying to do a hard job skillfully and safely.

The attached letter came to my desk this morning and I am passing it on to you for such use as you may care to make of it. I have talked with the writer on the telephone and he has no objection to its being published if you so desire, but asks that his name be withheld.

E. D. MERRILL,
President, Capital Transit Co.
Washington, Oct. 14.

[Enclosure.]

Dear Mr. Merrill: It has come to my attention that a complaint has been made as to the "reckless, careless and life endangering driving" of some of the Chevy Chase drivers, and I take this means of defending these men.

I live in the 5400 block of Connecticut avenue, and ride around all day, all over the city, on street cars and buses; in fact, have every pass from the very first one up to date. With all my riding up and down Connecticut avenue I have yet to find these men discourteous, reckless or inconsiderate.

This is written in all sincerity, and I would appreciate your passing this kind word along to the men.

Washington, Oct. 13. B. E.

Lesson

Egoists like Hitler live on publicity, and newspapers thrive on incidents, such as the present, and to my dumb reasoning it seems like Government control should, at least, decide on what page and what size of type should be used and how loud the whisper on the radio, at this critical moment. We didn't get even a forewarning of the present beautiful weather we are having. All space and air devoted to a fool egoist. I often ponder over the question, "has man learned any lesson since he got the big apple?" —Merle Hostetter, Washington.

Excerpts From Our Letters

Souvenir

We are two of the visitors who throng to Washington each year. We've come on our honeymoon. We've come to see all the things we have learned and read about our Nation's Capital, and we are not disappointed. The entire population seems to turn out to insure our complete comfort, to cater to our every wish. But we don't know what to think when we find pictures or reliefs of our White House, Department of Justice, Capitol, Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial on so many souvenir novelties—and beneath or in back of identifying inscriptions we read, "Made in Japan!" Surely Americans are capable of carving or stamping ash trays! We truly hope the picture postcards that we are resorting to as our only souvenirs of Washington were printed on freemen's soil.—Two American Citizens, Newark, N. J.

Sabbath

I inclose a news clipping from The Post of September 26. One would think Mr. Roosevelt was president of some foreign godless country like Russia or Germany instead of a Christian Nation. A regatta should never have been allowed on the Sabbath day.—A Subscriber, Washington.

Headache

The press of any country can make peace or war. A nation which has had war knows what a headache it is.

Hirohito picked his spots. Mussolini has reached his limit. Hitler is trying to regain prestige for Germany. Great Britain has reached her peak of land grabbing; France is her catspaw. But Uncle Sam is wise. When other nations see Uncle Sam's strength they will be careful not to tread on our toes. We must prepare not to be butchered like China—J. B. Kellogg, New Orleans, La.

Group

I have noted with pleasure references from time to time in The Post to the Oxford Group and its work. In these trying days positive news of reconstructed lives and relationships is eminently heartening. I know personally of renewed power and purpose in my own life as a result of facing the challenge of Christ presented by the Group. I hope you will see fit to continue your coverage of this spiritual revolution.—Grover L. Hartman, Washington.

Fantastic

I rate no degrees in economics, but even the dullest person must wonder at the presumptuous interference with Henry Ford's affairs. To dictate whom he shall hire or retain seems positively fantastic! He has been of the sinew of the Nation's prosperity. His altruism and consideration for his employes has been a matter of pride to the country. The poison of dissatisfaction seems to have been sown to reach all sections of the country, aiming first at character and morals, and creating that inertia and loose reason without which no successful attack could be achieved against national prosperity.—J. H. M., Washington.

Co-operation

Roosevelt can never lay whatever failures he may have to a lack of "co-operation!" (Note the recent wails of his supporters to the contrary!)

If he now encounters opposition it is because only fools sit still in a train aiming for a precipice. Among all the sworn servants of the Government there are bound to be some to whom duty to principle is greater than loyalty to person and brave enough to ignore threats to their own personal ambition in discharging it.—J. H. M., Washington.

Tax

Concerning the poll tax in Virginia one gets the idea that only those voting need pay it. My husband and I have lived in Arlington County nine years and have paid poll taxes for all that time, in spite of the fact that we do not vote in this State. Several years ago we objected to the poll tax and were given to understand that we had to pay it, whether we voted here or not. We would like to know the truth about it.—D. L. C., Arlington, Va.

De Leon

Adding to the fact established by Karl Marx that there is a class struggle and that it could be terminated only through the emancipation of the working class, Daniel De Leon, who was America's foremost Socialist thinker, gave us the first workable program, applying the Marxian theory to America. This program is now the fundamental principle of the Socialist Labor Party of America which defines socialism as: "That form of society in which production is carried on solely for use (in contradistinction to the present production for profit), and in which the land, implements, and plants of production are owned collectively by the useful producers (not by the Government), these productive means being administered through the industrial organization of these producers, who today are the wage workers. This precludes the existence of political government, and implies the substitution therefor of an industrial government, a government having its basis of representation in the various industries, each worker with a voice and vote, in contradistinction to the present political government with its basis of representation in purely political (geographical) and arbitrary divisions."—A. A. Albaugh, Washington, D. C.

Technological

It is the nature of the New Deal to destroy chances for advancement of such private citizens as are fitted to continue technological invention. Is the proper sphere of technological intelligence to be found under the saddle of and in the harness of political intelligence or unintelligence? Men who ride and drive the horses are in principle as much consumers of the horse as if they ate its flesh. Political leaders who would saddle and harness the technological leader with their technological purposes and so thwart the purposes of his technological efforts are not political leaders, but are political cannibals.—Mary Allen Grant, Sparta, Ill.

A Bad Example

Did The Dictators Get Their Ideas From The U. S.?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Behind and far above the current discussions pro and con about the European crisis, are certain facts which to me are as visible as a house afire on top of a hill at midnight. I would like to present these facts to Post readers who are interested in finding possible solutions for the present troubled state of world affairs.

Ever since the United States emerged from the World War as a creditor nation and as a world leader, the other nations have looked to America more and more as an example for them to follow. Other countries have adopted in their own ways many of the good things which America has done, and have also copied much of the foolishness which we are so fond of exploiting and publicizing. The results of such copying are evident now in the way things are moving in Europe.

Ever since the birth of the American Republic we have had strife and frequent bloodshed between our laboring classes and the owning classes. Without full knowledge of such struggles in America, European countries began to copy our struggles and we saw the birth of Communism in Russia. Others like Germany and Italy torn between a choice of copying America, or Russia, and having to cling somehow to the old order of things to which they were traditionally accustomed, turned to Fascism.

When European debtors had observed the ease by which America's debtors of Wall Street were able to repudiate their debts without endangering their credit, then we saw them evade payments of their war debts to the United States, without endangering their future chances of credits for another war.

When passions and hatreds that were aroused in America during the World War had to find other outlets after the Armistice, we saw millions of American men eagerly paying $10 a head to join an organization and parade themselves in bedsheets while asserting their Aryan supremacy. Their hatred towards the Germans was turned into a hatred towards fellow Americans who happened to be Jews, Catholics, or Negroes but who were just as good Americans and citizens. A few years later Hitler copied our KKK in "bedsheets" of a more military design, and venting its hatred on the Catholics and Jews.

A positive effort was made by President Harding to replace war hatreds and suspicions with a feeling of friendship and international cooperation by means of the Washington Disarmament Conference. America permitted the issue to become clouded by domestic politics, greed, law evasion (the flaunting of the Prohibition Amendment), and a wild orgy of stock market speculation which could only end in bad government, breeding of more hatreds, crime, and economic disaster. All of our foolishness was flaunted in the face of the world via press, radio, motion pictures, and by our own tourists visiting abroad. Despite the good example set by America in disarming, other nations watched our conduct in other directions and wisely tore up paper instead of ships. Later they copied our other forms of national foolishness in their own ways and had their own forms of bad government, breeding of hate, crime, and economic depression.

Only a turning of this hate into friendship can eliminate depressions. We have seen this happen at home under a New Deal which could have led us out of depression had it not been for frequent arousing of class and political hatreds.

When President Roosevelt stood in Franklin Field two years ago amidst thousands of hysterical and wildly cheering politicians and New Deal job holders, and vented his spleen on the "Economic Royalists," who can say that Hitler did not listen in on this speech and not understanding the words, was able to analyze only the hysteria and emotional response of a definitely aggressive speech directed against opponents and critics? We soon began seeing and hearing Hitler shouting hysterical fighting words against any who dared oppose or criticize him. His 'economic royalists" this time were Czechoslovakia's politicians who dared oppose his will to dominate Middle Europe.

Unless this situation has gone so far as to render all hope of peace entirely futile, it is reasonable to assume that conditions will remain tense in Europe until our own elections are over and the mud slinging here has subsided to make way for common sense. With more messages from the President in the tone of his recent telegrams to Hitler, and more sober, unemotional radio speeches like those of Secretary Hull, it is reasonable to believe that Christmas this year may actually be a season of "peace on earth, good will to all men."

The Two Price Plan

By Ernest Lindley

Mr. Wallace's Newest Idea

Copyright, 1938, by The Washington Post.

HENRY A. WALLACE'S proposal to resolve the paradox of plenty in the presence of need in the case of several farm products by using a two-price system seems to have caught the imagination of many of his fellow New Dealers. Just how the plan would work remains obscure. But the motive behind it must appeal to everyone who feels a repugnance either to curtailing production or to dumping abroad surpluses which are needed by American citizens.

The idea that artificial means of increasing domestic consumption would go a long way toward solving the farm problem has been bubbling in the Roosevelt Administration for five years. Along with crop curtailment and soil conservation, the Department of Agriculture has been encouraging greater home production and consumption of vegetables and meats in the single-crop farm areas. In 1933, the Federal Government began buying various surplus farm products and distributing them to people on relief or on the edge of relief.

During the five years, ended July 1, 1938, the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, and its predecessor, the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation, spent approximately $425,000,000 in buying processing, and distributing surplus farm products, from apples to wheat. In theory, this was an application of the two-price system, the lower selling "price" being zero. The proposal now is to sell certain surplus farm commodities for something between zero and the current market price. Mr. Wallace cited as a model the scheme set up by Mayor LaGuardia in New York City, whereby the poor can buy milk for 8 cents a quart, as against the regular market price of 12 cents.

THE DOMESTIC two-price system would be applied, Mr. Wallace indicated, to commodities for which the demand is elastic. In the usual economic meaning, an elastic demand is one which rises when the price falls and falls when the price rises. The consumption of wheat is notably inelastic: changes in prices have no appreciable effect on it. The demand for cotton is not quite so inelastic as the demand for wheat. The domestic consumption of cotton tends to rise and fall with the general economic situation, rather than with the price of cotton.

The demand for wheat is inelastic even in this broader sense. Good times or bad, we eat about the same amount of wheat. Such change as there is, is toward a smaller consumption in good times, since more people then have money to spend on more expensive foods. For all practical purposes, the American need for wheat is regarded as fully met. Mr. Wallace's domestic two-price plan therefore excludes wheat. To that crop he is not applying the traditional two-price system: he is dumping part of the surplus abroad.

The demand for pork is classed as highly elastic in the strict sense. When the price of pork falls by 10 per cent, the consumption rises by almost the same percentage. Dairy products, fruits, vegetables, meats and certain kinds of cotton goods were cited by Mr. Wallace as farm products for which there is a more or less elastic demand. Surpluses now exist in all of those categories except meats, which may become superabundant again in another year or two.

There is also the possibility of developing new markets through exceptionally low prices. A few years ago certain farm leaders were talking fancifully of teaching the rice-eating sections of China to eat American wheat. It was suggested that we let them have our wheat at extremely low prices, with the aid of Federal subsidy, until they had learned to eat it. No such wandering imagination is needed to visualize the great untapped markets for various farm products that exist in the United States. They can be tapped partly by enabling very low income groups to buy these products and partly by education.

IF EVERY American citizen drank as much milk and ate as much butter and cheese as go into the diet enjoyed by our better-fed people, the dairy cow population of the country would have to be increased by from 70 to 75 per cent. If every citizen ate as much meat as our better-fed people do, the production of beef, hogs, sheep and lambs, and poultry would have to be increased from 35 to 50 per cent.

If an adequate supply of fruits or vegetables were added, the United States, it is estimated, would have to expand its present crop area or cease entirely to export agricultural products. If everybody enjoyed even what the Bureau of Home Economics considers a "moderate diet," the production of many kinds of foodstuffs would have to be greatly increased. And if every family had as many shirts, sheets and pillow cases and other standard cotton products as it needs, the domestic consumption of cotton would rise sharply.

A national agricultural policy based upon the actual needs of the population is only a distant ideal, although it is an ideal which may be approached somewhat more quickly than the ideal of industrial production based upon actual needs. The two-price system put forward by Mr. Wallace inspires the imagination chiefly because it seems to be directed toward a desirable ultimate goal. Whether it can go very far toward that goal is an unanswerable question.

Whether the plan is workable or not, it has some unpleasant implications. It would require some kind of separation of the "sheep" from the "goats"—of the people who must pay the regular market price from those who will be permitted to buy at a lower price. Probably most progressives would prefer the principle which the Federal work program imperfectly represents—that every citizen who is able and willing to earn his living shall have an opportunity to do so.

IN PRINCIPLE, the Roosevelt

SECRETARY WALLACE

He now proposes a consumer subsidy

Administration is committed against the "grocery basket" method of providing relief. In principle, it would prefer to increase the consumption of agricultural products by enabling the lower-income groups to earn more dollars with which to buy food and clothing.

Mr. Wallace's two-price scheme smacks of the old idea of treating the poor as a separate group. But old-age pensions given according to need also smacks of the old poor-law concepts. The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation itself has been nothing but a gigantic grocery basket—and, regardless of principle, it has been a serviceable means of bringing together surplus farm products and people who need and want them.

The prevailing opinion in the Administration seems to be that the two-price idea is worth a practical trial.

Where will the line be drawn between the people who may buy at lower prices and those who must pay the regular market rate? Presumably a line could be drawn according to income, with allowance for differences in the cast of living. Unless the line were drawn very low on the income scale, merchants could be expected to protest vehemently. The intention is to include in the benefits people of very low income other than those on direct relief. The distributions of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation have included recipients, under the social security act, of old-age assistance, of aid to dependent children, and of aid to the blind. They have included also families aided by the Farm Security Administration, WPA workers, and, in some areas, families just above the relief line.

Often surplus commodities have been distributed by trucking them to the homes of recipients. But in many States the distribution is made with the co-operation of local grocery stores. More than 16,000 grocers have been co-operating in the free distribution. Although no plans have been approved, the employment of local grocers as distributing agents is in the minds of some of the men who have been working on the two-price scheme. The lower price could be fixed so as to allow a small service charge to the grocer. For him it would be additional business, with no risk. If the two-price system were operated under his own eyes, he probably would feel that he was better protected against its base.

The domestic two-price plan is still in its formative stages. But as an idea it seems to be taking hold in the Roosevelt Administration in a way that no other idea has taken hold in many months.

International Kaleidoscope: Correspondence From Foreign Capitals

Col. Lindbergh Played Important Role In British Decision to Negotiate With Hitler

Gave Expert Advice English Believed Him Factor for Peace

By Joseph Driscoll.

LONDON, OCT. 15.—When the definitive history of the "second World War" crisis of September, 1938, can be written on the basis of official records and private diaries, emphasis may be laid upon the important roles played behind the scenes over here by two nonstatesmen, Gen. Gustave Marie Gamelin, of France, and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, of America.

Gen. Gamelin, who is chief of the French defense forces, visited 10 Downing street on September 26, in the company of Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Secretary Georges Bonnet. This was after Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain had received the harsh Godesberg ultimatum from Chancellor Adolf Hitler and before Chamberlain and Daladier went off to the four-power conference at Munich, which resulted in "peace with honor," meaning the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

What was the reason why Chamberlain, who found the Godesberg terms unacceptable, surrendered at Munich to terms which have proved to be just as hard on Czechoslovakia? The explanation whispered about by Whitehall spokesmen is that Gamelin confided to Prime Minister Chamberlain that France was in no shape to wage a successful war against Germany. Gen. Gamelin is quoted as confessing that not only was the French air force inferior in numbers and modern equipment, but that the vaunted French army would not be able to invade Germany by smashing through Field Marshal Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering's new Siegfried line of fortifications.

Whether this is a true explanation or a convenient after-thought to justify the Anglo-French surrender to Hitler may be left for history to decide. However, it should be mentioned that it conflicts with public declarations in Paris which pictured Gen. Gamelin as confident that his army could break through the uncompleted Siegfried line and that his air force could make a creditable showing.

Role Played By Lindbergh

There is no such doubt about the role played by Col. Lindbergh. As far back as last May this correspondent was informed by sources close to the British government that Col. Lindbegh was of the opinion that the German and Italian air forces were overwhelmingly powerful, that the French and Russian air forces had been overrated and were deteriorating, and that it was vitally urgent for the peace of Europe that Britain should obtain some sort of understanding with Germany.

The correspondent has reason to believe that this same information was passed along to Prime Minister Chamberlain. The opinion of Col. Lindbergh was accepted in London as that of an expert, for if there is one subject the former St. Louis-Chicago air mail pilot knows from A to Z, it is airplanes. During his years of voluntary exile from the United States, Col. Lindbergh has kept in close touch with aviation developments here and on the Continent.

Last August 16 Col. Lindbergh, accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh, flew out of England with his usual secrecy and the next day, after a stop-over at Warsaw, Poland, they landed at Moscow. The Lindberghs were entertained and shown around by Russia's leading flyers until August 26, when they flew to Prague by way of the Crimea, the Caucasus and Rumania. They finally returned to London via Paris on September 10.

By that time all Europe was frantically preparing for war—a war in which thousands of bombing planes were expected to spread havoc and terror unknown in the first World War. Germany alone was reported by intelligence agents to have 10,000 planes ready to take off on an hour's notice to bombard Paris and London. Italy had several thousand planes ready to bombard French cities, and British and French shipping in the Mediterranean.

Under such circumstances the views of an aviation authority such as Col. Lindbergh were welcomed in government circles. Asked for his advice, Col. Lindbergh is said to have declared that the German air force could defeat single-handed, the combined French, Russian, Czech and British air forces. He also had praise for the technical excellence of the Italian planes.

Particularizing about the Soviet air force, Col. Lindbergh said it had a large number of good planes, many of them manufactured on American patents familiar to Lindbergh, but that it lacked sufficient trained pilots to fly the machines owing to purges and other political conditions.

Government people were so impressed by the Lindbergh survey of European military aviation that he was taken down to see former Prime Minister David Lloyd George vacationing in Surrey. It was feared that if the government surrendered to Hitler, Lloyd George would be its chief critic when Parliament reconvened.

He Convinced Lloyd George

It seems likely that Col. Lindbergh's report impressed Lloyd George almost as much as it impressed Chamberlain. Anyway the fact is that when Parliament met last week and voted confidence in the Chamberlain foreign policy, the former Prime Minister was strangely silent.

In the last few days there have been some amusing developments. The Soviet flyers who entertained Lindbergh in Moscow have now denounced him as a "stupid liar, satellite and lackey to the German Fascists and their English followers." Lady Astor, at whose home Col. Lindbergh was reported to have aired his views across the dinner table, said:

"Col. Lindbergh has not dined with us since he returned from Russia and, in fact, I have never given a dinner party for him.

"It is a complete lie, too, that Col. Lindbergh has ever made any sort of pronouncement about the Russian air force or about anything else during a dinner party at my home or in my home at all."

Regardless of whether Col. Lindbergh has been circulating his opinions at dinner, luncheon or high tea, it is well known that he has a high opinion of the German and Italian air forces and a low opinion of the French and Russian. These opinions were brought to the attention of the Chamberlain government and played a part in influencing its policy when it came to a showdown at Munich. Thus "Slim" Lindberugh, the son of an isolationist, radical Congressman from the Midwest, has had a hand in the ultra conservative politics of Great Britain.

French Design Peace Pillars

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 15. — The American Nation is to be offered a monument to peace by the French nation on the occasion of the New York World's Fair.

To be paid for by public subscriptions, the monument consists of two separate columns nearly 80 feet high joined only by the outstretched hands of the figures of two women who represent France and America. It was designed by a well-known French architect, N. Bankowsky, and the figures are from the chisel of Jean Boucher, a member of the French Institute.

The idea of presenting the monument to America was that of Bankowsky and immediately he announced his desire to see the French nation to make this gesture to the American people he found little difficulty in finding spontaneous support.

No nation-wide appeal for funds has been made yet, but contributions have begun to pour in to defray the expenses for erecting the monument in New York. At the propitious time the City of New York will be asked to donate an appropriate site for the monument and many prominent Frenchmen are expected to go to New York to attend the unveiling.

Vatican Influence Wanes In a Europe Ruled by Force

By James M. Minifie.

ROME, Oct. 15.—Unable to master either its enemies or friends, the Vatican watches desparingly while events over which it has no control are shaking its European influence to the foundations.

Never since the dark days of the Reformation has the church seen powers slipping from its grasp more surley than in the last year. Even in the time of the Reformation it found powerful allies who would place full national resources at the disposal of the papacy in its struggle against Protestantism. Analogy must be pushed further back to the Dark Ages when violence was a law unto itself, when the Pope's person was not immune and when the only resource was to match force with and establish the papacy as a temporal power.

Today when violence is again enthroned as a supreme court of appeal, the papacy is helpless to respond in kind. Pontifical thunders failed notoriously to check Nazi persecution of the church in Germany.

The latest attack by Nazi hooligans on Theodore Cardinal Innitzer's palace in Vienna showed how helpless the church has become. In a semi official statement the Vatican explained two days later it had not yet heard anything from Vienna except through the medium of an American news agency. There is no longer a nuncio in Vienna, and the Vatican must wait until the Berlin nuncinte is able to collect the facts and report on them. The statement added wearily, "However painful, there is no cause for marveling at this news, as violence against the church and its representatives in Germany are notoriously frequent in these times."

The crowning bitterness for the Vatican, however, is the discovery that those whom it believed to be friends are behaving more and more like enemies. The most cherished achievement of the present pontificate is the concordat with Italy in 1929 which inaugurated an era of the friendliest relations between church and state, notably during the Ethiopian campaign when Premier Benito Mussolini's adventure was strongly supported by the Vatican. Since then, however, the Rome-Berlin axies has shown Italy willing to make terms with the church's enemy. The traditional saying that "evil associations corrupt good manners" appeared confirmed when Fascism began a campaign against the Jews, which recently extended to prohibiting the marriage of Italians and Jews, and of Italian officials to any foreigner. This is not only against the universal principles of the church but a violation of the church's rights of marriage, especially recognized by the concordat.

Air Routes to Bind Empire

By the Associated Press.

Over the mountains and plains of southern Canada a fleet of airliners is laying out a route which Great Britain proposes to use as a link in its system of communications binding together the world's mightiest empire.

The fourth transcontinental airway in North America, from the western terminus of which planes bearing the Union Jack ultimately will span the Pacific, is still a-borning. Not until next summer will the Canadian government-owned Trans-Canada Air Lines start passenger, express and mail service between Montreal and Vancouver.

But the implications of its establishment are evident. The plans for Trans-Canada were not crystallized until work was started on the big transatlantic seaplane and landplane base in Newfoundland. The job of the new air line is to link Canada's east coast with Vancouver, the proposed jumping-off place for a Pacific route to Hongkong, New Zealand and Australia.

From the other side of the Pacific, Britain is reaching out to bridge the gap between its lands "down under" and its North American Dominion. The 13,500-mile England-Australia route, longest single air line in the world, will be extended to Auckland, New Zealand, before the summer of 1939.

Yangtze Drive Failing, Japan Turns to South

Curbs China Exports Navy Gets Opportunity British Interests Hit

By Victor Keen.

Copyright, 1938, New York Tribune, Inc.

SHANGHAI, OCT. 15.—Chino-foreign businessmen, foreign military observers, diplomats, editors and radio commentators, following the initial shock occasioned by Japan's intervention in South China, are now attempting an appraisal of the possible consequences upon China's trade and finances, as well as the repercussions of the expanding Japanese military activities upon world peace.

The prevailing belief in foreign, particularly British, military circles is that Japan again has chosen a propitious time because Palestine and the Mediterranean crisis prevent Great Britain and France from offering effective and determined opposition to the Japanese move into a sphere which is predominatly British and secondarily French.

Since Shanghai still is nursing the wounds of the bitter fighting in this area 15 months ago and still is feeding and sheltering more than 1,000,000 refugees whose means of livelihood were wiped out, she has an active appreciation of the inevitable developments in South China. While some think the Japanese move is designed only to cut the Canton-Hankow railway and the recently opened motor roads extending from Hongkong to Hankow, military experts are certain that the intervention will shortly be expanded into an expedition to capture Canton for the isolation of the British Colony of Hongkong as well as an attempt to plug the leak in the Japanese blockade on the China coast which extends from Shanhaikuan to Pakhoi on the Gulf of Tongking.

Yangtze Drive Has Failed

Shipping interests here—British, American, German, Scandinavian and other lines of miscellaneous registry whch have been doing a prosperous business in the costal ports between Shanghai and Hongkong including Wenchow, Tignhai, Foochow, Amoy, Swatow and numerous other heretofore unimportantant places—have all suspended their sailings as a result of Japanese warnings. Japan's warning to foreign naval and military commanders not to move warecraft or troops without first giving the Japanese ten days prior notice aroused serious questioning, in view of the fact that the Japanese have never declared war, yet are enforcing drastic blockade regulations vitally affecting international trade movements of foreign warcraft as well as cargo and passenger steamers on the international ocean highways in the Far East.

In the first place military observers here regard the Japanese move to Canton as an admission that Japan's Yangtze drive, with the object of capturing Hankow, has failed despite her success in cutting the Pieping-Hankow railway north or Hankow. The fact that the Japanese are still unable to capture vital positions far distant from Hankow after months of bombardment with aircraft and warships is indicative of the snail's pace of the general advance. That the Japanese War Office has been compelled to advance the date of Hankow's capture a half dozen times since September 1 has made necessary the adoption of other tactics in order to restimulate waning war sentiment in Japan, particularly in the period preceding the opening of the Diet when fresh gigantic levies will be necessary to finance the war which now is costing between 20-30,000,000 yen daily.

From the standpoint of larger political phases the Japanese general staff desires to strike a deadly blow at the fountainhead of Chinese revolutionary, nationalistic and democratic sentiments and activities which are centered on the southern ports and provinces, particularly Canton, Kwangtung and Fukien, which have always provided the political yeast and financial sinews of Chinese political revolutions, awakening illiterate multitudes to world political currents.

Most of China's emigrants over the world, numbering many millions, came from the southern provinces and their remittances home from the United States, the Philippines, the Straits Settlements, the Netherlands, the Indies and even South America and Australia, are an important factor in Chinese economics, while their political influence is an important element in keeping anti-Japanese boycotts alive.

Anglo-Americans here experienced the initial reactions of Japanese intervention in South China in the form of appeals for relief funds and medicines, chiefly from missionary sources, in the expectation of immediate expansion of the ranks of refugees which the Hankow government now estimates will exceed 15,000,000.

Herriot Seeks Presidency of France; Laval May Run as Candidate of Right

By John Elliott,

Special Correspondence.

Paris, Oct. 15.—The recent international crisis has caused the French public to overlook a question that would ordinarily be a subject of extraordinary interest at this time.

EDUOARD HERRIOT

Next May Albert Lebrun's seven-year term as president will expire shortly after he has made his state visit to London. Sitting in joint session in the Chateau of Versailles, the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate will choose his successor.

Perhaps a precedent may be set. Never before has a French president been elected to succeed himself. In fact, most of them considered themselves lucky if they managed to complete their term. Some have been assassinated, some have been forced to quit by Parliament, others have resigned in disgust, and one president, Paul Deschanel, went mad and tried to commit suicide by jumping out the window of his railway compartment. There is, however, no constitutional barrier to a French president's being re-elected, and M. Lebrun is being urged to run again.

M. Lebrun can have the job, if he wants it. But he is tired of the burden of his high office, and is anxious to retire to the life of a Lorraine vintager.

Tradition ordains that Parliament select the speaker of the Senate as president. But Jules Jeanneney, the presiding officer of the upper house, is an old man in precarious health. He declined to be a candidate for the presidency seven years ago, and it is not likely that he has changed his mind.

The outstanding candidate is Eduard Herriot. Thrice premier, mayor of his beloved City of Lyons since 1905, now president of the Chamber of Deputies, Herriot is qualified as no other Frenchman for the presidency. Nature has lavishly bestowed her gifts on him, and Herriot, besides being an experienced politician, is the foremost French orator and a distinguished man of letters as well. His victory as the head of the "Cartel des Gauches" in 1924, when he became premier for the first time and, reversing Poincare's foreign policy, was the first French statesman to shake hands with a German chancellor since the war, is a memorable event in French political history. But today Herriot is the impassioned leader of the anti-Fascist bloc.

Herriot is ambitious to be president, and for three years has been cultivating his chances. But his very abilities tend to disqualify him. France prefers nonentities as her presidents. This distrust of men of executive force as chief executive dates back to Louis Napoleon, who misused the office as a stepping stone to make himself Emperor and destroy the republic by his coup d'etat in 1851.

Anne Child Is Married To Mr. Dick

Ex-Envoy's Daughter D. C. Deb of 1936 Nuptials in N. Y. Major Fall Event

ONE OF THE MOST important weddings of the fall season took place yesterday in New York, when Miss Anne Child, daughter of Mrs. Edmund L. Pavenstedt, of that city and Washington, and of the late Richard Washburn Child, former United States Ambassador to Italy, was married to Charles Barstow Wright Dick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Langhorne Dick, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia.

Since her debut two years ago, the bride has been one of the most popular members of the younger set here, and yesterday looked even prettier than usual in a gown of ivory satin made with a heartshaped neckline and a long train. Her veil of white tulle was fastened to a coronet of lilies of the valley, and she carried a bouquet of these flowers mingled with white orchids.

THE CEREMONY took place in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church on Park avenue, the Rev. Thomas Sargent officiating. Chrysanthemums in yellow and bronze shades and masses of palms and ferns decorated the church. Mr. Pavenstedt gave his step-daughter in marriage.

Her maid of honor was her sister, Miss Constance Child, who wore a gown of china blue heavy silk with short sleeves and a long full skirt. In her hair were matching blue bows attached to a brief tulle veil, and she carried red single chysanthemums and pink roses.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Martha Bacon, of Washington and Old Westbury, L. I., leanor Flood, of Washington, Phyllis Lovering, of Pinehurst, N. C., Phyllis Gerry, of Providence, R. L., Patricia Verdi, of New York, and Mrs. William Forbes, jr., of Philadelphia. Their gowns of a rose-coral shade were made like that of the maid of honor, and they carried similar bouquets.

WILLIAM FORBES, JR., was best man and the ushers were Tinsley Adams, of Washington; Wistar Morris and William

Visiting Horsemen Feted

Behind a barrage of parties, the Chilean and Mexican army teams have "stormed" Washington without any trouble at all. The past week a highlight in their round of partying was a trip to Annapolis where they were feted by Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, and Lieut. and Mrs. R. C. Brownlee. Above are Mrs. Brownlee and Capt. Armando Villarreal, of the Mexican team.

Naturally, Miss Marta Trucco (above), a popular member of the Capital's younger diplomatic set and the daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, was on hand for the round of colorful fetes at Annapolis. She will also be present when the Chilean and Mexican officers—as well as the United States Army team—take part in the Inter-American show, scheduled for this week-end at Meadowbrook. In fact, it looks as if everybody in town and scores of sporting social lights from elsewhere will be there when the bugle blows the signal for one of the most colorful and thrilling events of the season.

STELLITA STAPLETON, who had hoped to spend the winter in South America, will be in Washington this year after all. It seems that the trip into the interior wilds of Equador, where her father was the first white man to penetrate, is a long and difficult one and will have to be postponed indefinitely. Now Stellita thinks she will give a dance in the near future and is collecting ideas for something new and different. In the meantime, she has embarked on a typing course at one of the local secretarial schools. Stop us if we're wrong, but it looks as though Washington belles are becoming very businesslike; and that includes Betty Shouse, Mary March, Frances Mathews and innumerable others.

At Dorothea Doeg's small and thoroughly enjoyable house-warmin cocktail party the other afternoon, Stellita told us some of the highlights of her European trip. Next to the terrible suspense in Londor over war fears at their greatest intensity, the most exciting thing was the celebration with the great Shakespearian actress, Mary Anderson, on her eightieth birthday. Mrs. Stapleton and her daughter were among the 12 friends invited to spend the day with the world famous actress in her tiny village in the Cottswolds, while scores of admirers from all over the country came and stood outside her home to pay her homage.

Others present at Dorothea's, where an adorable black bar with a rail, proved to be quite a handy thing, were the Tuckermans three strong—Laura, Ruth and Alice, Dorsey Fisher, George Renchard, Bill McComb, Dorothy Marlatt and fiance Jim Reid, Alice Griffith, Carolyn Chantry and Mannix Walker.

A LETTER FROM KITTY DU BOIS who left here in July and is now visiting her friend, the Countess of Shrewsbury, at Stafford, England. She writes that Palermo and Ragusa were like something you dream of, seen at sunset suffused in pink and gold; that Algiers and its native quarter were frightfully interesting; and that in Ireland she stayed in the most romantic-looking castle by a beautiful loch with high mountains on three sides. Here she did her first and only deer stalking which, though it necessitates about eight hours of walking, is, nevertheless, she says, positively exciting. If her plans worked out, Kitty is by now visiting in Paris . . .

Another stunning daughter, Dolly, will meet them in New York, which, incidentally, will be Col. Corbin's new post . . . Mr. and Mrs. George Dunlop have rented their family home, "Hayes", in Chevy Chase, to ex-Commissioner and Mrs. Ordway, and are at the Brighton Hotel for the present. They are awaiting the arrival of their daughter, Mrs. Langhorne Bond, from

White House Social Season Will Be Shorter but Crowded

Cabinet Dinner December 13 Leads First Family's Calendar
Diplomatic Reception, Year's Most Glittering Show, December 15
Seven January Gatherings to Include Congressional Dinner

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

ANNOUNCING A 1938-39 SOCIAL CALENDAR that is three weeks shorter than the one last year, President and Mrs. Roosevelt today will date up officialdom for the five formal dinners and five receptions that have been featured functions at the White House for many winters.

This season, as last, the Cabinet dinner leads off the list, and the Army and Navy reception closes it. The first is set for December 13—one day earlier than last year's—and the final reception will be chalked off the calendar on February 2 instead of on February 24, as it was for the 1937-38 schedule.

With seven functions being planned for January, it looks as if most of Washington's social circling through the first month of the new year will revolve around the White House. But, although there are only two events on the official program for December, there will be two other entertainments at the White House that month. On December 17, the night of the gridiron dinner, Mrs. Roosevelt will give her annual Gridiron Widows' party, and on December 27, she will entertain at a dance in honor of her debutante niece, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, of Boston.

Not long ago, the First Lady set December 10 as the date of her Gridiron Widow's party, but changed it later on learning the Gridiron diner is scheduled for December 17.

THE DIPLOMATIC reception, the Capital's most brilliant social event, will take place on December 15. 'Tis said, there's more angling for invitations to this function than to all the others put together. It's the grandest show this side of the Atlantic—with every diplomat in town turned out in his best bib and tucker (and I mean best—with gold braid and all) . . . with bejeweled and be-feathered dowagers resplendent in gowns of Paris persuasion . . . and with a scattering of debutantes as thrilled as if they were being presented at the Court of St. James's.

The third function on the calendar is the diplomatic dinner, this year being given before the Vice President's diner and set for January 3. This judicial reception, traditionally reflecting dignity and importance, is scheduled for January 5; and five days later, the Vice President's dinner will take place.

For many years the Vice President shared honors with the Secretary of State at the Cabinet dinner, but after the teacup tempest over precedence in the Hoover administration, a special dinner for the Vice President was arranged and has been given annually since.

ONE OF THE largest functions on the calendar, the Congressional reception, is set for January 12. There, the Vice President and Mrs. Garner, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives and Mrs. Bankhead will share the spotlight.

With the Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes as ranking guests, the dinner for the Supreme Court will take place on January 19, and the following week, on January 24, there will be the reception for the officials of the Treasury, Post Office, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor Departments and Federal agencies.

The Speaker's Dinner is scheduled for January 31 and two days later, on February 2, the colorful Army and Navy reception, second in interest only to the Diplomatic reception, will ring down the curtain on official entertaining for the 1938-39 season.

State dinners, once frigid in tone, have taken on a more fes-

New York Gets Red Plush Set For Debuts

Rich Girls to Shine
Morgan to Be Host
Doormen Spruced Up

By Mary Elizabeth Plummer.

NEW YORK, OCT. 15 (AP). They're getting ready to lay down the red carpet and spruce up the doorman for one of New York's most star-spangled debutante seasons of recent years.

Here are some of the stars of the season ahead:

Brenda Diana Duff Frazier—Dark-eyed, dark-haired daughter of Mrs. Frederic Watriss and successor to the glamor girl title held last season by beauteous Gloria Baker. At 18, she has traveled widely, studied music in Munich, speaks several languages and is an heiress to several million dollars.

ROSEMARY WARBURTON—She's the comely blonde daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt. Her debut at a supper dance in the St. Regis November 18 will start the wheels spinning in the winter deb season.

Frances Pennoyer—Morgan granddaughter, and daughter of the Paul G. Pennoyers. Her grandfather, the financier, probably will give a party for her before Christmas. A 9 p. m. to 1 a. m. party—dinner in the library of the sedate brownstone house, and later dancing, flowers from the Morgan greenhouses, food prepared by the Morgan cooks in the Morgan kitchens.

Mary Aldrich—Brown-haired, brown-eyed daughter of Winthrop W. Aldrich, banker, granddaughter of the late U. S. Senator Nelson Aldrich of Rhode Island, and niece of Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr. She came out last month at a Long Island supper dance, and is now in Europe, but will be back in November, going to all the parties.

EILEEN BALFE—One of the prettiest debs of the season. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Balfe, and is a sister of Mrs. Gary Cooper, wife of the movie star.

Lesley Hyde Ripley—Another four-star debutante who'll be going to all the parties. Her ball last summer in Newport was in a specially built Italian loggia; and electrical effects glowed on the Ripley estate. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. H. Ripley.

Glamor Girl Frazier is slender, with dainty hands and feet and big black eyes. She wears her black hair in a very long bob.

She dislikes hats, often carries hers. She doesn't care much for sport clothes, and wears sables with her tweeds.

She loves pink. Her bedroom and dressing room are done in pink, and one of her favorite evening gowns is billowy pink satin.

Mme. Jarnefelt Aids Baby Born on Liner

Mme. Bostrom Also Sews on Layette
Hendrik Van Loon Auctions Drawings
Passengers Buy to Help Latvian Mother

By Nancy Archibald.

GRETA GARBO WAS NOT the only thrill experienced by Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, wife of the Finnish Minister, aboard the Swedish liner Kungsholm on which she recently returned to the United States. A Latvian passenger gave birth to a bouncing boy while the ship was in the mid-Atlantic. Evidently she hadn't expected his arrival so soon for she was not provided with a layette.

Mme. Jarnefelt and Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Swedish Minister here, who was also Washington bound, came to the woman's rescue, calling for donations of yarn and material—the men gave their handkerchiefs for ruffles—and in no time they had sewed and knitted together as nice a baby wardrobe as any mother could wish for.

But the greatest sensation of all came when the noted author and artist, Hendrik Van Loon, put up some of his inimitable illustrations for auction in behalf of the Latvian mother. By that time news of the Munich peace had reached the Kungsholm by wireless and the passengers were happy with relief. They bid recklessly for the beloved raconteur's paintings. Mme. Jarnefelt is proud of the picture she acquired.

Now that it is almost certain that she and her husband will be en poste in Rome within a few months, Mme. Jarnefelt wishes she had taken up Italian in her spare time rather than the Spanish she has been studying so arduously the past year. She could not help showing her sadness at the thought of saying good-by to her friends here when the dispatch rumoring the change was first called to her attention. Washington will have many pleasant memories of the Jarnefelts. Indeed, Mme. Jarnefelt never looked so well as she does this fall, still wearing the golden aura of her summer's tan and with her blonde waves clipped short to simulate the upswept coiffure.

A NEW YORKER and a newspaper of long standing is Salvador Duhart, recently arrived from Mexico City to take up his post as Second Secretary of the Mexican Embassy. He was for many years New York correspondent on the United Press staff to Latin-American papers. His first diplomatic job was to attend the last peace conference at Buenos Aires and though he was appointed to Washington last winter recent events in Mexico delayed his coming. Senora Maria Louise de Duhart is now in Rochester, where their little daughter, Maria, is at the Mayo Institute, fighting valiantly against infantile paralysis.

Senor Duhart shed some light on the romance between Don Carlos Mantillo-Ortega, former Secretary of the Eucador Embassy here and the beautiful Mexican belle, Lila Hurtado, who is now his wife. It seems she is Senor Duhart's niece and he is responsible for bringing the young couple together. Don Carlos is now working on his father's newspaper in Ecuador.

BRAZILIAN NOTES: News that their beloved foreign minister, Oswaldo Aranha, had recalled their Ambassador to Germany, Juaquim de Lima e Silvia, could not cancel the pleasure of the Brazilian Embassy staff at Secretary A. Teixeira Soares' birthday party last week. Brazilian pianist, Neomi Bittencoure, complimented Commander Reis on the musical ability of his daughter, Regina, displayed when she played for the company at his buffet supper the day before. Ivan Hasslocher, handsome son of the Commercial Counselor, explained that though most Brazilians are ardent horsemen, he was educated mostly abroad and prefers tennis and rugby as sports. His mother, looking stunning in black with a peak hat perched on her raven locks and a bright twinkle in her dark eyes, told of her struggle with decorators and moving vans in redoing their home. She is a well-known poet in her native land. Mrs. Anthony Tigre recalled with delight the amazing moving picture shown by Commander Reis of Pauolo Hasslocher walking down the steps and then reversing the procedure, walking jauntily up the steps backward. She also remarked that Senhor Hasslocher's cheery voice about which he is so often teased indicates he might have been a great opera singer if he had studied for that career. She is a noted singer herself and knows her stuff. Senhor Soares' children, Nancy, Arnoldo and baby Louis Phillipe, joined the guests in wishing him many nappy returns of the day.

Ride on Caisson to Welcome Newlywed Hineses at Ft. Myer

Band Will Accompany Trip Around Post It's Traditional Greeting for Bride in Artillery Maj. and Mrs. Rumbough to Receive for Couple

By Elizabeth Henney.

WITH A BOOM of the drums, and a crash of the cymbals they'll strike up the band this afternoon at Fort Myer as the caisson goes rolling along. Past General Craig's quarters they'll go at exactly 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and clear around the post to wind up in front of the quarters of Maj. and Mrs. David S. Rumbough.

On top of the caisson will be seated the post's newest bride and groom, Lieut. and Mrs. Charles B. Hines (she was until recently, you know, Betty Balsley, daughter of Commander and Mrs. A. H. Balsley), just returning from their honeymoon.

The caisson ride is the traditional way of welcoming a bride into the Field Artillery. Every branch of the Army has some similar method of welcome.

Maj. Rumbough (who is the acting commander of the Field Artillery battalion in the absence of Col. Crane) and Mrs. Rumbough will have a reception at their quarters for the young couple after the caisson ride and introduce them to the rest of the officers and their ladies on the post.

OVER AT THE Navy Department, they're rushing around at a great rate these days. In anticipation of Navy Day on October 27, they sent out a few announcements and, bang—requests started rolling in from all over the country for them to send out Navy officers on that day to make speeches and tell the country all about our Navy. So if you hear a great clearing of throats and booming of voices through the corriders of the Navy Building in the next couple of weeks you'll know what all the practicing is about.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis McCarty Little, of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Little have just come to town while Gen. Gen. Little is on temporary duty with the selection board. They are staying at the Anchorage.

Brig. Gen. John Colt Beaumont, also of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Beaumont are here for a while, too, for the same reason. Friends may locate them at the Fairfax Hotel. Mrs. Jane M. McHugh is also at the Fairfax for a bit of a stay.

ANOTHER BIG ARMY get-together will take place this afternoon when all the members of the U. S. Infantry who can possibly get to Washington will meet to say hello to each other at the Army-Navy Country Club. From West Point for the event will come Capt. and Mrs. Richard Coursey and Capt. and Mrs. J. V. Cole, who will all be house guests of Col. and Mrs. Omar N. Bradley. Capt. and Mrs. Edward Bowes will also come down from West Point and will be house guests of Col. and Mrs. R. B. Woodruff.

Another week-ended in town is Mrs. Beverly C. Snow, who is down from New York and the house guest of Col. and Mrs. McCoach at the Wardman Park Hotel. Capt. Snow, who is stationed in New York, was an assistant of Col. McCoach in the District Engineer's office there.

CAPT. AND MRS. A. S. Farquhar (He is U. S. Navy) left town just the other day, and with their two children will make their home in Norfolk. Friends are sad because they have left, but glad to congratulate him on his new assignment. He has just been ordered to duty as Chief of Staff to Rear Admiral A. W. Johnson, who is in command of the new Atlantic Squadron, of which the flagship is the U. S. S. New York. Capt. Farquhar has been on duty here for the past two years as assistant director of Naval Intelligence.

Over at the Navy Yard these days goes up the wail that, what with the rush and bustle around the big city, the only time they get to see any of their pals in Washington is when they all get together down in Annapolis for the football games.

ROYAL COPENHAGEN PORCELAINS

TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY,
October 18th, 19th and 20th

A CENTURY AND A HALF AGO, in a northern kingdom, Royal Copenhagen was born. It was created so that a Danish queen, Julia Marie, might have the finest porcelains in the world.
The designs on Royal Copenhagen dinnerware have been taken from the flowers of Denmark. Real people and animals posed for the figurines. The colors are the tender, luminous shades of the Danish landscape. Is it any wonder that Royal Copenhagen is considered by many experts as the loveliest porcelain made today?

How to acquire the new spool-waisted figure—

MarthaMacGrath's

MRS. MacGRATH, nationally known figure authority and stylist for Riteform Foundations, says "Last year's figure is definitely 'dated.' To wear the new clothes, a woman must have a spool waist, fuller yet controlled hipline and a regal bosom."

IN order to help you achieve this new figure ideal, Mrs. MacGrath is conducting a figure clinic every day this week in the Corset Shop. She has made her career of figures, has studied the art of corsetry from every angle—from the designing of a fine corset to the very important technique of fitting the foundation.

IT is Mrs. MacGrath who has styled the famous new Riteform Foundations after consultation with the designers of the new spool-waisted dresses and coats. Meet her at the Figure Clinic all this week—she will analyze your figure and show you how, you, too, can have the 1939 figure.

Rare Pieces of Silver Will Be Displayed In the Tour of Old Homes in Alexandria

Rare pieces of old silver, wrought by the famous silversmiths of England and America, will be on display at the exhibit of historic antiques held in connection with the tour of old homes in Alexandria on October 28 and 29. The tour is being arranged by the Rector's and Parish Aid Societies of St. Paul's and Christ Churches

One piece of the historic silver of unusual interest and has its background in the early history of Alexandria. It is a silver tankard belonging to Gen. Daniel Roberdeau, soldier, patriot and statesman during the Revolutionary War. Gen. Roberdeau came from Philadelphia to Alexandria where he built a handsome brick home overlooking the Potomac, which became known as a political and social center.

The house, 418 South Lee street, is standing in a wonderful state of preservation. Gen. Roberdeau's daughter, Ann Foster, eloped to marry Jonathan Swift, a prosperous young merchant and public citizen, whose name is so closely associated with the departed glories of his beautiful estate, Belle Air, later known as Colross.

The silver tankard was wrought in 1762 by the famous silversmith, James Musgraves. It is now owned by Sully Roberdeau, of Austin, Tex., a great-grandson of the Revolutionary general. Mr. Roberdeau has consented to come from Texas to Virginia and bring the now famous tankard, where it will be shown in the Antique Silver Exhibit.

The committee for silver to be displayed during the tour is quite enthusiastic over the very interesting historical pieces to be shown and are receiving new entries daily. Members of the committee are Mrs. William Moncure, Miss Mary Lindsey, and Miss Nancy Lee Tackett of Alexandria.

Gude's
"SHE LOVES ME, SHE LOVES ME NOT" . . . can only be determined by plucking fresh flowers . . . but there are so many other uses for lovely blossoms, seems a shame to waste them. Do you know that VOGUE says fresh flowers must be worn with tailored outfits if you would'st be "the tops" in fashions? Of course, for formal wear corsages are a ritual. Why not leave a standing order at GUDE BROS. to be delivered to you once or twice a week? Call DI. 8450 and place your order immediately. Just the sight of flowers will make life look a "whole lot" brighter . . . and your fall outfit a 100 per cent smarter! Don't forget GUDE'S when you plan the decorating for FALL WEDDINGS.

A.A.U.W. Maps Program Of Adult Education

Study Group Will Be of Seminar Type
One Unit to Cover Art in Washington
Mrs. Trager to Teach Creative Writing

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Proof that members of the American Assocation of University Women did not abandon educational pursuits when they were graduated from college, is the "curriculum" just issued by the Washington branch.

Study groups have been conducted in other seasons with growing interest and attendance. This year the local association has announced its aim "to offer a varied and balanced program of adult education on a college and graduate level."

The groups, it explains, will be largely of the seminar type, with each member expected to contribute to the discussion, the preparation and presentation of material. Women of the Washington branch are eligible to membership in them and others interested may enroll by payin a stipulated fee.

Mrs. John Donaldson, who will lead the international relations group this season, will open it with a discussion on Mexico Wednesday night. Her subject will be "Can 14,000,000 Indians Pay?"

The letter asking Mrs. Donaldson to serve as chairman this committee followed her on her summer's travels into Mexico and finally caught up with her in Mexico City, many weeks after having been sent. He acceptance was promptly wired.

Mrs. Donaldson is a close student of Latin-American problems. During her husband's sabbatical leave from his post as professor of political science at George Washington University, with their son, they traveled in Mexico last summer, studying first hand the problems there. Her knowledge of Spanish enabled her to talk with the natives and also make some interesfing translations from Mexican journals and books.

She was in Mexico while the expropriation ventures were being launched and had opportunity to see the reactions of both natives and foreigners.

"The oil controversy is only a small part of the question involved," said Mrs. Donaldson.

"To arrive at any intelligent understanding of what is taking place in Mexico today, one must have a concept of the whole question of land distribution through the world and must enter the pages of the historical past through the Indian concept of communal ownership of the land."

Mrs. Donaldson has made a change in the study group of the committee. Instead of having a small group of students to meet twice a month and study one phase of international affairs, she is using the forum method and opening the meetings to the entire club.

Many Groups Under Fine Arts Section

Under the fine arts department, of which Mrs. Parer D. Trask is chairman, there is an art appreciation group which will study "Art in Washington," under the leadership of Miss Louise Newell. The course will commence with public buildings of an early period and trace the architectural development of the Capital up to the present.

Mrs. Earl A. Trager is teaching a class in creative writing; Miss Eugenia Botin will lead a group in music appreciation; Miss Ruth Henderson, a group in the study of "Modern World Poetry," and Mrs. A. S. Daniel, the study of eclassical letter writers of English and American literature.

Under the head of applied art there will be a group conducted by Dr. Edith L. Allen. Four meetings will be devoted to practical problems in home decoration; four to weaving and four to metal work. An exhibit is planned in the spring.

Child Development Among Study Courses

The education department, of which Miss Elsie Green is chairman, has under way a study group in "Child Development," led by Miss Ruby Nevins. "Education in Latin America" will be studied under Miss Mildred Green. It is planned in this course to alternate lectures by eminent authorities with informal discussion of developments in the field of education in Latin American countries.

A course on "Family Relations" will be conducted by Mrs. Henry Butler, continuing the study begun last year as to the effect of changing conditions in America on family life.

A class in French is being conducted by Miss Priscilla Holcombe, and one in visual education by Miss Margaret Klein. This is designed to meet the needs of teachers, especially those using the unit system, and of club leaders charged with the responsibility of arranging programs.

A group on consumer research is another planned. Mrs. Charlotte A. Hankin will lead one on constitutional problems and Miss Nellie McMichael another on law for laywomen. Nationally known speakers will be used in some instances in this course to give a broader viewpoint on the subject.

A study group on social welfare will be led by Mrs. Lawrence Fleming; one in the morning devoted to book reviews, by Mrs. James F Rogers, and another in the evening, by Miss Mary Rose Parman. A current events group will be conducted by Dr. Elmer L. Kayser.

Torchbearers In Capital Clubs

Mrs. Barnes, Who Began Poetry Contests, Now Lives in Florida

Her Work With Federation of Clubs Recalled
Has Won Acclaim for Her Own Verses
Her Present Home Is on an Island

Mrs. Florence Stratford-Barnes, for nearly 25 years a resident of Washington, but who now lives in Florida because of her husband's poor health, was appointed chairman of poetry in the District branch of the Federation of Women's Clubs, when Mrs. Edgar Meritt was president.

Mrs. Ellis Logan was chairman then of the fine art groups, and it was with the indorsement of these two women that Mrs. Barnes offered a prize for the best poem in a contest open to all members. So popular was he idea that over 30 entries were submitted and the next season, under Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, the contest was repeated. It has been continued as a part of the federation's work, bringing out some unusual talent.

At the close of the first year, Mrs. Barnes was appointed Laureate of the District branch of the Federation by Mrs. Meritt. Soon after, she was obliged to drop all club work and accompany Dr. Barnes south, where they now make their home on the little island of Anna Maria Key, across from Cortez, a famous little fishing village.

There she works among the fishermen's children and the young guests in winter, teaching them to write verses and recite them. Her Sunday group, under a big umbrella, hear Bible stories and then act them out in their own way. She writes Jonah and Samson and David into verses and teaches the children to repeat them.

While active in club work in Washington, Mrs. Barnes was a director in the Political Study Club, an officer in the Daughters of American Colonists, a member of Mary Washington Chapter of the D. A. R., and the League of American Pen Women, where she served also as poetry chairman. Among the prizes in the Isabell Anderson contest she has won several for the short story, feature article, and poetry; and her first honors in poetry, "The Ghost Bells of Flanders," will be in the Sidney Lanier Memorial book in December. Her poems have been printed in Harriet Munroe's Poetry, the Literary Digest, Florida Poets, several anthologies and lesser magazines. Her tiny book of "Neptune's Pep-Tunes," for children—written originally for the little folks on the island—will be reprinted soon.

Mrs. Barnes sent to the national headquarters of the Sons of the American Revolution on Sixteenth street two large cabinets full of colonial china and Revolutionary letters and museum pieces, with her father's portrait, as a nucleus of a larger collection. At the D. A. R. hall is her Hutchins Collection, with the tiny wedding slippers of Dolly, bride of Col. Gordon Hutchins, 1780, New Hampshire.

TOMORROW is the day of the big bridge party being given by the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs at the general federation headquarters for the benefit of its scholarship fund.

"LOVE OF FLOWERS and pleasant associations and a desire for more real old-fashioned neighbors," was the reason the late Mrs. George Smallwood gave for starting the Chevy Chase, (D. C.) Garden Club in 1927. It has been a successful club.

Mrs. John McMahon invited the group of 11 women who met at the home of Mrs. Smallwood with the idea of organizing the club. The charter members were, Mrs. Smallwood, Mrs. McMahon, Mrs. Paul Christian, Mrs. Charles Grant, Mrs. George Alexander, Mrs. John D. Saddler, Mrs. Lee Latimer, Mrs. Paul Earnest, Mrs. Ida Bowie, Mrs. H. A. Stuart, Mrs. Austin McCarthy.

At the second meeting, having decided on the name of the club, its objects were outlined. Each member was to be allowed to ask and answer questions to bring out general information. A scrapbook was to be kept, in which clippings and other information could be preserved.

At the fourth meeting, which was held March 28, 1927, Mrs. Smallwood was elected president, Mrs. Paul Christian, first vice president, Mrs. Charles Grant, secretary, and Mrs. John D. Saddler, treasurer.

From its beginning the club has benefitted greatly from the co-operation of members of the Department of Agriculture, both in speaking at meetings, and in supplying information.

At present the membership is limited to 50. Luncheon is served at each meeting, before the business meeting begins. This gives the members an opportunity for neighborly chats and the exchange of ideas.

All of the members are women, and a strict requirement is that each must have a garden, and must be a real dirt gardener, who works in her garden herself.

The club has accomplished much in improving the appearance of several neighborhoods. And it maintains seven large flower beds at the Home for Incurables in such a way that during the blooming season there is always a pretty display.

THE A. B. C. CLUB (Authors of Books for Children) will inaugurate its third season with an oyster roast next Sunday at Williams Wharf, in Southern Maryland.

All club members have been asked to meet at the home of Maxine Winter, Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. A day in the open has been planned by the committee.

The A. B. C. Club's first formal affair will be a banquet, observing children's book week. This banquet is to be at the Willard Hotel, November 12, at 7 p. m.

Political Study Club Hears Swiss Envoy

Traces Country's History
Discusses Security
Wife Is Present

Marc Peter, Minister of Switzerland, yesterday addressed the Political Study Club at its first fall meeting, held at the Washington Club. He was introduced by Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, the president, and discussed "Historical and Political Aspects of Switzerland."

The women of Switzerland, said the minister, has no vote but has obtained other equal rights with men. He discussed the Swiss social security plan for old age.

Beginning with the thirteenth century, he traced the history and the development of his little republic which started with three small communities and is now composed of 22 units or cantons. In 1291 Uri, Schwyzand and Unterwald entered into a pact which is still in existence, he said. The presidency is an honorary office, the governing body being the Council of State or Senate and the National Council or House of Representatives, which compose the federal assembly.

Hemmed in by Germany and Italy and the smallest country in Europe, Switzerland is the home of French, Germans and Italians, and all three languages are spoken. Ever a neutral nation, this group of sturdy people combining centuries-old with modern standards has made admirable progress.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, chairman of music, presented as guest soloist Mrs. Florence Sindell, prominent in Washington musical circles. She was accompanied by Mrs. Gertrude Smallwood Mockbee.

The Minister and Mme. Peter received with Mrs. Meritt following the meeting. The tea tables had centerpieces of chrysanthemums and pale pink candles.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Office Associate's Acid Gossip Makes Life Intolerable For Business Woman; Should She Resign?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I work with an older woman who has become a problem to me. I do not dislike her, but I do feel sorry from her from the bottom of my heart. On first meeting you are impressed by her seeming graciousness and friendliness. She is unusually attractive, has a good salary and has had many friends. If she would live her own life and let others do the same, she could be happy—but the mean thoughts and petty jealousies which occupy her mind are spoiling her life . . .

In the years I have known her, I have heard her say the meanest things of everyone she knows—friends and family included. Unfortunately, I have to listen, day in and day out, to her criticizing, condemning and fault-finding. In her eyes, she alone is perfection and everyone else is wanting . . . She meddles in everyone's life . . . She criticizes every piece of work brought in for us to do . . . I have tried to turn the conversation, tried to keep peace at any price, tried giving her a dose of her own medicine, tried ignoring her, tried registering boredom—but she overrides it all and keeps on going.

She is the self-appointed judge of all whom she knows. She, of course, is never wrong and the other fellow is never right. She would give you her last cent, but she would never let you forget; and if you did not feel indebted to her for life she would be hurt. She is generous one moment and the next moment makes every recipient of her generosity feel as if he were the most ungrateful wretch that ever breathed. She really means well, but even those who know and appreciate her good points try to avoid her, although all of them turn to her for help when they need it. I like her but feel that I cannot bear up under the situation any longer. I am at the point now where I'll probably throw something out of the window—or my friends will be coming to St. Elizabeth's to see me.

I am afraid if I tell her just how I feel that she will have a breakdown again. Yet if I just leave without explanation she will think I am too dumb for the work. She creates the impression with the higher-ups that none but herself can do this particular work, which is pretty silly, since it is not of a technical nature. Yet you cannot challenge that impression because, being what she is, she would be so terribly hurt. She is so vulnerable that you couldn't have it on your conscience to hurt her.

How can I keep my self-respect, institute some kind of a change, and yet not hurt her by stating the real reason? She has no interest in life, complains that her friends no longer invite her places, complains of always being broke, of this person and that one neglecting her after all she has done for them, and so on. Such insinuations can do harm if dropped in the right ear; and even though most of us pay no attention to her, we realize the damage she could do us with the office heads.

Shall I have a showdown by calling her into the office heads' room and talking things out? Or just withdraw quietly and take a chance on finding something else? You may think this is much ado about nothing, but others before me have had the same trouble, and no one has ever known how to cope with her.

ANONYMOUS.

Don Spiritual Armor

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Situations of this sort can seldom, if ever, be brought to order through an exchange of personalities, such as would be involved in "calling (the woman) into the office heads' room and talking things over." The person who took the initiative in attempting so rash a solution—which inevitably would result in what is called a scene—would stand in grave danger of being adjudged as great a trouble-maker as the person accused, regardless of his essential justification and the defendant's culpability.

In my opinion, your only alternative to resigning your job (and more about that later) or securing a transfer (if you are in the Government service), is that of developing the self-protective faculty of living, mentally and spiritually, above the level of the woman's irritating influence. It would appear that your reactions to her conduct so far have been of a negative sort. The most effective method of silencing a spiteful tongue and counteracting its psychically poisonous effects on one's self and on the ether is to meet the hateful barrage four-square with a positive, constructive attitude toward the person or subject under attack.

It is not enough to hold one's peace when destructive influences are at work. One must take one's stand on the constructive side. In so doing, one seems in some curious way to invoke the assistance of an omnipresent, universal spirit of affirmative good will, which protects while it strengthens one's inner sense of psychic well being, and at the same time creates a general atmosphere of generous thought and feeling which spontaneously squelches the mean thought or malicious word.

Naturally such an attitude will find expression in kindly phrases, the more impressive for their tactful wording and calm delivery. There is no conceivable subject which does not lend itself to constructive comment, and the thing to do when this woman unbridles her tongue in scathing criticism or condemnation is to bespeak the good points she has failed to note. Don't create antagonism by disputing her supposed findings. Rather, indorse the happier side of the picture. Such a reaction, consistently maintained, will either supply her the cue to a better outlook, or send her eventually to a new wailing wall. Certainly it cannot fail to invest you with the most impregnable spiritual armor.

It seems to me that this course of action is definitely to be preferred to resigning your job in impetuous fashion. However, if you do not feel equal to the mental and spiritual effort involved; if you lack the wit and valor that would see you through; if you are, perchance, so peculiarly obligated to the woman that you feel you have forfeited the right to speak and act independently of her—then I suggest you cast your nets for another job. Go after it quietly, in an organized manner and don't give up until you find it. I think you would be foolish to resign until you know where you're going from here. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

GOLD KID binding on the shirred sleeves, small collar and waist front trims the informal shirt maker dinner dress of inky, black velvet (shown above). The green jewel buttons are edged with gold and there is a gold kid fastening on the self-fabric belt. Gold bracelet and ear rings complete the outfit

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 15.

NOTHING makes me happier than being able to record the striking of a real Broadway gusher by a starry-eyed young actress during the theatrical season here—and I was thus made jolly at an extraordinarily early hour this fall. For the season had no sooner leaped from the barrier than a young woman named Helen Claire banged the gong four loud bongs, and was hailed as Miss Broadway of 1938.

ALICE HUGHES.

So welcome, Cinderella, and especially since the tale goes that you have been knocking on the Broadway door for seven years with practically no response. Now the Claire girl has knocked a homer in the Clare Booth "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," the snippy and naughty comedy by the pert minx who wrote "The Women." Miss Claire's role is appallingly long, and in less deft hands could be singularly sappy, but she played it gorgeously at the opening, and had the reward of lyric notices and audience hysteria. You've probably never seen Helen, but you've heard her voice often enough, since for some time she has been reading the comment on newsreel fashion clips. This boiled the pot while she waited for the stage to give her the break she now enjoys. Hurray, and hurray.

And so the new stage year had hardly cracked before it produced an early wonder girl in the peachy person of Helen Claire. Not well the name, for it's fun to follow the fortunes of these dolls. The wonder child of 1936, lovely Katharine Locke, is now the Ophelia to Maurice Evans' "Hamlet" here in town, and Miss Martha Scott, chosen last season for her beauteous work in "Our Town," is in Hollywood. Both doing mighty nicely, thankee. It is not time to be poking into Helen Claire's future, for what a gaudy present she has!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—No lady is safe in New York, as you've often heard. Walk along a midtown street, tending your own business if any, and zingo or zam, as the cartoonists say. Take our Mrs. Dorothy Lattier, who is strolling along Eighth avenue, a few nights ago, when zingo, her clothes are blazing with flames. Gas from the cracked tank of a car filled the gutter, some town sport tossed a lighted coffin nail, and wham. The gutter is alight, and so is Dorothy! Gallant passer-by put her out. But that shows you. Isn't this a terrible city?

Speaking of things to do after dark beside play bridge, the rumba dives are opening and bid fair to be as popular as last season, and if you care to drop in at the St. Moritz, you can hear a French lady named Yvonne Bouvier perform the intricate and thrilling artistic feat of singing "A Tisket, a Tasket" with a Parisian accent. Quel genius! No wonder some people call this the greatest city in the world . . .

Elsa Maxwell, the famous author, is back in town ready to detonate her first party of the winter for the unimaginative members of cafe society, or pretentious pub-crawlers . . .

This column appears daily and Sunday.

Wardrobe Hints Are Listed For the Business Woman

By Katherine Vincent.

SINCE THE business of this department is fashions, we gathered together a series of costumes which will solve the problem of what to wear to the office and for the conferences, teas and dinners which are an important part of every business woman's life.

Simple woolens with cardigan neck lines and softly pleated skirts are suggested for tailored daytime wear in warm autumn greens and wines or in black if you prefer. One-piece black crepe woolen dresses with matching boleros or bloused jackets are shown, too, some trimmed with quilted silk and others with rows of shiny embroidered buttons.

Dresses for teas and informal evening occasions are made of velvet and crepe, sometimes combined with coloful flowered lame, and for special dinners there are full-length tailored velvet, shirtmakers, fastened down to the waist with jeweled buttons and piped with gold kid.

One lovely long-sleeved dinner dress was made of wine crepe, with bands of gold stitching on the bodice and on the wide dolman sleeves.

A black velvet dress cut with a deft hand wins honors. It has short, puffed sleeves and flattering touches of crisp, starched lace. The bodice is skillfully fitted, and the skirt flares away in soft folds.

A costume particularly needed by the business woman is one she can wear either to dinner or for formal evening affairs. The dress with the jacket shown on this page is a good suggestion. Another apparel need of the woman executive is the dress than can be worn to the office and then on to cocktails. The wool dress shown above with the flowers on the shoulders would meet such demands. The dress with the pleated skirt and buttons down the front would serve for a variety of occasions.

Body Adapts Self to Change In Air Pressure

Stands Reduction Best Sense Air Dangerous Leads to "Bends"

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

RESPIRATION MAY be affected in an abnormal way simply by a change in the pressure or amount of air about us.

When I was discussing the digestive system last week, I spoke of the nice way it had adapted itself through the centuries and eons to the foods that the earth produces. Its digestive juices reduce those, but we might starve if we went to Mars because our digestions would be utterly unfit to cope with the strange foods—fruits, vegetables or flesh—or things beyond our imagination on which the Martians subsist. In fact, I knew a young lady who almost starved when she went to an island in the East Indies, and for almost the same reason. She couldn't get used to grasshoppers and such as table delicacies.

In the same way, we have grown accustomed to the sea of air in which we live. There is a certain concentration to it and we breathe it in and out at that concentration with complete ease. When it changes, we are in more or less distress.

At High Altitude

I am writing this at a level of over seven thousand feet above sea level. And I am distinctly conscious of my breathing. Some of my fellow travelers, who are younger than I am, profess to feel no discomfort whatever.

If we were to go any higher, I am sure I should have all the symptoms of mountain sickness—dizziness, dimness of vision, partial deafness, muscular weakness and inco-ordination, etc. These symptoms are all recognized as consequences of high mountain climbing. The mountaineer must get acclimatized to them.

This acclimatization is an example of nature's manifold resources in adaptation. After several days in a very high altitude, the rate and depth of the breathing automatically increase. When this happens—when you voluntarily, even at ordinary altitudes, increase your breathing for any length of time—the alkalinity of the blood increases. And this automatically allows the blood to carry more oxygen to the tissues.

Apples Are Theme For Post's Next Recipe Contest

Apples will serve as the theme of The Post's new recipe contest, at suggestion of Miss Evelyn Wiesbacker, 4423 Eighth street northwest. An enthusiastic food page follower, Miss Wiesbacker nominated apples for the contest with these remarks: "Now that autumn is here, with its brisk, invigorating weather, we naturally think of the good harvest foods symbolic of the season. One of life's most pleasant occupations is that of roasting popcorn and apples before an open fire."

If you, too, share Miss Wiesbacker's fondness for this nutritious fruit, enter a tested apple dish in this week's recipe contest. Any apple recipe is eligible.

If you can visualize apples at their best only when made into dumplings, jelly, sauce or as a stuffing, enter your recipe before October 22, the closing date. Mail entries to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor, for one of five csah awards. First prize is $3, second is for $2, and there are three additional prizes of $1 each.

Hue Chosen By Skin And Garb

Orange for Blondes But Not With Purple Nail Polish Matches Coral for the Mature

By Carolyn Abbott.

THE DAY has gone when one shade of makeup can be worn with all costumes. With the introduction of vivid purples, deep winey shades and off-color blues in this season's fashions, makeup must be changed to keep pace with the variety of tones. And smart women will have at least one shade of rouge and lipstick for each group of colors in her wardrobe. This information was gleaned from makeup authorities of the Washington Style and Beauty last week.

According to these authorities there are two basic principles governing the selection of correct makeup. Miss Theo Bender, who stresses the hygienic care of the skin, says that all makeup should be chosen with regard to skin tones. To determine the skin tones, she advocates stimulating the face until fresh blood brings to the surface the natural coloring. Then choose the rouge, powder and lipstick that will duplicate the natural blush.

Powder Must Blend

"Your powder can spoil the effect of both rouge and lipstick if it does not blend with the skin tone," said Miss Bender. "One shade of powder is insufficient, for the color of the skin changes daily. It depends greatly upon the amount of sleep you have what color of powder your skin will need on a particular day. For the days when you are feeling jaded from loss of sleep you will need a powder with more warmth than the days when you are in glowing spirits. Remember that a medium weight powder is most conducive to skin health."

Miss Mildred Lord contends that makeup should be chosen to complement the colors of your wardrobe as well as in relation to skin tones. "When buying lipstick and rouge, consider them as accessories that match the predominating color of your dress," she said. "And have the same color of nail polish for the fingernails as rouge and lipstick for the face."

In general she believes that orange tones are best for blondes and red for brunettes. Light shades should be worn with pastel colors and more vivid shades with darker hues.

Suggestions Given

"Almost any type can wear rouge and lipstick with the purplish tint," said Miss Lord, "but it must be carefully co-ordinated with the costume.

"For example, don't wear an orange or red makeup with clothes of purplish hue. And avoid purple makeup with luggage tan, London tan and other brown shades. The best make-up for the latter is a terra cotta or coral shade."

Here are Miss Lord's suggestions for matching purplish tints of makeup with the new and old shades in dresses, accessories and hair colors.

Purple is excellent for the white or gray hair and the very deep brunette.

It is effective for all ages when worn with a white costume on any type, for it gives life to the skin tones and makes for splendid contrast.

Purple is flattering with black; good for blue (with purple cast) and is advantageous with navy.

For the Older Woman

For the older woman who desires a conservative, natural makeup she advises terra cotta or coral shades. And for a vivid makeup that is more striking she recommends fuchsia.

Use only a purplish tint of makeup with any purple shade.

A gray costume is best offset with makeup of a purplish tone.

Apply all day-time makeup in sunlight and don't make up under artificial lights.

As for daytime makeup, Miss Lord says: "Stay away from blue and purple with purple and other vivid colors. Use green blended with purple or green shaded very delicately. Brown eye-shadow is the most natural for daytime use. It is also excellent for filling in the white spot around the eyes where the eyebrows have been pulled too thin. This can also be blended effectively with blue.

"Those with protruding eyes should avoid all eye-shadow for daytime wear unless blended in a brown color over the eyelids."

Learn to Enjoy Good Music

POOR HARRIET! Everyone sees how the concert bewilders her. Once, when fine music could be heard only by a few, such lack of appreciation was excusable.

But not in these days of great radio orchestras, musical motion-pictures! Cultured people expect you to understand fine music. What an outsider you feel if you "can't make anything of it."

But you can! This moment you may be humming a favorite dance number—which delights you by the pattern of its "tune."

Well, if you like dance music, listen to some written by great composers—the "Blue Danube," by Johann Strauss, the music for the ballet, "Les Sylphides," by Chopin.

As you listen to such music you find it has "tunes," too. Delightful, subtle "tunes"—and you easily learn to follow their more elaborate patterns. You distinguish, too, the voices of the orchestra instruments.

Most often you hear the pattern carried by the stringed instruments such as the violins. Sometimes the woodwinds take it up; you hear clearly the bird-like flute. Brasses give brilliance; the drums accent the rhythm.

A thrill when you can enjoy with other music lovers such works as Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre." And did you know that Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony" is famous for its dance forms?

Whatever your favorites in "everyday" music — ballads, marches—let them lead you to their glorious counterparts in great music.

Enjoy the musical season just beginning! Our 40-page booklet, "What You Should Know About Music," tells about orchestras, opera, folk and art songs, how to listen. A helpful guide to give you pleasure, confidence with music lovers.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "What You Should Know About Music," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Notable among weddings in the Waynesboro, Pa., section last week was the marriage of Miss Clara M. Schnebly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Schnebly, of Clearspring, Md., to Isaac N. In a pretty wedding at 6 o'clock Friday evening in St. Paul's Evangelical and Reformed Church, Miss Ruth E. Huntsbery, and Sydney R. Benchoff were married by the Rev. Victor H. Jones. About 200 guests witnessed the ceremony and attended the reception which followed. Mrs. C. LeRoy Spoonhour, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and Merle Benchoff was his brother's best man.

Other weddings include that of Miss Irene Beeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Beeler, to Richard Nelson, of Baltimore; the wedding of Miss Dorothy Spence to William T. Someday You too will use FLAMELESS COOKING

The wood-burning stove was once considered the last word in cooking perfection. But no lightening of labor came with it, for wood still had to be chopped, ashes removed and there was the never-ending task of cleaning the stove, the smoke-stained walls and cooking utensils.

More and more people are realizing what the Electric Age can do for them. More and more women are learning the advantages of Flameless Cooking with the Electric Range, roaster, hotplate and all sorts of small appliances. They are clean, economical, fast, healthful, safe and truly modern. Think of it! 15,000 homemakers in and near Washington have already adopted Flameless Cooking. Housewives using Electric Ranges tell us: "It costs so little"—"I never knew a kitchen could stay so clean so long"—"Food tastes different"—"I never have baking failures"—"I cook three meals every day for our family of six without fuss or worry." Statements like that can mean only one thing—Satisfaction!

Flameless Cooking has public acceptance! You, too, should adopt Flameless Cooking in your home. Why don't you try it?

Home Building Shows Gains For September

Higher Than August
2 N. Y. Projects Help
No Seasonal Decline

Home construction made further gains in September, F. W. Dodge Corporation reports. Contracts awarded last month for dwelling accommodations of all kinds in the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains amounted to $99,574,000, compared with $65,590,000 in September, 1937, and with $99,732,000 in August of this year. The increase over September, 1937, was 52 per cent and the daily average of September contracts was somewhat higher than the August daily average, whereas there is usually a seasonal decline in September.

Two outstanding large projects swelled the September residential total, both in New York City. One was the Red Hook housing project, first to be started under the new Federal public housing program, contracted for at $7,243,000. The other was the first unit of the vast investment housing project of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., valued at $11,685,000. While these two projects were of exceptional character in the September record, both are forerunners of similar public and private housing projects to come.

Together, they accounted for nearly $19,000,000 of the $34,000,000 increase over September, 1937. Of the 15 districts making up the 37 States territory, nine besides the Metropolitan New York area showed residential contract increases over the corresponding period of last year. The month's record included 10,090 new single-family houses, compared with 8,373 contracted for during September, 1937.

Recovery progress in residential building is shown in the 1938 record by quarters. The dollar volume of contracts in the first quarter ran 33 per cent behind the first quarter of 1937; the second quarter of this year ran 15 per cent behind; but the third quarter ran 30 per cent larger in residential volume than the third quarter of last year. At the end of September, the cumulative dollar volume of residential contracts for this year was only 7 per cent behind the figure for the first nine months of 1937.

There has been no seasonal let-up in the flow of mortgage-insurance applications to the Federal Housing Administration. The volume of mortgages selected for appraisal continued through September at the rate, established last march, of $22,000,000 a week. Mortgages accepted for insurance by the FHA continued at the rate of $15,000,000 a week. With these indications of continued small-house building, increased financing of large-scale private rental projects, and a huge public housing program barely started, the prospect for residential building during the remainder of 1938 and, at the very least, through the first half of 1939, appears exceedingly good.

Refrigeration Saves Trips to Food Shops

Takes Step Forward
Cost Is Low
Show at Rock Creek

Modern food-keeping in the home takes a decided step forward in refrigeration. Never before have homemakers been able to purchase such complete food protection nor have they had the opportunities for so many savings in time and money as refrigeration makes possible.

Outstanding features of new Westinghouse refrigerators include large, usable frozen-storage space for the new quick-frozen foods now becoming so popular; a new scientifically-designed meat compartment, which provides the low temperatures, high humidity and limited air circulation so important for the preservation of meats; a new temperature regulator with which one can control within one degree the food compartment temperature.

Other important developments include more humidified storage space for fresh fruits and vegetables; wide use of sliding, adjustable shelves; more ice-cube capacity; more models equipped with the new all-metal, quick-releasing ice trays and handy leftover dishes.

Together with increased mechanical efficiency and low operating costs, new features make refrigeration profitable for the user. With such complete food protection provided, thrifty housewives can now shop only once or twice a week for food and save on their present food costs.

The Paul P. Stone-Westinghouse "home of tomorrow," now on display at 4220 Argyle terrace in Crestwood at Rock Creek Park," new development of Stone, Lord & Caldwell, is characterized by electric refrigeration. To see this modern dwelling and its Westinghouse equipment, drive out Sixteenth street northwest to Varnum street, then left three blocks.

Maryland Sales Equal District's

Maryland residential sales are equaling in amount those of the District and Virginia. One home project of the 19 attractive dwellings in Woodside, Md., has proved so popular with home buyers that 17 have already been sold. These houses, built by J. D. Draper, are being presented by the office of J. Garrett Beitzell. The remaining unsold houses are located in the 1200 block of Garfield place, in Woodside.

Westgate Celebrates 2d Anniversary

Popular Suburb
45 Homes Sold
6 Home Sites Bought

Advantages of a community which is restricted socially and architecturally are readily apparent to the home hunter who wants good environment for himself and family and who also desires improvement in the value of his home investment.

A neighborhood which has been zoned to prevent encroachment of commercial or industrial construction and in which the houses have been erected in accordance with high standards of building and design, is always a desired field for home buyers of taste and discernment.

These facts explain the popularity of Westgate, beautiful subdivision of the Simpson-Peak Co., in nearby Maryland, now celebrating the second anniversary of its successful existence. More than 45 homes in keeping with the attractiveness of their surroundings have been sold in this community since its inception.

Six home sites have also been purchased in the development where six homes are now under construction; five just completed and work on two more starting. Westgate, on a healthy wooded elevation, may be visited by going out Massachusetts avenue four blocks beyond the District line. William Boswell is sales agent for the project.

Basements Eliminated In Modern Homes

A basement was considered an essential in the house of a generation ago. Modern home equipment has largely eliminated the reasons why basements were considered necessary.

The utility room containing the heating unit, and usually the laundry, of the modern home saves many steps for the housewife. It is more readily kept clean than the basement.

12-Month Construction Season Urged

Many Would Profit Let-Down Held Costly Custom Is Blamed

Savings and loan associations have been requested by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to lead a campaign for all-year building, eliminating the winter let-down which is so costly to American economic and social life. Labor, industry, mortgage lenders, transportation units, and home buyers would all benefit greatly by the establishment of a 12-month year for home construction, instead of the present 8-month building year, it is shown in an article in the Federal Home Loan Bank Review.

"The reasons for seasonal fluctuations in building activity are probably more emotional and traditional than practical," the board said, revealing that seasonal fluctuations follow temperature trends whether in the North or the South. The fact that in some areas of the country, the mean temperature never falls below 55 or 60 degrees, yet the seasonal pattern of residential construction is very similar to that existing in more northern areas where the temperature during the winter months is well below freezing, shows that custom, as well as climate, is an influential factor in determining building activity, the article said.

With the lowest volume of building occurring in the winter months, the peaks in construction range from March in some Southern States to July and August in certain Northern areas. Throughout the summer, residential construction tapers off, followed by a minor rally in fall which precedes a sharp retrenchment during the winter months. The article concludes:

"If the peaks and valleys of building activity were leveled off, tremendous direct and indirect savings would accrue: to labor, for they would be more sure of continuous employment and a larger gross annual income; to contractors, for their equipment and organizations would be put to continuous productive use; to owners, for they would get the benefits of early rentals and savings of interest and taxes on idle investments; to buyers, for the building costs of their homes would be lower without any seasonal exaggeration; to material manufacturers; to transportation units and mortgage lenders.

"Since increased winter construction is not held in check by practical causes but rather by public psychology in many areas, lending institutions, through their position as sources of credit for building, can exert a substantial influence in lengthening the present 8-month construction period to a full year and thus in stabilizing business activity itself."

M Street Flats Projected

Eight two-story brick flats will be constructed by Eugene B. Casey at 1901-1911 and 1900-1918 M street northeast, costing $76,000. G. T. Santmyers is the architect.

Modern Kitchens Differ From Old

Modern kitchens are and should be totally unlike old kitchens. They should possess a new and higher type of cleanliness, compactness, airiness, sanitation, bauty, and convenience.

The modern kitchen reflects more progress than any room in the house. Most of the equipment used therein has passed through a great change in size, appearance, utility, finish, convenience, and cost of operation.

Plumbing Materials Should Be of the Best

The prospective owner of a new home should assure himself that the materials used in the plumbing system and the workmanship necessary for its installation are the best available. As most of the pipes are installed under the floors and behind finished walls, heavy expense is involved in their replacement or repair.

Garden Homes Has Only Two Units Unsold

On Colesville Pike Service Complete Houses Well Built

With the 1938 building season concluding for a brief period in the Washington area, it is generally conceded that a major point of concern to the average prospective home owner is the location of the home site. Selecting a location is largely a matter of personal choice guided by definite signs of progressive neighborhood development. Established inspection standards and an intensive home educational program have resulted in greater home values.

Strict adherence to high standards have made it possible for Garden Homes Inc., developers of Northwood Park, to promote a large group of speculative houses during the past two years, according to representatives of that corporation. Its 1938 speculative program has drawn to a close with the offering today of the last two homes that remain unsold. Everything now being constructed by this corporation has been sold under contract, and its entire winter program includes only houses built for specific purchasers.

On Colesville Pike

Northwood Park is situated on a convenient, direct highway—Colesville Pike. It is about half a mile beyond the Indian Spring Golf Club on the left side of the road. Fifty-six acres of beautifully wooded, rolling ground have been subdivided into individual home sites that provide ample space for flower and vegetable gardens, out-door fire-places, or any of the things that country lovers might desire. no lots are sold for speculation, but home sites may be purchased for future building purposes.

The corporation offers a complete home service. Cost estimates and material advice are given, without obligation, by any of the firm's officers. All financing problems are handled by James Wilson, president of the corporation. Thomas E. Clark, Washington heating and plumbing engineer, is vice president, and his experience in this field qualifies him to equip every type of home as efficiently and economically as possible. William Walter Smith, treasurer, is in charge of actual construction.

Homes Well Constructed

The homes offered today are examples of sound construction at resonable cost. Located at 205 and 216 Clark street, they present two popular interpretations of the two-story, five-room plan. No. 205 Clark street has been artistically furnished for exhibit by the Hecht Co. under the direction of Mary Annette Chittick. It has a detached garage, five large rooms and a full basement. The roof is of slate and the house is of hard-burned brick painted white.

All homes built by the corporation include the following protective features: full insulation, weatherstripping, caulking, waterproofing and bronze screens. Triple wall construction is used throughout unless otherwise specified by the buyer. Each house, whether speculative or contract, is built with the care and precision of expert craftmanship.

Northwood Park has free county bus service to all public schools in the area and there are no improvement assessments. It is within an easy 25-minute ride to downtown Washington and now has more than 80 families within its boundaries.

Look to the Roof Before Winter Sets In

Before winter storms begin, all leaks in your roof should be mended, and the roof re-coated if it needs it. Work of this type may be carried out these days on the budget plan. Consult any financial institution about obtaining funds and save your property from deteriorating further before another spring.

Egyptians Used Glass, But Not in Windows

Although glass was not used in windows until about the beginning of the Christian era, archeologists working in Egypt have uncovered graves dating from approximately 4,000 B. C., that contained glass beads of a variety of colors. Red and blue predominated.

Interior Decoration Art Now Possible for All Modern American Homes

Not Just Something for Millionaires

Important as Style Means More Beauty Simple Homes Charmed

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

The other day I talked to a woman who had the idea that interior decoration was something for movie stars and millionaires. Said she, "I just want my little cottage to be pleasant and homey and I have not a fortune to spend on it."

I tried to explain that interior decorating has as much to do with her as it does with people with elaborate taste and big budgets. That it is just as important to home furnishing as style is to clothes—yet every woman appreciates what style means to her own appearance and keeps up to the minute on it. So it's high time we all looked into the matter of just what interior decorating can mean in bringing more of beauty and charm into the simplest homes. For interior decoration is nothing more or less than art applied to everyday life.

Art applied to curtains for instance—most of us run hems in two ends of a piece of goods and let it go at that. Imagine wearing a dress made as glibly as that! Yet curtains should also have fit and finish, good tailoring and the right swing and balance in order to make any real contribution to a room. And the encouraging part of this is the fact that the difference is merely a matter of infinite pains. You don't have to spend a mint of money.

Beautifully Made

Remember this first rule for curtains: it's beter to have inexpensive material made beautifully than it is to have expensive material poorly made up. Another thing is this—you'll do a lot better by yourself to make your curtains up specially for your windows rather than to use the ready-mades. Not but what ready-made curtains don't do well enough in certain places, but even there, custom-made curtains would be a lot nicer. For fullness and proper length, for finish and real style—my advice is to make them if possible.

Use plenty of material and if you are having ruffles, make them wide and full to give an abundant generous look. For straight hung tailored curtains, have them hang either to the sill or to the floor—never part way down. If they're going to be dry-cleaned, have running weights by-the-yard in the hems so they will hang just so. If they're to be washed, have a stretcher that will dry them in shape to hang properly.

Buy as good quality of material as you can possibly afford and check on such matters as preshrinkage and filling. See that every seam and hem is turned to perfection because they'll show like everything when you get them up at the windows. And blow yourself to good rods and hardware even for the modest windows.

The exceptions I'd make about the ready-mades would be the ruffled tiebacks which will do all right if you want something crisp and pretty that doesn't cost much. And some of the ready-made lace nets looks good enough for anybody's windows. Generally though, even then I'd prefer buying them by the yard and making them exactly to fit. But maybe I'm splitting hairs there.

Classic Folds

Now please don't get the idea that I like flossy windows, because I don't. The fact of the business is that you can get by with murder as far as workmanship is concerned with a fancy lot of draping and swishing. While a simply hung window demands perfection. And this season the smartest windows are most often the simplest.

In a formal room, you can't do better than to hang sheer curtains from the ceiling to the floor. . . . curtains made of minon in plain striped or shadow print and finished at the top with French pleats and hung so that they draw back and forth with cords. Simply that and nothing more unless you want side draperies also hung in straight classic folds.

Ornate swags are out except in certain highly stylized rooms, but you'll still see rather severe tailored swag tops about. A cornice across the top is smarter made of wood in stained or painted finish . . . . . or made of compo board and with a novel fabric stretched over it (borders and stripes are especially good in this use) . . . .or made of mirror, wall paper, bamboo, fringe or some other unexpected material.

The prettiest windows I've seen this season were made of plain white muslin—tie-backs they were, very full and finished with ruffles in checked gingham. Another room in the same house had the ruffles of a striped cotton. As far as that's concerned the most thoroughly satisfying windows I've seen in a blue moon were made of sheerest fine white muslin (the kind that was used for baby dresses in the nineties—they called it Paris muslin then)—they were straight hung double Dutch curtains, like sash curtains for top and bottom of the windows. They had no trimming at all but the hems were all hand run.

Zebra Stripes

That doesn't mean, however, that there are no novel exotic windows on the scene these days. The most dramatic I've seen were hung with unlined dull green silk damask over horizontal striped ninon—then the cornice had zebra-striped linen stretched over compo board. And that, my dears, is really something.

Another exciting curtain treatment made the most of quite an ordinary wall which had three windows with wide spaces between them. A striped damask cornice was extended the entire length of the wall with curtains and draperies at the three windows and panels of morrors inset between them. When the curtains were drawn at night, the mirrors, finished as they were with the cornice, seemed almost as if they were the real windows. And in the day time when the curtains were opened, it seemed as if the entire wall were a tier of windows.

Altogether you'll find that this year's fashions in curtains have a lot in common with contemporary dress fashions, it's the line and the finish more than the trimming that makes or breaks it.

Overlee Terrace Unique Project

Numerous unique forms of community planning are being followed by developers in the great building revival characterizing the District and its environs. One new residential project has been located on a triangular tract giving all of its dwellings equal frontage on convenient roadways. The center of the tract in the rear of the houses has been parked as a recreation center with swings, sandboxes and stone ovens for outdoor cooking and picnic parties.

Besides a beautiful playground for children, 500 feet of landscaped lawn has been provided for the houses, which are built according to quality specifications and have automatic oil heat, copper water pipes and fine materials throughout. Only a few homes are to be erected in this restricted neighborhood and they will contain five, six and seven rooms.

Located in the 6000 block of Washington boulevard, Arlington, Va., this locality is called Overlee Terrace, and is built and developed by Beulah T. MacLain, for whom John S. Ward is agent. It may be seen by driving over Arlington Memorial or Key bridges to Clarendon Monument, and turning right on Washington boulevard to the 6000 black.

Rush, executive secretary and treasurer.

Special glass that permits ultra violet rays to penetrate may be used in both doors and windows and thereby provide more healthful surroundings. This incidentally meets one of the numerous purposes of a sun parlor.

Diversified Group Houses Popular

Marked progress in group home planning with regard to beauty of ensemble and diversity of elevation, is attracting many buyers to that style of residential construction. Today's builders of group dwellings eliminate the stereotyped row appearance of older days through a system of broken roof lines and varied facades.

This new idea in group arrangement has been attractively carried out by Home Construction Company, in a quiet, choice location, close to stores, schools, churches and lines of transportation. The project has been received very favorably by home buyers and a number of its 35 homes of colonial pattern and brick and stone construction have been sold.

The development, located at Tenth street and Perry place northeast, is presented by Bradley, Beall & Howard, Inc., and may be inspected by going out Michigan avenue past Catholic University and turning left on Tenth street 100 yards.

Casement Doors

Steel casement doors to match windows are available for use as exits leading to the terrace or garden, and for communicating into the house. Both single and double doors are offered in standard sizes.

Program Announced Notables to Attend Labor to Participate

A program for the National Construction Conference, to be held in Washington Thursday and Friday, was announced yesterday by John W. O'Leary, chairman of the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which is calling the meeting. Subjects included in this conference are promotional plans of material and equipment producers, construction values, local efforts to stimulate residential building, modernization, the Government's relation to construction, rebuilding blighted city areas, financing industrial and home construction.

"It is the judgment of the building industry," said Mr. O'Leary, "that the conference on local residential construction held in the chamber's headquarters in Washington the fall of 1937 made an important contribution to overcoming the decline in residential building. On the basis of this experience it seemed desirable to leaders in the construction industry to arrange for a broader conference this fall, covering the entire construction industry, for the purpose of further stimulating private construction work."

One of the practical opportunities which the conference will afford for stimulating private work will be through the presentation by responsible groups in the industry of their promotional programs for the coming year. As a result, it is expected there will be a wider understanding of these programs and an opportunity for better co-ordination of effort, particularly as these plans involve local activities. It is recognized that chambers of commerce can be helpful in stimulating private construction work in their localities and the conference will undertake to enlist their interest and co-operation.

Details of promotional programs will be presented by Dr. Wilson Compton, secretary-manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association; C. I. Cheyney, president of the Bailey Lumber Co., Bluefield, W. Va.; Douglas Whitlock, of Washington, general counsel of the Structural Clay Products Institute; V. Gilmore Iden, secretary of the American Institute of Steel Construction; Frederick C. Backus, vice president of the Architects Certified Homes Association, Buffalo; L. Rohe Walter, advertising manager of the Flintkote Co., New York City, and by representatives of the Producers' Council and the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association.

The New York World's Fair has been invited to present the program of the fair for assisting the construction industry in its promotional activities. The subject of construction values—what the industry has to offer to the purchaser of construction—has a prominent place on the program. It will be discussed by Lyle H. Olson, vice president of the American Appraisal Co. A round table will devote itself further to this subject and to a development of the progress the industry has made in recent years to improve its service to its customers.

The potential market for private construction work will be presented by Thomas S. Holden, vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, and president of the New York Building Congress. There will also be proposed a general policy for the construction industry by William Stanley Parker, of Boston, general chairman of the Construction League of the United States.

Representatives of labor organizations have accepted an invitation to attend the conference and to participate in an informal conference on labor relations. The important subject of the relations of Government and construction will be presented by W. A. Klinger, Sioux City, Iowa, a former president of the Associated General Contractors of America.

Blighted areas in cities and the opportunities which exist for rebuilding these areas through private initiative will be discussed by John McC. Mowbray, president of the Roland Park Co., of Baltimore, and chairman of the Housing Committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Financing of construction will be taken up on the second day of the conference. There will be a presentation of the subject of financing industrial construction by G. Harvey Porter, executive vice president of the Industrial Corporation, of Baltimore. Representatives of home financing institutions have a prominent place on the program. A general luncheon meeting will be presided over by George W. West, president of the First Federal Savings and Loan Associations, of Atlanta, and vice president of the United States Building and Loan League, and a representative of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks will speak.

house to be sponsored by The Washington Post.

Also present at the ceremony, representing Lansburgh & Bro., were Ralph Goldsmith, general manager; Martin Waxman, merchandising manager of the home furnishing division; Harold Singer, assistant general merchandising manager, Henry M. Voss, director of publicity; and Marshall P. Trippe, local advertising manager of The Post.

The Lansburgh and Cafritz establishments have been authorized respectively by Life Magazine to furnish and build this type of home which will demonstrate to prospective house buyers of Washington what they may secure in modern home quality within reach of their wages.

The campaign made public in a recent issue of Life Magazine follows the plan of that publication, in collaboration with Architectural Forum Magazine, to present to families representing annual incomes ranging from $2,000 to $10,000, the finest homes adaptable for modern living permissible within those salary brackets.

The magazines' program is the result of a survey including investigation of actual families' ideas and ideals regarding home needs, and incorporation of these into designs, plans and cost tables by some of the country's ablest architects.

A complete set of models of these homes in the furniture department of Lansburgh & Bro. is a feature of the demonstration. Model floor plans facilitating furniture arrangement in these exhibit dwellings also are available. The actual home will be erected at 5720 Lambeth road, Greenwich Forest.

FHA Borrowers Buying Well Within Means

Average Price $5,065
Monthly Cost $32.43
5 Rooms Most Popular

New York.—The average home purchased in 1937 with an FHA loan cost $5,065 and carried a monthly payment of only $32.43, the Architectural Forum magazine reveals in an analysis of the Federal Housing Administration's activities.

The most popular mortgage contracts, the analysis discloses, were for 80 per cent of the property value and amortized in 20 years while the dominant security was the single-family home, whic h accounted for 94 per cent of the 102,000 mortgages written.

"Upholding the mossy axiom that no more than one-fifth of monthly income should go for rent," the publication points out, "61 per cent of all borrowers pay less than 15 per cent of their income for monthly amortization and interest, and 92 per cent pay less than 20 per cent of their income.

"One-fourth of the families buying homes had incomes between $2,000 and $2,500, another fourth had incomes of less than $2,000. Since this group commonly has small savings, it can achieve home ownership only when the monthly costs are small. And, 1937 mortgages insured by FHA provided just that—over 50 per cent of the borrowers are paying under $30 a month, leaving plenty of leeway for operating and maintenance costs.

"Somewhat above these most popular groups of mortgage characteristics are the average figures. The average borrower had a middle-class income and purchased a house well within his means. More light is cast on this borrower in a synopsis of the 1937 average mortgage transaction on the single-family, FHA-insured home:

Borrower's income, $3,045; total property value, $5,384; ratio of value to income, 1.8; monthly payment, $32.43; mortgage loan, $4,541; house value, $5,065; land value, $813; plot area (square feet), 9,199; per cent of land coverage, 18.6.

"The first four items refer to premium-paying mortgages on new and refinanced homes; the last five, to mortgages accepted for insurance solely on new homes," the magazine explains. "Although not entirely comparable, together they provide a good sample of 1937's greatest mortgage activity.

"The average value of the single-family homes on which the FHA insured mortgages was $5,384. Average value per dwelling unit of two-family houses that were insured was $3,222; of the three-family, $2,767; of the four-family, $2,789. Even for families of low income, the illusion ofindependence im plied in the free-standing house apparently carries more weight than low cost.

"The most popular type of new one-family houses had five rooms (42 per cent); six rooms came second (30 per cent). Three-quarters of them had one bathroom; one-half had a one-car garage. The proportion of the lot covered by the house was generally low; 60 per cent of the dwellings covered less than 20 per cent of the lot, 80 per cent covered less than 30 per cent.

"It is interesting to note that as total value of the houses and lots increased up to $6,000 the area of the lot decreased from 11,700 square feet for properties valued at less than $2,000 to 8,200 square feet for those in the $5,000 range," the analysis comments. "In fact, the cheapest houses were built on larger lots than were houses costing $15,000 and more.

"Consequently, the most expensive houses covered a greater proportion of the lots than did the cheaper ones. But even the smaller lots would seem extravagant in the average subdivision—the area resolving into dimensions of 75 by 110 feet.

"The reason for the decrease in lot sizes as costs increase in the lower brackets was probably the gradual shift of location to more select and higher-priced neighborhoods, for the value per square foot increased progressively from 3 to 17 cents.

"Although it might be expected that property costs would vary according to the size of the cities in which they were located, such was not reported as the case. Average land values were higher in the large cities than the small, despite much smaller plot areas; but the average value of land and building combined did not vary uniformly by city size groups.

"In cities of over 1,000,000 population the average cost of new one-family dwellings was $6,566. In the smallest towns it was $5,823. The highest average cost ($7,265) was in cities with 50,000 to 100,000 population and the lowest cost ($5,247), for no apparent reason, was in the next larger size group.

"The South's temperate climate usually makes the cost of shelter in that area lower than in the North. But, no such general regional variation is shown by the one-family properties securing FHA's 1937 premium-paying mortgages. Average property values went from $3,077 in South Dakota to $9,021 in the District of Columbia.

"Neither is there any geographical consistency in the average income of borrowers; they range from $2,249 in Wyoming to $4,694 in Nevada. Consistent, however, is the conservatism reflected in the ratio of annual income to property value, varying from a low of 1.2 times income in Nevada to 2.4 times in the District of Columbia. In three States, average property value exceeded two times annual income. However, the national average of 1.8 times income was well within the most conservative mortgage lenders' rule-of-thumb."

Gulf States Increase Tung Oil Production

Optimistic reports from the Gulf States show an increase in the oil yield from domestic tung trees. A yield of 4,000,000 pounds of oil from 20,000,000 pounds of tung nuts, is encouraging planters to put in more trees this winter. Tung oil is an important ingredient of certain types of varnishes and enamels.

Rural Areas Now Attract Homeseekers

Large Plots Have Appeal
Burnt Mills Example
A Latimer Project

Recent real estate statistics record a definite trend of home buyers to the suburban sections and an increasing popularity of small country estates This is no doubt prompted by an urge to get away from crowded city districts and an inherent desire on the part of many persons for the benefits of rural living.

Smart land planners and developers are profiting by this movement in giving the city dweller a country home with enough acreage to create the effect of a small estate at moderate cost, and not too far removed from city conveniences.

This plan has been applied locally with success, one instance being the Burnt Mills Hills development of Roberts E. Latimer, in Montgomery County, Md., 10 miles from central Washington and 3 miles beyond the Silver Spring traffic light on the Colesville pike.

The community has been built up with handsome dwellings ranging from farmhouse to colonial mansion type and each surrounded by sites varying from two to five acres in dimensions. All of the attractiveness of this section of Maryland has been preserved in the planning of this popular project.

Apartment Planned

Construction of a two-story brick apartment building at 712 Ninth street northeast is planned by Charles Murgia. G. T. Santmyers is the architect.

New Homes Feature Built-in Furniture

In the construction of the modern house, provision is made for many pieces of built-in furniture. Built-in features include bookcases and benches in the living room, cupboards and the equivalent of sideboards in the dining room, special closets, built-in dressers, bunks or beds, in the bedrooms, if desired, and many types of special features in bathrooms and kitchens. The cost of furnishing the home, as well as of moving is thereby reduced.

To Erect 4 Homes

Four two-story brick residences will be erected by Aldon Construction Co., at 4420, 4424, 4428 and 4432 Chesapeake street northwest, at an estimated cost of $22,000, from designs by Edmund W. Dreyfuss.

Nelson Urges Nation Rebuild To Make Jobs

Advocates City Check May Be Held in 1940 Basis for Source Policy

By Herbert U. Nelson,
Executives Vice President, National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The possibility of a census of housing in 1940 has been discussed considerably in the last year and now there is a possibility of obtaining such a census.

For the greatest public usefulness such a census need not be a detailed "real estate inventory." To collect a great many facts not practically useful would clog the machinery of analysis, and delay and tend to obscure the information we want and need.

But in the taking of our national ten-year population count, we can if we will, include questions that will give us the background for new effort in the elimination of urban decay and the rebuilding of healthy city structures. We could obtain thus, as in no other way, facts upon which to base national and local housing policy.

If we can get off on the right foot we can have in our country a broad movement for the gradual sound needed rebuilding of our cities, a rebuilding on a modern basis that will provide for family life within the city itself under right conditions for all income groups. If we can do this the problem of unemployment will be largely taken care of for a score of years to come.

We cannot afford to lose this opportunity.

New York State Acts

A proposed new constitution for the State of New York will be voted upon by the citizens of that State in November. Included is a special article known as Article XVIII on the subject of housing. This is the first time that this subject has ever been treated in any State constitution.

The article would give the Legislature broad powers with respect to the provision of low-rent housing and concerning the replanning, reconstruction and rehabilitation of substandard and insanitary areas. Moreover, it authorizes the creation of public corporations which may have the power of eminent domain to engage in the provision of housing facilities.

The creation of public service companies in the field of housing appears to be the most feasible way of drawing private capital and private management, initiative and responsibility into the attack on blight and into the provision of low income housing under conditions of public control that would assure the attainment of socially desirable ends. Economically and from the social viewpoint they are preferable to the direct development and ownership of housing facilities by any branch of Government. The test of this is a straight, long look at the problem as a whole.

The recent constitutional convention in New York appears to have had this view.

Sales Increase

Real estate sales in typical metropolitan regions from coast to coast increased slightly during September, in spite of the fact that the European situation was at its worst during that month. September's index of sales is tops for the year. Volume of new mortgage financing is rising more rapidly than at any time since May of last year.

Since 1929 we have all had hard schooling in the stern facts of economics. To this observer it appears we can count on steadily improving conditions in real estate for a long period of years to come. The rate of this improvement will be determined by the ratio between real estate costs of all kinds and the increase in the national income.

Oldest European Dye Gave Rise to 'Gaudy'

The oldest known European dye was made from the herbaceous plant, reseda luteola, commonly called "Weld." The name weld probably came from the old German word Walda from which the French word Gaude was derived—the source of our own word "gaudy." To produce the popular gaude green of that day, the material to be dyed was first dipped in indigo and then in weld.

Group to Give Structural Awards in Md.

For Montgomery Homes Also Prince Georges To Stimulate Interest

Foundation of an architectural awards competition for residents of Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Maryland, was announced recently by the Committee on Municipal Art of the Washington-Metropolitan section of the Maryland Society of Architects.

Sponsored with a view to stimulating wider interest in architecture in nearby Maryland, the contest is open to all properties constructed in either county since January 1, 1930. In announcing the contest, Arthur L. Blakeslee, chairman of the committee, stated:

"All owners and architects who have buildings or other features in which they take a just and honest pride, and which they feel fall within the requirements stated, are urged to avail themselves of this opportunity of receiving recognition.

"Photographs of residences, public buildings, landscape work and other miscellaneous architectural features such as gateways, doorways, etc., are eligible for submission. Photos must be of work within the limits of the counties and may be submitted by the owner, architect or other person responsible for the design."

Suitable "diplomas of merit" will be awarded in the various classes, which are divided into four categories covering residential, public buildings, landscaping and miscellaneous. In the residential group, houses will be separated into cost groups, while country estates, farm houses and buildings, remodeling, etc., will be treated separately.

Entries, accompanied by photographs and details as to owner, designer, location, etc., must be in the hands of the committee by midnight October 29. They will be exhibited in the community room of the Jesup-Blair Library in Silver Spring during November.

A jury of three eminent architects will judge the exhibits and make the awards in the different types. Members of the Committee on Municipal Art include: Arthur L. Blakeslee, chairman; E. T. Dunlap, vice chairman; Maurice S. May, C. R. Funk, Donald S. Johnson and Ronald Senseman. These members are accepting entries in the contest.

Flowers Made Color In the 17th Century

During the seventeenth century a popular pigment was made from the flowers of the common blue flag or iris. The purplish blue flowers were first allowed to ferment then the juice was extracted and mixed with powdered alum. Later the pigment was called iris green. The flowers of the violet-colored pansy were also used to make a similar pigment.

Tile Brightens Kitchen

Old kitchens may be modernized by covering the walls with one of many varieties of wallboard that simulates tile. These are easy to erect and add bright, cheerful color to the kitchen. Wallboard is easily cleaned.

Home Loan Bk. System Grows To Record Size

Webb Lists Gains
Sees Great Future
Dividends Cited

At the conclusion of six years of steady growth and consistent service to American home-financing institutions, the Federal Home Loan Bank System announces that it has reached an all-time record in membership and resources.

From modest beginnings in October, 1932, when the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks first opened their doors for business, the system has grown until it now includes member thrift and home-financing establishments in nearly 2,000 American towns and cities, T. D. Webb, vice chairman of the Federal Home Lona Bank Board, revealed. Virtually every urban citizen of the Nation has a bank system member institution convenient to protect and multiply his savings or to finance the construction, purchase or renovation of his home.

Membership in the bank system has reached a peak of 3,960 institutions with total assets of $4,325,000,000. Mr. Webb says, adding that there is every prospect of continuing growth. The system now is the greatest home-mortgage credit pool in the world, it is stated.

Sees Expansion

"There is every reason to believe," Mr. Webb said, "that as America proceeds to carry out the vast housing program which it urgently needs, the strength and usefulness of the bank system will be expanded to help meet this need." As of last August 31, the membership was made up as follows: 3,913 savings, building and loan associations, co-operative banks and homestead associations, 38 life insurance companies and nine mutual savings banks.

The bank system, Mr. Webb recalled, was created by Congress in 1932 to meet a long-considered need for a national credit reservoir for home-financing institutions somewhat similar to the Federal Reserve System in the commercial banking field and the Federal Land Banks in the sphere of agricultural financing. That it is fulfilling this need, he added, is shown by its consistent year-to-year growth.

Most Banks Members

The membership of the system now includes the majority of the larger American savings and home-financing institutions, Mr. Webb said. Their position in this field is indicated by the following facts:

1. During 1937 the savings and loan associations that are members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System loaned 85 per cent of the funds advanced by all savings and loan associations in the United States.

2. They financed fully 40 per cent of all home purchases, construction, repairs and refinancing loans by all lending institutions of every class in that year.

3. Bank system members now constitute 41 per cent of all savings and loan associations in the United States and hold 65 per cent of their total assets.

They Have Prospered

As the member institutions have grown and prospered, Mr. Webb explained, so have the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks which stand behind them.

The 12 banks, on August 31, had total assets of $278,210,644 as compared with $256,877,295 at the beginning of this year. During the same eight-month period, surplus and undivided profits rose from $5,204,417 to $7,235,619 and cash and investments from $55,823,229 to $87,496,631. Consolidated gross income of the 12 banks from January to August, 1938, was $5,055,769 as compared with $3,660,526 for the same period last year.

Outstanding advances to member institutions on September 24 of this year stood at $189,871,172 as compared with $179,000,313 on the same date last year. As an index of the service the banks have rendered to their members, Mr. Webb reported that they advanced during their six years $459,752,025, of which $269,883,573 had been repaid.

Although in their early period the resources of the 12 banks consisted largely of Government investment in their capital, this proportion is being rapidly reversed. Sale of debentures of the banks to the public, plus increased purchase of capital stock by the member institutions and deposits by members with the banks, have brought down the proportion of Government participation to less than 50 per cent.

10 Million in Dividends

During the past fiscal year stock in the Federal Home Loan Banks held by member institutions increased from $31,530,510 to $36,771,205 and deposits of members rose from $14,747,559 to $19,873,356. All banks are on a dividend-paying basis, having declared dividends of $10,297,000 since their organization.

That members have increasingly taken advantage of district bank credit to expand their operations is shown by the rise in the ratio of borrowers to membership during the last few years, as revealed in these percentages: 54.6 per cent at the end of the fiscal year 1935; 63.6 per cent at the end of June 30, 1936, and 67.8 per cent on June 30, 1938.

During the past 18 months the bank system has obtained new funds for home-financing in the public money market, where five series of joint debentures of the 12 banks have been offered and quickly oversubscribed. These issues have totaled $142,700,000, of which $90,000,000 is outstanding.

Syndicate Opens Loan Office Here

Investors Syndicate announces the opening of a real estate mortgage loan office at 807 Tower Building, to make first trusts on homes and apartments. The home office of Investors Syndicate is in Minneapolis, where it was founded in 1894, and it has shown a continuous growth even during the depression years, now having assets totaling about $140,000,000. This company maintains mortgage loan departments in most of the principal cities in the United States and has been making loans in the Washington metropolitan area through a correspondent.

It now finds, according to syndicate representatives, it can better serve the borrowing public by establishing its own office. This, they state, will result in prompt servicing of applications and, as they are loaning their own money, they will charge no commissions, and by granting long-term low monthly payment loans at low interest rates will promote home ownership. The company, it is announced, will make not only conventional type loans on homes and apartments but will specialize on Federal Housing Administration loans, which type of loan it considers as giving a great security to the home owner in the way of minimum payments, carrying charges and proper standards of construction.

It is of interest, syndicate representatives remind, that the FHA loan plan has been popular over the country and that Investors Syndicate is one of the three largest holders of the FHA home loans in the United States. The local office is under the management of Don McGuiggan, who has been with the company for ten years on the West Coast and comes to the Washington office from the Seattle, Wash., office. Mr. Michael Anselmo, who has been in the real estate business in Washington, D. C., for some time, is also associated with the local office.

Certain Shingles Last for Years

There are many types of roofing, ranging from wood shingles to heavy tile.

Certain types of shingles offer many years of use and require virtually no upkeep as regards painting or repairs. Some of these materials are available for exterior walls.

A house with a flat roof should be constructed so that it may be used, if desired, as a sun deck or roof terrace.

Upstairs Laundry Is Time Saver

An outgrowth of the trend toward planning for efficiency in small homes is the upstairs laundry.

In many old small dwellings this utility room was situated in the basement. This increased the work of the housewife. Today much unnecessary labor has been eliminated by locating the laundry in a compact space directly off the kitchen.

Not only is the efficiency of the home enhanced by such an arrangement but the basement space that may be utilized for recreational or living purposes is enlarged.

Realtors to Hold Question Bee

Cash prizes totaling $175 are arranged for the coming Nationals Realtors' "querio," with $100 for top honors, $50 and $25 for runners up. The querio, something new in realtor rivalries, will be a lighter moment's feature of the coming annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at Milwaukee, November 9-12.

After the pattern of the old-fashioned spell-down and the radio quiz, John J. Berry, of Newark, as "Professor Query" will draw from a container pertinent rgal estate questions.

Contestants will represent their local real estate boards, and may be chosen, it is suggested, through local queries. They must be entered by November 1. Realtors and their employees are invited to submit questions to be asked in the contest—each to be accompanied by the answer, and $1 to be paid for each question accepted, Glen A. Wilson, Milwaukee, chairman of the contest committee, announces.

Showers Demanded

It is rapidly becoming an old American custom to start the day with a shower. The house that does not have one is being looked at askance by propect renters and buyers.

Realtors Plan Home Exhibit In Milwaukee

Rebuilding Stressed
Projects Private
Factory to Be Shown

Noteworthy current real estate developments, including some of the best new production of low cost homes; work of realtors over the country that is suggestive of what can be done in the rebuilding of American cities for a better adaptation to present economic and social needs, will be shown in slides to be exhibited at the coming annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, at Milwaukee, November 9, 10, 11 and 12.

Included in the series, collected by the association, and to be shown at sessions of the land developers and home builders division, are examples of successful reconditioning projects, including a profitable private project which converted a slum area of old "company houses" into modern low-income housing.

Large scale housing operations in the low cost range are already beginning to be announced under the plan of mortgage insurance opened for such projects by recent FHA amendments. John McC. Mowbray, chairman of the association's committee on housing, and president of the Roland Park Corporation of Baltimore, developers of some of the most notable residential areas in the country, will discuss the new possibilities at the Milwaukee meeting of the division.

D. C. Slipher, vice president of the Gunnison Housing Corporation, New Albany, Ind., will discuss the "assembled house" and what it has today to offer for home builders. Incidentally he will describe the processes in straight-line production in the corporation's factory through which raw lumber is fed from freight cars into conveyors at one end and completed houses (in unassembled panels ready for equipment to be put in) come out at the other.

Mirrors Enlarge Room

Glass is rapidly gaining importance in modern decoration. The use of large mirrors to reflect a room and increase its apparent size is a trick that has long been known to decorators. A New York apartment has an entire wall of glass panels, which makes the room seem larger, and cooler.

Store Screens To Avoid Warps

Autumn marks the end of the screen season in almost every section of the country. After making necessary repairs, screens should be stored in such a way that the frames will not be warped.

In order to prevent warping, screens should either be stood up in racks or be laid flat. If they are stacked, it is important that the surface on which they are stacked be level and that each screen be placed squarely on the one below it. Improper storage may damage the wire cloth or warp the frames.

If screens and window sills have not already been numbered, this is recommended so that when the screens are put in use in the spring they may be easily sorted and placed in their proper openings. Small duplicate brass number tags may be obtained for this purpose.

Home Owners In Memphis to Refurbish City

Future Is Planned Neighborhoods Are Unit Coming Trends Studied

A notable plan through which Memphis proposes to attack the problem of urban blight over the next 10 or 20 years by encouraging simultaneous effort of property owners in older neighborhoods to improve their neighborhoods was described at the Southeast Regional Conference of the Natoinal Association of Real Estate Boards, held in that city, by Ralph Picard, city commissioner of public service.

The Memphis program, expected to be an enormous influence toward long-term stabilization of real estate values throughout the city, includes restudy of the existing city plan in the light of economic, technological and social change; rezoning the city to adjust to these changes; adoption of the neighborhood as the unit of future city planning and drafting of a neighborhood plan under which public aids may be made available for co-operative action of property owners for neighborhood protection and improvement.

To Give "Transfusion"

In connection with a two-year restudy of its city plan recently undertaken at the instance of Mayor Watkins Overton and following projected rezoning of the city to prepare the way for new building, Memphis "proposes to give its 'ailing' older areas a blood transfusion," Commissioner Picard said, by public-private co-operative action for neighborhood betterment.

Real estate leaders over the country and civic and business groups concerned with sound city building are much interested in progress of the Memphis plan, which follows a suggestion made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards and under active study in a number of cities.

"The major objective of our present program is to rehabilitate our blighted areas, protect our good areas and thereby halt the excessive flow of population into remote suburbs," the commissioner said. "America is outgrowing its cities because there has been no strong, organized program to eradicate blight and keep the older residential districts premanently desirable.

To Organize Owners

"There seem to be two chief remedies for blighted residential districts: more adequate zoning and greater interest on the part of the property owners. The need of zoning as the first line of defense is obvious. Next we have the question of keeping neighborhoods thus protected in use. Decay of older areas is due not so much to a suburban mania, desire to keep up with the Joneses, as to genuine desire for better home environments. This is where our next remedy comes in.

"Memphis intends to make the neighborhood the unit of its future city planning and to organize neighborhood groups of property owners to protect and further the interests of their areas. This will supply a medium of joint action and develop a feeling of unity and stability among the people affected.

"A neighborhood plan is to be drafted by the city's planning experts and, if approved by the majority of owners in the district, will be carried out by degrees by the city and the owners. The city will, of course, make public improvements, such as street paving, parks and similar facilities, while the property owners improve their private holdings to the best of their ability.

Restores Local Control

"This is a typically American solution to this pressing urban problem and possesses many values of a social as well as a physical nature. In cities we grow away from the small town's neighborliness, the active participation of its people in public affairs and the keener interest felt there in anything affecting the common welfare.

"Neighborhood planning restores such local control and participation, recognizing the fact that a city is always a collection of neighborhoods and groups. Usually the grouping is random, unorganized and, consequently, unproductive. Organized into neighborhood improvement associations, however, such groups will be purposeful and will aid city officials in giving greater value for the tax dollar.

"Here in Memphis, after 18 years of planned progress, we are thoroughly sold on the necessity and value of city planning. Work on our city plan by Harland Bartholomew, St. Louis, who also is planning consultant of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, began in 1920 and was completed in 1924. Recently Mayor Overton, deeply interested in restoring blighted areas to sound conditions, retained Bartholomew for a supplementary study. This two-year project will deal with new problems and utilize techniques developed by planning experience in the last two decades.

Civic Mistakes Costly

"Our first city plan strikingly demonstrated its value when the depression brought about the great city-Federal public works programs.

"While Memphis has executed a good part of its first city plan, we realize that planning today is more vital than ever. A city laid out 100 years ago and which got the main bent of its growth before most of us were born is in many ways no more adequate to modern life than a horse and buggy is to a modern businessman. The day has come when we must look ahead in our community lief as carefully as in commerce and industry. Civic mistakes are more costly, more widespread in effect, more enduring than the errors of private business.

"As a first step we are estimating future population, determining how much land will be needed for various uses and how these land uses should be distributed to the advantage of the community. With experts pointing out that our national population is tending to level off, we do not want to build up an inflated municipal plant which will some day have to shut down in large deserted areas.

More Residential Areas

"Experience has shown that in early zoning too much property in American cities, including Memphis, was zoned for commercial and industrial use. Today in the work of zoning we are beginning at the home, in which the welfare of the community centers.

"Bartholomew's staff and our planning officials are completing the revised major street plan, to be followed by the transit plan. After these fundamentals are worked out, rezoning will begin. We expect to increase considerably our residential areas. Such rezoning, to accord with the prevailing character of a neighborhood, will at once tend to stabilize real estate values all over the city.

"Too many commercial areas spread business out too widely, depreciate the value of property in older business sections and set fictitious value on land in districts that were zoned commercial but have developed as residential.

Subdivisions Controlled

"When the residential character of such a neighborhood is assured as regards its future development, we believe that the resulting confidence on the part of property owners will lead to improvement and to appreciation of the value of the property therein."

Memphis was one of te first cities of the United States to set up control of subdivision developments outside the city limits and one of the first to extend zoning regulations into semiurbanized areas just beyond its limits. In 1925 Memphis planning officials were given authority over subdivision planning for 5 miles outside the city, territory later annexed. Today Shelby County has put planning, zoning and subdivision control into effect for its entire area of 800 square miles.

Nelson Painted Ships Red to Hide Blood

An early psychological use of color was demonstrated by Lord Nelson, admiral of the British fleet, at Trafalgar, before his ships closed with the enemy off the Spanish coast, he had the bulkwarks and companionways of his ships, the powder buckets, gun carriages, and some of the guns, painted a brilliant red. With this accomplished, blood that followed the hand to hand fighting of naval battles in those days would be far less noticeable and consequently less discouraging to Nelson's sailors.

N.Y. Architects To Plan United Legal Front

3-Day Meeting Set To Discuss Legislation Joint Group in Charge

A convention of registered architects in New York State will be held under auspices of the New York State Association of Architects at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City, October 27-29. The Joint Committee of Architectural Societies in the Metropolitan Area will be host. Addresses by leading New York architects, a discussion of legislation affecting architects and visits to the Cloisters and the World's Fair grounds will be included in the program.

"There are many difficulties besetting our profession today which can only be remedied by concerted action," Wesley S. Bessell, member of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects and chairman of the committee on convention arrangements, said in a statement explaining purposes of the meeting.

"Now for the first time every architect in the State, regardless of affiliation with local societies, will have a voice in the discussion of existing or pending legislation affecting the practice of architecture and the recommendations to be made at Albany as a result of these discussions will have the weight of a united and determined body behind them.

"For too long architects have suffered from individual and collective timidity and a type of professional aloofness mistakenly called dignity. It is high time that the architects of this State emerged from their false fronts and took collective action in the interest of the public of which they are a part."

The architects will register at the Hotel Pennsylvania from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. October 27. At 1 p. m. there will be a luncheon presided over by Arthur Loomis Harmon, president of the New York Chapter of the A. I. A. James W. Kideney, president of the New York State Association of Architects, will describe the general purpose of the convention, while Richmond H. Shreve, of New York City, a director of the institute, will speak on the interrelation of architectural organizations in New York State and the A. I. A. plan of national unification. At 4 p. m. the architects will visit the Cloisters, where tea will be served.

Friday morning will be devoted to sightseeing. Following a luncheon at the Hotel Pennsylvania, Mr. Harmon will preside at an afternoon meeting at which there will be a general discussion of legislation affecting New York State architects. Speakers will be Matthew del Gaudio and Charles C. Platt, of New York City; James Vetter, of Syracuse; C. Storrs Barrows, of Rochester; Gilbert L. Van Auken, of Albany, and State Senators John J. Dunnigan, of New York City, and Thomas C. Desmond, of Newburgh. Stephen F. Voorhees, chairman of the board of design of the New York World's Fair, will welcome the architects at the fair grounds at 4:15 p. m.

Mr. Kideney will preside at the Saturday morning meeting, at which additional problems affecting New York State architects will be dealt with. Topics to be discussed include development of Federal, State and municipal architectural bureaus and the relation of the private architect to the public. Written questions on means of making the profession more useful and effective will be considered. A final luncheon meeting will take place at 1 p. m.

Members of the committee on convention arrangements, in addition to Mr. Bessell, are Hobart B. Upjohn, reception and information; Ward W. Fenner, publicity; Gerald A. Holmes, finance and hotel arrangements; Edgar I. Williams, program, and Maxwell Cantor, Matthew del Gaudio, Arthur L. Harmon, Gerald L. Kaufman, William Tilden Koch, E. N. MacCollin, Raymond J. Martin, William T. MacCarthy, Charles C. Platt, Henry Saylor, Robert F. Schirmer, Maurice G. Uslan, Cornelius J. White, William Wilson and Frederick J. Woodbridge.

The joint Committee of Architectural Societies in the Metropolitan Area includes the New York and Brooklyn chapters of the A. I. A., and the New York, Brooklyn, Bronx, Westchester, Staten Island and Long Island Societies of Architects. Members of the New York State Association of Architects are the Albany, Brooklyn, Buffalo, New York City, Westchester and Central New York chapters of the A. I. A., and the Bronx, Brooklyn, Long Island, New York, Rochester, Staten Island, Syracuse, Westchester and Western New York Societies of Architects.

Leaded Windows In Old Manors

The manors of Old England have contributed much to the beauty of architecture. Leaded lights, set in metal casements were inseparable partners in the old Tudor homes and modern taste still clings to the leaded window, not only because it is closely associated with architectural traditions, but because it is practical, economical and has a charm all its own.

Regardless of the material used on the construction of a house, the skilful combination of architectural harmony and practical utility, in the modern counterparts of the metal casements of Tudor times, will be found to blend perfectly. Such windows give animation to the exterior of a building and add to the decorative value of the interior. They are easy to wash and keep clean. If leaded lights are used, the cames requires no painting, while when steel cross and vertical bars hold the panes in place, they need be painted but once every four years.

Horizontal lead bands of modern casements are reinforced with a steel core in the heart of the lead. This adds strength and durability to the window or door. To meet the demands of harmonious design, leaded lights glazed with obsure glass for use in bathrooms are provided, while for use in sun rooms or children's play rooms special Vitaglass is available.

House Plants Reward Slight Trouble in Care

Geraniums Need Sun, Little Water or Feeding
Begonias Require Shade and Humidity
Most Flowers Should Have Leaves Washed

By Katherine Barrett Pozer.

HOUSE PLANTS become intimate friends of those who grow them. After nursing a favorite house plant back to health there is real pleasure in the signs of returning strength and the ensuing bloom or plentiful foliage. Some house plants like full sun, others more or less shade. Some require copious watering and others rebel if watered too frequently. Many types must be heavily fed and others become lazy if given too rich a diet.

The general rule for culture of the older favorites are well known. Geraniums are better bloomers with scant water and feeding, and not too rich a soil, and like a bright window. Begonias, which in their natural environment grow under trees and in woodlands, where the sun only penetrates for part of the day, like a less sunny position and should not be in the sun during the hottest part of the day. They must never be allowed to wilt, as it will take a long time to repair the loss of moisture. They like humidity but not too much water. An easy way to have these conditions is to fill the saucers with peat moss, which when kept damp will create the humidity they desire. Most house plants like their leaves washed and watered, with the exception of those with hairy leaves, such as the Gloxinias. Water will decay their foliage

Ivies and other vines are very satisfactory, as are the old favorites asphidestra and sanseveria, which have become among the smartest of all house plants. The straight spikes of foliage when placed in the new containers are perfect in a modern setting. They require almost no care and do their best under almost any conditions. Cacti have long been favorites. The well known Christmas cactus, with its brilliant blooms which always arrive for the Christmas season has been used in American homes for more than a century.

Following the renewed interest in window and house gardens nurserymen have been scouring this country as well as foreign lands for new and satisfactory plants. In venturing into the realm of these new plants it is advisable to purchase them direct from the grower, so that rules for their culture may be obtained.

Window Boxes Help

With the interest in house plants, or we should say house gardens, for many are miniature gardens with a surprising amount of bloom, ways have been devised for their display and their grouping around windows. A favorite and simple way is the window box. The best method of using plants in these indoor window boxes is to keep them in individual pots. In this way they can be shifted as one desires, and replaced if they prove unsatisfactory or when through their blooming season. These boxes can be made to have the appearance of a planted box by the use of potted vines which will cover the different flower pots.

Another attractive way of having plants grow around the window was demonstrated at a flower show in Baltimore several years ago. Small graduated, semi circular shelves were placed in between the two windows in the form of a small "what not." This made a very attractive window picture.

Memphis Has Prize

One of the most beautiful window settings we have seen was in a home in Memphis. In both the dining and drawing rooms there were small bay windows. Narrow glass shelves held a collection of ivy and small blooming plants. Each of these was placed in attractive containers and in the intervening spaces were pieces of rare colored glass. The windows were placed at the height of low wainscoating and the floor space built up to this height. On this broad shelf were placed one or two jardinieres filled with blooming plants.

Another dining room had an attractive window setting. The decorations in the room were modern with white walls and panelling and a wide window. On each side of this were placed against a background of blue curtains two white metal semi circular stands filled with white geraniums. This effect was, of course, more elaborate and more difficult to keep, as it would require constant replacing of plants.

Another attractive window garden is obtained with wire and green foliage plants interspersed with paper white narcissus. These can be planted in succession and fresh plants ready to fill in during the winter.

Plant Narcissus Now

Bulbs are among the loveliest of all flowers for the house. The paper white narcissus are probably the easiest and, therefore, the most popular, as they grow readily in water. Planted now, they will be ready to bring into the living room in about two months. They should be placed in gravel to prevent tipping. It is most important to place them firmly, for they lose their beauty if they fail to stand upright. To have strong blooms they should be placed in the dark for about two weeks until the root system is well developed. This dark place must be cool, as they need a cool location while the buds are forming. This will give them a sturdy appearance instead of the tall, weak leaves often seen. Roman hyacinths also grow well in water if placed in containers made for them which allow space for their heavy roots. They will not grow satisfactorily in a flat bowl. Other bulbs which will grow in water are mammoth yellow crocus and two yellow narcissus, the golden spur trumpet narcissus and the narcissus polyanthus. Soleil d'Or, which is similar to the white paper variety; freesia and chinodoxa are easily cultivated in soil and do not require any special attention other than a cool place away from the window when first planted.

Tulips Are Tougher

Tulips, daffodils and hyacinths planted in soil are more difficult to grow, but well worth the trouble of preparation. It is necesasry to prepare them as early as the bulbs can be obtained, as they require quite a long time in a cold, dark place. A cold frame is the best place for them. Before being planted in pots they must first be soaked and then placed on a bed of cinders, witn soil packed close around them. They must be covered with straw, a layer of leaves and about 3 inches of soil.

Different bulbs require different lengths of time to get their root growth and this is a very important feature. The times are, approximately: Crocus, four weeks; narcissi, three months; tulips, two weeks longer.

Small bulbs such as scilla and grape hyacinths take about seven weeks. It is advisable to mark each pot with a stake which will remain above the topsoil so that the pots may be identified. As in the bulbs grown in water, the plants must be kept in a cool, shaded place until the buds develop.

Single and double tulips are more satisfactory than the Darwins for house forcing. The doubles such as Boule de neige, white, murillo, pink, crown-of-gold yellow and the scarlet imperator rubrorum are particularly effective.

Cold Frames Safeguard Many Plants

Aid Canterbury Bells
Prevent Winter-Kill
Help Summer Seedings

Two lovely perennials which are difficult to grow without protection are the foxgloves, with their stately spires, and the canterbury bells. Although they are perfectly hardy so far as cold weather is concerned, they are very susceptible to wet weather, and thrawing and freezing.

There is only one safe way to grow them in cold climates and that is by wintering them in a cold frame, where they will be safe from wet and the changes in temperature will be tempered by the glass of the frams. Transplant them to the frame in the fall about 2 inches apart each way.

Poppy anemones, botanically called anemone coronaria, can be grown for early spring cutting with great success in a frame. They have peculiarly dried up looking tubers, which are not of the hardiest kind, but which can be wintered with a little protection.

One difficulty which should be carefully considered is the determining of the top of the tuber. Usually it is indicated by a slight depression with a few points in it. In other cases the old roots may still be clinging to the under side, and can be sure of yourself when this is the case. If there should be any doubt, plant it edgeways. They need a rich soil and should be planted 2 inches deep.

There seems to be no end to the uses for a cold frame. Designed principally for spring to hurry up the season, it makes a perfect seed bed for summer seedlings, as well as a late planting of perennials. If you don't have a cold frame, this is as good a time to build one as any other.

The frosts of late fall bring to mind the problems of harboring perennial seedlings. If you planted them in the garden, you will no doubt need some additional protection, and the cold frame will provide it. The best all-around method is to pot the plants, and set them into the soil of the frame. Such treatment assures them a few more weeks of growth, and will enable them to benefit from extra warmth in the spring and get an early start. They will also be easily transplanted.

A more timely use for the cold frame during the cold weather is for rooting winter flowering bulbs. Hyacinths, early tulips, narcissus and amaryllis are the principal ones which need a dark, cool situation to encourage early root formation. Bury them in the frame be in the pots you expect to grow them in, and when roots have developed sufficiently bring them indoors for the quick growth of the tops and blossoms.

Thomas to Sing At Baltimore

Announcement of the seventy-third season of Friday afternoon recitals at the Peabody Conservatory of Music has been made by the director, Otto Ortmann, and the news has interest for Washingtonians, who from time to time attend some events in Baltimore. John Charles Thomas, the distinguished American barytone who was a scholarship student at Peabody, will present the 1,000th recital beginning the series on October 28.

The November recitals will be given by Virgil Fox, organist; Simon Barer, pianist; Felix Salmond, violoncellist, and Pasquale Tallarico, pianist. William Primrose, violist, will be heard on December 2, Fraser Gange, barytone, on December 9 and Austin Conradi, pianist, on December 16.

Frank Gittelson, violinist; Alexander Sklarevski, pianist; the Coolidge String Quartet, and Ossy Renardy, violinist, will present the January programs at weekly intervals. For the four February events are scheduled Carl Hartmann, tenor; Maurice Eisenberg, violoncellist; Gertrude Pitzinger, mezzo-soprano, and the Peabody String Quartet.

Two members of the National Symphony Orchestra, George Wargo, violist, and Sylvia Meyer, harpist, will give the March 3 recital. The Pro Arte Quartet of Brussels will play March 10. No artist has yet been announced for March 17 and the series will close March 24 with a recital by Anna Kaskas, contralto.

3 Cuts Needed To Save Bark When Pruning

First Saw Upwards
Then Downwards
Saves Crash on Tree

In fall pruning of trees, guard against stripping away bark when the pruned limb drops. To remove a limb safely, make two preliminary cuts before the final clean cut. First saw up half-way through the limb a foot or so from the trunk. Two or three inches outside this cut saw down from the upper side of the limb until the branch splits off and drops, leaving a rough stub. Third, saw off the stub close to the main trunk or branch.

Failure to make the first undercut is likely to result in serious damage to the bark. The falling limb will carry with it a long streamer of bark torn from the larger growth, making a wound that heals slowly if at all. The final cut should be almost flush with the outer bark of the larger limb. If well done the bark will grow over the wound within a few years and leave hardly a trace of the amputation.

U. S. Gardeners Overlook Bet In Susan Vine

Colorful But Slow
Good Ground Cover
From South Africa

The black-eyed Susan vine (thunbergia alata) is so unusual and charming that reasons for its limited use are rather difficult to find. Few gardeners have it in their gardens, yet it is one of our most interesting annual climbers.

To be sure, it does not climb so readily as a morning glory, but, given a chance to clamber up a trellis or wire fence, it makes a splendid showing with masses of interesting bright green leaves and a multitude of large flowers.

The colors of the blooms are rather unusual in that they represent lovely soft shades of cream and nankeen yellow. The center is a velvety dark purple, so deep in color as to appear solid black. The plants bloom continuously from early July until frost.

One excellent use is for ground cover where early flowering annuals held sway earlier in the year. Actually thunbergia is a perennial, but since it is not hardy it is treated as a tender annual. Seed may be started indoors in April or sown outdoors in early May after all danger of frost is past.

Its native land is Africa, where it is found growing wild in the southeastern section of that continent. It likes a sunny position and thrives in spite of heat and drought so long as the roots have a fair amount of moisture.

Friday Music Club To Meet Nov. 4

The Friday Morning Music Club will resume its activities for the 1938-1939 season November 4, when a general committee meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Walter E. Hilton, first vice president. November 11 the board of governors will meet at the home of Mrs. Katherine Riggs Burchard, treasurer. The first program meeting is scheduled for 11:30 a. m. November 18, at Barker Hall, Y. W. C. C.

The first meeting of the program committee was held October 7 at the home of the president, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes. Members of the committee are Mrs. Byrnes, Mrs. Walter E. Hilton, Miss Lucy Brickenstein, Mrs. Florence Howard and Mrs. Katherine Riggs Buchard.

Several unusual concerts and lectures are being arranged for the season, including a pageant based on the life of Mozart to be presented December 30 in compliment to the Music Teachers' National Association, which will be meeting here at that time in annual convention.

Get Ready To Save Plants From Frost

Newspapers Help
Sheets for Big Flowers
Barrels May be Used

In preparation for early frosts, get ready materials and plan for protection such plants as dahlias and chrysanthemums. Protection for a night or two may prolong fine bloom for several weeks.

For small plants, simple cornucopias rolled from newspapers and held in place with pins or paper clips and held down with a trowelful of earth on the lower edge may be fully effective. For a medium-height chrysanthemum, a tight barrel with the head knocked out is probably the best and simplest protection.

For tall plants such as dahlias, the problem is more difficult. If trained close to a stake, it is often possible to drape a sheet, tarpulin, or burlap over the stake, folding and pinning at the sides to prevent a rapid escape of the air inside.

For dahlias and chrysanthemums, the large brown paper covers used by dry cleaners are convenient. The opening at the top should be folded tight and pinned or clipped. Two covers, one over the other, increase the protection greatly. A brick warmed in the oven and tucked under the protective covering is an aid to preventing injury.

When a frost warning is issued, protection should go on as early as possible to catch and hold as much of the warmth of the day as possible. The soil is usually many degrees warmer than freezing and will give off some warmth all through the night. If the protective cover prevents the escape of this warmth, the plants survive. Folding the paper or fabric cover to prevent the escape of the warmer air around the plant conserves this warmth. Even a small tear or opening may make the difference between success or failure.

Y. W. C. A. Resumes Sunday Musicales

Th Sunday Music Hours of the Young Women's Christian Association, at Seventeenth and K streets, will be resumed next Sunday at 5 p. m. with a program presented by Elena de Sayn, violinist, assisted by a string ensemble composed of Mrs. J. Wendell Coombs, Mary Alice Ferguson and Elizabeth McLaughlin, and by Benjamin Ratner and Ruth Ferguson, pianists. These informal concerts are open to both men and women and the public is cordially invited.

On october 23 the program will be given by the American-Hellenic Club, of which Nicholas Chotas is president. This will be the first of a series of "Nationality Programs;" one of which is planned for each month during the season. On October 30 Muriel Abbott Marshall, violinist, and Mary Izant Couch, pianist, will be heard.

The music department of the Y. W. C. A. is offering this year on Saturday mornings a class in music form and appreciation for children between 9 and 12 years of age. Mrs. Gail Richter, who has studied and taught at the Mannes Music School in Ne wYork, will conduct the class. Some study of the young people's programs of the National Symphony Orchestra will be included in the course.

Varied Gardens Keep Diseases at Minimum

Rotation Plan Improves the Effect
4-Year Scheme Aids Soil and Halts Pests
It Is Wise to Stay Ahead of These Troubles

By Crowell Baynes.

Most gardeners want to vary their garden layout from year to year. Usually they hope to improve the effect. Variety for its own sake is pleasing. And even if the gardener would prefer to keep an unvarying arrangement that has proved satisfactory it would be almost impossible. Diseases and insect pests would multiply. Soils would wear out and certain plants would grow faster and overcome their neighbors. Change and variations come in spite of the gardener. It is wiser to plan to keep ahead of these garden troubles.

The best kind of planning involves a general scheme for more than a single season. A three or four season plan fits the need, and as explained in these articles last year, compares closely to what farmers refer to as "rotation of crops." It gets away from the tendency to keep one variety of plants or one general type of plant in a fixed location year after year.

As an example of what leads to trouble in gardens that are not varied, consider tulips, gladioli and dahlias. It is quite possible to plant tulips in the same spot each fall, and follow them next year with either gladiolus or dahlia planting, replacing tulips in the fall. The chances are that the tulips would soon become affected with one of the blights or bulbs rots and that diseases or insects would increase on the glads or dahlias.

Particularly Desirable

By adopting the policy of deep digging and heavy composting of about one-quarter of the garden areas each fall, the rotation problem is simplified. This deeply cultivated area is obviously not suited to fall planting of bulbs or perennials, even if the work is finished in time. That in itself insures a rest and change for one season at least. This area the next season, however, will be in particularly desirable condition for the planting of the perennials that do best from spring planting, and for hardy annuals. By fall, too, with only light forking over it will be ready for fall planting of bulbs and perennials, and a good spot for the main planting of iris.

By the second season, this quarter will probably be the main point of interest in the garden with the best selections of spring blooming and fall blooming perennials, with annuals and bulbs again concentrated in the area deeply dug the year before.

By the third season it will be good gardening to begin to shift out some of the spring planted perennials, filling up with annuals and summer bulbs and tubers such as glads and dahlias, and in the fourth season it should be clear of such plants as chrysanthemums and Japanese anemones which would interfere with the fourth year rotation of deep digging.

Undisturbed Areas Benefited

There will be, of course, some areas that are left untouched year after year, occupied by such plants as peonies, gas plant, azaleas, Christmas rose, cimicifuga, and shrubby and woody plants that do best if they are left to grow undisturbed. But these can be planned as bordering areas or as small islands in the garden, perhaps along the line dividing one rotation quarter from another. Deep digging and heavy composting and fertilization of the main beds nearby is a benefit to these undisturbed areas, too. The plant food seeps over and gets into the soil on which these plants depend and they get the benefit of fertilization and moisture supply without the injury to their roots.

To recommend a four-year rotation plan of gardening and to suggest planning ahead for four years may seem to be asking for the kind of formality and "regimentation" that is likely to prove deadly to good gardening effects if rigidly applied. In actual practice, however, it makes for flexibility and charm, as well as for vigorous growth and healthy and hardy plants.

In a garden filled with humus and with the soil fertile and friable to a depth of at least two feet, the gardener can take liberties with plants that would prove disastrous in gardens that do not get this excellent preparation. Transplantings are easy and can be managed even at the "wrong" season because the plants are vigorous, and because they can be lifted with a big ball or soil and with slight injury to roots and then transferred to new soil that will give them aid in quick recovery. This is one of the principal reasons why the finest gardens usually look so well. If a plant fails, or if it develops a clashing color effect, it is easy to remedy the trouble by a quick shifting of plant that will improve the garden picture. The fine gardens are well planned but, if plans go awry as they sometimes do, faults can be corrected quickly.

Diseases Kept at Minimum

In a garden put on the four-year rotation plan troubles with diseases and with insects that live in the soil are kept at a minimum for several reasons. There is never a repeated succession of the same plants in the same soil for several seasons and the diseases and insects do not get a chance to build up. The thorough digging is an aid to sanitation. It buries many of the spores and insects to a depth that kills them. Air and water move freely in and out and this change helps control the pests. Above all, the plants grow strong and thrifty and are able to resist their enemies and grow in spite of minor injury from the pests.

This method has so many advantages that it would be worth while even if it involved considerable extra labor. As a matter of fact, the saving in labor is one of the big advantages. It does call for hard and heavy work in deep digging—but only once in four years for any given area. The work comes in fall when there is time for it and when the weather is favorable. A plot dug deep this fall will need no spading in 1939, and no more than light surface forking in 1940 and 1941. In the spring of 1942 it may be necessary to do regular spring spading, but after the second rotation of deep digging it will hardly need stirring with anything except the cultivation tools.

Planting Roses Now Where They'll Bloom Will Save the Gardener Rush in Spring

Sand Adds Porosity
Manure Is Valuable
Shoes Pommel Soil
Cut Back Top Growth
Moisten Earth Gently
Protect the Roots

By Albert Putz

Fall planting of roses has long passed the experimental stage. In fact, it has proved the most logical time for sections where Hybrid-Teas will go unharmed through the winter if given average protection. Its northern limit reaches well up into the New England States. Of course, only hardy varieties are included, such as Hybrid-Teas, Hybrid Perpetuals and the Hardy Climbers.

Since rose bushes for spring sales are dug in the late autumn, they must be stored during the winter under conditions that certainly do not add to their strength. Even if the gardener does not find it convenient to plant in late autumn, it still is wise to obtain the plants then and heel them in so that they can be planted in their permanent positions as early in the spring as the ground can be prepared.

Choose a well drained, protected spot and open up a V-shaped trench not less than two feet deep. Place the plants fairly close together and let them slant on one side of the trench. Fill in the soil and heap additional earth over them to cover at least ten inches of top-growth. Even if the winter should be more severe than usual, the plants will remain in good condition up to the point protected by the soil. The remaining growth does not matter since good planting practice demands its final removal anyway.

Plant Now and Save Rush

However, planting them now where they are to bloom greatly relieves the spring planting rush. Good soil preparation is a decided help toward success. Roses by nature like a fairly heavy soil usually designated as a clay-loam. However, splendid results can be obtained with much lighter soil if care is taken to overcome its shortcomings. The same holds true for clay soils. Sandy soils, as well as those of a clayey nature, are improved by the addition of humus. Besides the commercial humus, the gardener will find leafmold and peat moss valuable sources of this material.

Heavy soils need further treatment to facilitate drainage. Sand and sifted coal ashes worked throughout the soil will add to its porosity. Good drainage of the subsoil is equally important, since roses resent having their roots stand constantly in water. Drainage of the subsoil is effected by placing a layer of stones, cinders, coarse ashes or the like six inches deep below the bed. Since the bed should be prepared not less than eighteen inches deep, an additional six inches of soil must be removed where artificial drainage must be added.

The width of the planting trench should be not less than two feet, since rose roots not only go down but spread equally and vigorously. The soil above the drainage layer deserves careful attention. Besides humus and sand, it still is in need of plant food to provide ample nourishment for the plants.

Manure Is Valuable

By far the most valuable plant food is well-rotted cow manure, 2 years old. Horse manure of the same age is second choice. Lacking a source of supply for these, the gardener may take recourse to dried cow manure applied at the rate of 3 pounds for each 100 square feet of soil surface. Since dried cow manure does not contain as high a percentage of plant food as the fresh-rotted kind, the use of a complete commercial plant food or fertilizer is most desirable.

The rate of application depends upon its concentration and the recommendations of the manufacturer should be followed carefully. A fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash at the rate of one to three to one has a good balance for roses. Though there are gardeners who consider bone meal objectional for roses, there are many other successful growers who insist that bone meal is almost indispensable. Coarse bone, added at the rate of one-quarter pound for each plant, insures a supply of phosphoric acid long after the action of the quick-acting fertilizers has become exhausted.

All material—soil, humus, sand, manure and plant food—must be mixed thoroughly so that none can be detected readily as such when the process is completed. Next, the trench is filled with the mixture and tramped down until its top level comes within 10 inches of the soil surface. The preparation of the planting trench up to this point should precede planting by not less than a week to give the soil a further chance to settle. As roses for fall planting are not available until late October or early November, the preparation of the bed is properly scheduled for about the middle of October. This brings it into a season when virtually all other outdoor garden work is finished, a coincidence that should greatly appeal to the busy gardener.

Puddling Protects Roots

Upon arrival of the plants, open the package promptly and set the roots into a deep pail filled with a mixture of soil and water having the consistency of thick cream. Puddling is the term used by gardeners to identify this treatment. It prevents the roots from drying out until planting and keeps them moist while they are being placed in position. Long spreading roots and those showing severe bruises or other injuries are carefully cut back with a sharp knife rather than the pruning shears. Do this at the time they are puddled rather than when being planted.

As by far the majority of roses are budded plants, the thick, knotlike swelling just above the roots is not a harmful deformity but a natural development due to the budding operation. This swelling should go 2 inches below the soil surface. Holding the plant in position with one hand, spread out the roots in their natural position and then fill in good garden soil, free from manure or fertilizer, while still holding the plant in its proper position.

Use Shoes on Soil

Work the soil around the roots, under the crown and firm it well, since roses resent loose planting. When completely covered with 3 or 4 inches of soil, use the full soles of your shoes to compact the soil still more.

Many Improvements

Pontiac engineers have displayed skill and originality in the design of three new lines of cars for 1939 now being shown by dealers, that combine fashion and good taste in modern streamlining and rich appointments, with important mechanical improvements that feature duflex rear springs as a great engineering achievement.

The quality six, a newcomer to the line, is designed for large production at a low price. With five body models (two and four-door sedans, business and sport coupes, and station wagon) of 190 inches overall length, it digs deeper into the lower price field than any previous Pontiac.

The de luxe six, with the same engine but longer chassis than the quality six, comes in five more finely appointed bodies. A cabriolet with two coupes and two sedans constitute the line. Overall length of 196¼ inches makes it the longest six by 4 inches Pontiac has ever built.

The de luxe eight, with its smooth running and economical straight eight engine, will embrace the same five body styles as the de luxe six.

In the appearance of the three lines we find complete modernization in the styling of hood, radiator, fenders and body. Continuing the silver streak through the center of hood and radiator for the fifth years as the central motif, there is more of a yacht-line prow to the radiator, which in turn is flanked on either side by chromed side grilles set into the front surfaces of the fender catwalks. The radiator ornament serves as the locking handle to raise the alligator type hood. Harmonizing multibeam headlights are mounted on the front fenders.

There is increased visibility for driver and passengers alike in the new Pontiac, which is an added safety factor. In the de luxe six and eight models visibility is fully 25 per cent greater than in previous models. Windshield and window glass are wider and higher. Windshield corner posts are narrower. Cowl-line is lower and the radii of upper windshield corners are shorter, thus enlarging the vision all around. A single panel rear window in all models also adds to the visibility.

With wider and lower de luxe six and eight bodies these models are equipped either with or without running boards. Floors being only curb-high (2 inches lower than last year).

Fisher unisteel bodies on de luxe models provide greater seat width and more leg room both front and rear, with a finer handling of instruments and accessories for 1939 than ever before.

Front seat frames are constructed of steel tubing for lightness and strength. New door locks require only a light pressure on the doors to close them securely. The new three-spoke steering wheel is T-shapel to permit an unobstructed view of the instrument panel.

The most important mechanical changes are to be found in the chassis. Starting at the front, knee action has been refined by the use of lighter and stronger pressed steel arms, which make possible an inch greater road clearance under the lower knee-action control arms. A new parallel link arrangement of connecting steering tie rods at geometric points on a connecting link improves the general handling of the car and further reduces tendency to shimmy, tramp and wheel fight.

Probably the outstanding of all Pontiac engineering developments for 1939 are the new and original duflex rear springs which give one passenger as easy a ride as six passengers and furthermore reduce bouncing and pitching when going over pumps. The spring is simplicity itself. To the conventional leaf spring, and directly below it, has been added a second but shorter auxiliary or helper spring. For light loads the car rides almost entirely on the main or upper unit, which affords a slow, comfortable motion. As the passenger load increases this upper spring comes progressively more and more into contact with the helper spring.

Shock absorbers are inclined with the bottoms out toward the wheels and the tops in toward the center of the chassis, the better to absorb both road bumps and side sway.

The principal power plant changes which affect all models are the new clutch and transmission. A single diaphragm spring clutch does away with 21 parts, requires less pedal pressure, is smoother and more positive. The new transmission was designed especially for remote control gear shifting. Although the transmission case is shorter, it retains the same gear face widths and torque transmitting capacity. With shorter spaces between bearings it is more rigid than its predecessor.

3 New Lines Are Offered By Hudson

Many New Features
Power Increased
New Paint Finishes

Hudson Motor Car Co., at a special preview held in this city last Tuesday as a part of the distributors and dealer convention, revealed the highlights of the many new features in the 1939 cars.

Three lines of new models were shown. The new Hudson One-Twelve, with 112-inch wheelbase and horsepower increased to 86, continues this year as a competitor in the low price field. The new Hudson Six, with 118-inch wheelbase and 96-horsepower, takes its place in the low price field. The new Hudson Country Club series, including 122-inch wheelbase sixes and eights with 101 and 122 horsepower respectively and a special eight cylinder custom sedan with 129-inch wheelbase, will be a leader in the moderate price field.

All cars bear the Hudson name, and are said to be the outstanding products of the company's 30 years of manufacturing experience.

In styling, the new Hudsons typify the trend to attractive streamlining tempered by practical comfort requirements. The distinctive front end appearance is marked by the latest type of low radiator grille work, while headlights in fenders feature the Six and Country Club series. The Country Club Eights strike a new style note, with parking lights cleverly worked in as part of the louvre decoration.

Strong emphasis was placed on the fact that every car in the line, including the Hudson One-Twelve, is finished in hand-polished, multiple-coat lacquer, said to provide a smoother surface. This type of finish has the additional advantage of being available in a variety of gleaming opalescent colors as standard equipment.

J. S. Calhoun, zone manager for the Washington-Baltimore territory, was the official host to the dealer body and he introduced the man who explained the sales program for next year, W. R. Tracy, Hudson vice president in charge of sales, and C. G. Beeching, sales manager in charge of zones, who outlined the work that was necessary to be done in the immediate territory to more intimately acquaint the public with the product.

Storm Windows Backed

The installation of storm windows on houses in northern climes will aid materially in decreasing heat losses. It is estimated that such installations properly adjusted will save as much as 30 per cent of heat loss, with a consequent saving in fuel costs.

Boat Trimming Adds Nautical Note to Bath

A nautical note may well influence the decoration of the children's bathroom. Paint the upper walls—and the ceiling—a pale sky-blue. Along the blue-green dado, which has a wavy outline at the top, stencil white sail boats.

Add a border trim of white ships to the blue enameled hamper and cabinet, and paint a life preserver white for a towel bar which will help remind the children to hang up their towels.

Cadillac Dealers Hear Officials

A group of Cadillac-LaSalle officials met here yesterday with Cadillac dealers and salesmen from the Washington-Baltimore area to discuss 1939 plans. The meeting, an all-day conference, in which a program to expand considerably the Cadillac-LaSalle share of the metropolitan market was outline by R. L. Newton, assistant general sales manager.

Besides Mr. Newton, W. A. Houser, parts and service manager; C. R. Kirkpatrick, of the sales promotion department, and James R. Adams, of MacManus, John & Adams addressed the meeting.

The Cadillac line for 1939, it was disclosed, consists of a V-8 LaSalle, the Cadillac Sixty-one, the Cadillac Sixty Special, Cadillac Fleetwood and Cadillac Sixteen. Prices blanket the automobile range from the low medium bracket up.

Wood Paneling Costs Reduced

Wood as a finish for the inner walls of houses has until recently been considered a luxury possible only for the large income.

A new process of cutting wood now brings this desirable finish within the reach of the owners of the less expensive homes. The veneer paneling can be applied over old plaster walls or on new construction.

Strips for trim around doors and windows and molding to match the wood of the walls are available.

Window Seats Now Built in

A feature frequently encountered in small houses today is a combination built-in window seat and bookshelf. If it is particularly well suited for recessed windows.

The seat has a height slightly greater than that of a chair, the cushion being usually level with the window sill. Beneath the seat is a one-shelf bookcase, with a storage drawer below.

The space behind the shelf is utilized for a hide-way. It is an inexpensive improvement that can be constructed by any good carpenter.

Wall Finishes Wide in Variety

Wall finishes are offered in many varieties. Smooth and rough plaster retain their popularity, although composition boards of various types, linoleum, and even colored glass are extensively used.

While price is an important factor, fire safety, appropriate decorating effects, ease of cleaning, and maintenance cost require careful consideration as well.

Satisfactory interior finish is one of the points examined during investigation of properties which are proposed as security for insured mortgages.

A WASHINGTON "MASTER PAINTER" SPEAKS:

BARRELED SUNLIGHT MUST BE A GOOD PAINT . . . IF MASTER PAINTERS SAY SO!

There is no better recommendation than that . . . For the Master Painter chooses a paint that's easy to apply, looks best and lasts longer. Little wonder he chooses Barreled Sunlight.

Barreled Sunlight

INTERIOR ENAMEL — Recommended for high-grade enamel work. Its smooth, handsome finish washes like tile. DRIES quickly, flows freely, evenly, without a brush mark. White and black and 10 colors.

OUTSIDE WHITE AND COLORS —Distinctive in appearance. Extremely durable and even-wearing. For blinds, trim, doors, etc., use Outside Barreled Sunlight Trim colors. Very durable and clear in tone. Also in 18 colors.

FLAT WALL FINISH—A new type of interior finish that offers distinct advantages. An amazing "slip" of the brush that makes application easy—a saving in paint because of its unusual covering power—a beautifully smooth finish with just enough sheen to resist dirt. White and 8 colors.

PORCH AND FLOOR ENAMEL—For inside and outside use. Made to withstand excessive wear. Dries hard overnight with a tough, washable, high gloss enamel finish. Ideal for porches, floors, equiment, etc. White and 10 colors.

D. C. Trade Holds Level Of Year Ago

Under Previous Week General Trend Mixed Weather Hits Stores

One department store in Washington reported gain of 8 percent over the previous week; all others reported losses averaging 19.56 percent, according to the weekly survey of the Department of Commerce. Compared with a year ago, the trend was mixed, ranging from an increase of 6 percent to a decrease of 15 per cent, and averaging a gain of 1 per cent. Clearings were $23,883,566; last year, $24,672,401. Visitors to Washington Monument, 15,989; previous week, 14,381; year ago, 16,777. Building permits, $495,300, including $180,000 for building at Catholic University; year ago, $760,000. Total passenger revenue, Capital Transit Co., week ended Wednesday, $221,580; year ago, $202,785.

For the week ended Wednesday, the business outlook generally continued encouraging, though the improvement was not uniform, according to reports to the department from 36 key cities. Employment, construction, wholesale trade, and basic industrial lines displayed definite signs of progress. Some manufacturing lines, however, were weak, and retail trade, adversely affected in many sections by unseasonably warm weather, failed to respond in any marked degree to the general improvement. It was pointed out, however, that retail trade is now being compared with last year's comparatively high levels, while at the same time, wholesale and manufacturing business was already experiencing a decided reaction.

Ass'd Gas Bows To SEC Rule

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Associated Gas & Electric System, one of the largest utility systems in the country, has notified the Securities and Exchange Commission it would conform to the commission's request and submit plans for geographic integration and corporate simplification by December 1.

The system's principal properties are located in six States—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, South Carolina and Florida—and around 80 per cent of its revenue, roughly, is obtained from the properties in the New York-New Jersey-Pennsylvania territory, already centrally located. It has smaller properties in a dozen or so other States and also owns the power system of Manila, P. I.

In utility circles it was believed that the integration line the system would follow would be to concentrate on the Atlantic Seaboard, make the New York-New Jersey-Pennsylvania properties its principal system, seek a means of integrating the properties on the southern end of the seaboard to the satisfaction of the SEC, and put the properties in other States up for sale or "swap" with other systems. The Manila system is not in the scope of the 1935 public utility holding company act, the legislation calling for integration.

Tel. & Tel. Net $1.91 a Share For Quarter

$2.39 in 1937 Period Less Than Dividends Large Telephone Gain

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported today for the three months ended September 30 net income of $35,707,241, equal to $1.91 a share on its capital stock, compared with $44,741,858, or $2.39 a share, in the corresponding 1937 period. For the three months ended June 30, net income was $37,032,603, equal to $1.98 a share.

The net income for 12 months ended September 30, the company reported, was $159,225,960, equal to $8.52 a share, against $192,310,107, or $10.29 a share, in the preceding 12 months.

Earnings fell $8,955,186 short of meeting the dividend requirements, which amounted to $9 a share annually, on the 18,686,794 shares outstanding.

Operating Revenues

Operating revenues of the Bell System for the three months ended August 31 totaled $260,211,687, compared with $261,940,157 in like 1937 months, operating expenses declined about $2,500,000, but the decline was offset by an increase in taxes to $36,418,058, compared with $33,637,491 in the three months ended August 31 last year.

Walter S. Gifford, president of the parent company, said the Bell System in the first nine months of this year had a net gain of 245,000 telephones, compared with 706,000 in the similar period last year. The third quarter increase of 112,000, he noted, represented some improvement in the rate of gain.

Toll and long-distance conversations, he added, also showed better than seasonal improvement in the third quarter, but for the nine months were down about 2.5 per cent under the 1937 figure.

Cotton Dips; December 8.25

Power, Air and Metal Shares Lead Brisk Saturday Upturn

Utility Average Advances 2.5 Per Cent Some Leaders Yield to Profit-Taking Volume Near 1,500,000 in 2 Hours

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Oct. 15.—Utilities, aircrafts and coppers ran away with the stock market today and, despite sluggishness of rails and other recent leaders, enable the list to finish the week on a rallying note. Gains ran to 3 points or so in the speediest Saturday session since July 2. Numerous favorites hit new highs for the past year in the upswing and the ticker tape was two minutes behind when buying was briskest.

Buoying recovery sentiment after yesterday's slight drop were optimistic estimates of industrial activity in connection with a predicted huge national defense program which would involve airplane makers, copper producers and power companies.

Profit taking bit into many pivotal stocks in the tail end of the proceedings, and steels, motors, rubbers, mail orders, farm implements and oils ended with minor changes either way.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was up .3 of a point, at 52.9, and, notwithstanding three small setbacks on Monday, Tuesday and Friday, was up .9 of a point on the week. The utility composite made the best showing with a net advance of 2.5 points during the 5-day period. Transfers of 1,464,810 shares, compared with 1,113,130 last Saturday.

Outstanding gainers for the day included Consolidated Edison, Electric Power & Light, Columbia Gas, American Water Works, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Sperry, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Anaconda, Cerro de Pasco, Phelps Dodge, du-Pont and Westinghouse. A heavy turnover in low-priced stocks accounted for much of the volume.

Curb Actively Higher

Demand for utilities also highlighted the curb. Ending fractions to 2 or more higher were Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Niagara Hudson Power and Cities Service. Electric Bond & Share preferred ran up 4. Volume of 385,000 shares was the best for any Saturday since September, 1937, and compared with 138,000 a week ago.

The week's news gist was all in favor of financial markets but, after an almost perpendicular rise in stocks for 17 days, speculative forces began to think of a technical "correction" and much cashing in resulted. Despite this, the market was up, on the whole, for the fourth consecutive week.

Stimulating the long-lagging utilities were signs of a get-together move between the power concerns and the Government, with Electric Bond & Share and Associated Gas announcing they would file integration plans with the SEC under the holding company act.

The wage controversy kept the rails in the background, although last week's freight traffic stepped up contra-seasonally to a peak for the year. Motors seemed a bit fagged out as labor fears continued in this field. At the same time the outlook for new cars sales was bright. Steels had to contend with a fresh wave of price cutting by independents in the face of an expected upturn in mill operations next week. Retail spending improved as did electric power consumption. Oils were under pressure as crude prices were again clipped.

Bonds Work Higher

The bond market was somewhat timid about establishing a trend today, although a selected group of low priced rails and utilities forged ahead fractions to a point or more, some to new highs for the year.

U. S. Governments were in demand, especially some of the longer term Treasury issues. The 2⅞s of 1955-60, for instance, ran up 3-32 of a point to 104.20 on transfer of $376,000 par value. The 2⅜s of 1956-59 also were active and higher.

Corporate loans making the best showing included Missouri Pacific 5s at 19½, Nickel Plate 4½s at 43¾, Utilities Power & Light 5s at 53½, International Hydro Electric 6s at 78⅞, Great Northern 4s at 94½ and Southern Pacific 4½s at 53. An unusually heavy turnover of $234,000 par value, of Bethlehem Steel 3¾s carried the loan to a new high at 100¼, up ¾ of a point.

Backtracking for moderate amounts were New York Central 5s, Penn Dixie Cement 6s, Western Union 5s, Illinois Central 4¾s, Alleghany 5s and Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s.

Foreign dollar issues were mostly higher. Poland 6s got up ⅞ to 66 and Milan 6½s rose a similar amount to 63¾. Canadian 4s were a trifle lower.

The Associated Press average of ten utility bonds rose .2 of a point to 95.0, a new 1938 high.

Transfers totaled $4,684,500 face value compared with $4,839,500 last Saturday.

Wheat Firm In Range of Half a Cent

Record Dull Market Liverpool Is Higher Corn Holds Steady

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—With grain market activity listless, prices clung to an unusually narrow range today. Wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ higher after fluctuating throughout the short session within the range of ½ cent. It was one of the narrowest markets on record and dealings were confined largely to spreading, evening up accounts and other commercial operations.

Continued unfavorable crop conditions in Australia, dryness in the domestic Southwest and strength in securities failed to arouse any unusual buying but did restrict selling. A fractional upturn of ⅜ to ½ cent at Liverpool based largely on the Australian situation prompted some buying in North American markets, but little enthusiasm was in evidence here in view of lagging export demand and hand-to-mouth trading in the pit.

The unchanged to ⅜ higher close put December wheat at 65⅜@65½ and May at 66½@66⅝. Corn was ⅛ up to ⅛ off, December 44½@44¾.

Current Jungle Film Boom Starts Safari to Wilds Near Hollywood

Gunga Din Is a Case In Point

210-Mile Trip to Set Still in California Location Like Home Plot Farther Away

By Lucie Neville..

Hollywood.

WHEN movie makers used to go out of town for scenery, the picture was an epic. Anything that couldn't be shot on the back lot or in Los Angeles' Griffith Park was in the colossal class.

But now studios are depending less on their prop departments to make a mountain out of a molehill or create a tempest in a teapot. The movie Mahomets are going to the mountains outside Hollywood, to forests where no talent scout has ever hunted and to deserts innocent of hot-dog stands.

A location trip today is handled with the dispatch and precision of an army on the march. And if there is a circus-sized menagerie of animal actors, the location manager knows what they will need to the last bale of alfalfa.

The most elaborate expedition from Hollywood this year is RKO's "Gunga Din," which has set up camp at the foot of Mount Whitney, 210 miles from home. California is doubling for northwestern India, in rock formation and desert sands, and the sunburned cast swears the 115-degree temperature is as near India as it wants to get.

Plot Strayed From

The location is about all that is like "Gunga Din," because the movie version bears little resemblance to the plot of Kipling's poem. Gunga Din, however, in the scantily-clad person of Sam Jaffe, does carry a goatskin waterbag. As a trio of tough British sergeants, Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Victor McLaglen are in and out of all the excitement, Fairbanks taking time to court Joan Fontaine between skirmishes.

But romance hasn't gone on location. Except for a few days, Miss Fontaine's scenes are being made in Hollywood. "Gunga Din's" camp is strictly masculine, except for an elephant named Emmy.

Emmy and five pachyderm pals are the least of Location Manager Lou Shapiro's headaches, because he can depend on an elephant. It doesn't lose its baggage or want to go back home for week-ends. Actors do.

Shapiro the Cowboy

Shapiro has been in movies since 1914. Riding the range in Wyoming was too tame, so he started playing cowboys-and-Indians at the Ince studio, later working in Eddie Polo and Harry Carey westerns. Back from the Navy after the war, he settled down at RKO. There is some question whether Lou Shapiro's office files or personal friends are more valuable, both accumulated in the 17 years he has been bossing location trips.

His own telephone book lists the private numbers of every city and State police head, as well as pilots, yacht brokers, managers of auditoriums, water taxis and race track. Filing cases hold local and foreign maps.

Hotel directories, timetables for trains, planes and ships, Weather Bureau reports—every piece of data that can be assembled is in Shapiro's office. It is his boast that before he goes into a town he can tell you when it rains and how much, the price of a hotel room, whether it is Democratic or Republican, union or non-union, and whether train whistles will interfere with outdoor shooting.

Chambers of commerce, eager to have their towns used as picture sites because of the added business several hundred people bring, send photos and information. Individual owners of ranches, lakes, sailing craft, planes, zoos and houses of all kinds are on Shapiro's list, with rental prices, descriptions and photos.

Their cards are cross-indexed with photos, so that if a ranch with a water-tower and 500 sheep is needed, the studio can know in a few minutes where to find it. The Assistance League, society charity organization, furnishes lists of swanky houses and grounds, whose owners contribute movie rentals to the league.

Most valuable in finding new and unfilmed territory are the exchange files of the Location Managers' Association, of which Shapiro is president. Eight major studios pool their photos and data on scouting and location trips—a tremendous saving of time and money.

Once a location is approximated by panoramas and airplane shots, an advance crew goes ahead to look it over. For "Gunga Din," Shapiro, Director George Stevens and Construction Superintendent Harold Barry flew for eight hours over the Mount Whitney territory early in April.

They picked up the unit manager, assistant director, art director and still cameraman and exploded by car, plowing through snow-blocked roads and making a few of their own with dynamite. Back at the studio, with a good idea of what they were up against, the location crew began preparations for departure a month later.

90% on Location

Since 90 per cent of "Gunga Din" was to be made on location, the camp was to be no one-night stand. Permission from the United States Land Office had to be obtained for building, because part of the location land is Government owned. An air-cooled hotel in the nearest town, Lone Pine, was available for members of the cast who preferred tubs to showers and thought they couldn't stand the heat.

But a tent city of 100 buildings had to be constructed before actual shooting could begin, to take care of the working crews and a varying number of extras. These wood-floored, canvas buildings include the sleeping quarters, a commissary, a hospital, a recreation tent (called Gungad Inn), a make-up tent with 120 tables and mirrors, a wardrobe tent for the 2,000 uniforms and costumes and an open-air theater where the daily rushes and a nightly single-feature bill are shown.

The three main sets of the $106,000 worth of manufactured India are the British army post, the Hindu temple and the village of Tantrapur. A level plain of 7 acres comprises the post, with living quarters, block houses, stables, elephant stalls, watch towers, parade and drill grounds and barbed wire entanglements. The California soil didn't parallel India's in one respect, however—it was too light and had to be darkened with sprayed crude oil.

Just Like Old Country

Two miles away, set in the hills among gigantic boulders, is the temple, surrounded by native markets and huts. Five miles north of the post is the Tantrapur village, its houses substantial enough to support roof-top snipers and hand-to-hand fighting.

Some 400,000 feet of lumber was purchased in Lone Pine for the sets, but dozens of union carpenters had to be imported. Roads were built, connecting the tent city with the three sets and the main highway, and the studio trucks began to roll in. A dozen camera and equipment trucks, 16 studio cars and a number of private ones, six-passenger buses each carrying 30 people, and a daily studio car for mail are needed for transportation alone. In addition, 36 truckloads of equipment were taken to Lone Pine, nine of them for wardrobe, the others for electrical, sound, camera, carpenter and prop departments.

A wholesale catering company also relieves location headaches by taking complete charge of the food, as soon as an estimate is given and a contract signed for mass board and room. After such jobs as feeding the working crews of Boulder and Shasta Dams, a movie location trip is a picnic to the Cole brothers, steward and chef of the company. For "Gunga Din," they took only a handful of helpers—15 cooks and 40 waiters.

Boom Causes Safaris

This number varies when a flood of extras comes in—1,200 were hired for battle sequences—but even the regular cast varies from 300 to 600. Lone Pine furnishes the daily ice cream and 2 tons of ice, but refrigerated trucks make daily trips from Los Angeles, carrying the 14 tons of meat and vegetables needed for a week's meals. A chicken dinner needs 225 birds, 200 pounds of potatoes are peeled every day, and 90 gallons of coffee, 100 of iced tea, 80 of milk and 10 of cream are the daily average.

The main reason for so many large movie expeditions to distant, natural settings this season is the boom in costly outdoor pictures. There are numerous practical and economic reasons why a company prefers making its films as near Hollywood as possible, but when large hunks of panoramic scenery or special facilities are essential to a superproduction, nobody quibbles about extra miles.

Building a small city on the slopes of Mount Whitney, 210 miles from Hollywood was the task RKO undertook in making "Gunga Din." Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Joan Fontaine supply love interest and Sam Jaffe plays the title role of the heroic water carrier of Kiplings' poems.

Fairbanks Will Substitute Reality for Papier Mache

By Mark Barron.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Douglas Fairbanks, who disarms one in the first place by saying that he "doesn't know a thing about business," went ahead with his plans today to produce motion pictures throughout the world.

This isn't really a new career for the 55-year-old Fairbanks. He has been a partner in United Artists for years. His productions made millions for him.

"I wanted to take a trip out to the South Seas and China," he explained. 'So I went on the trip and made a picture. I got my trip and the picture paid for it.

"I think the same idea can be expanded. Why confine production of pictures to one place, as it is mostly done in Hollywood? With the technical perfection you have now, you can produce pictures most anywhere. So, if a picture is about Venice, why not make it in Venice? If a picture is about Santa Fe, why not make it in Santa Fe?

"What I want to do is shoot scenes in their native settings rather than build them out of papier mache."

Fairbanks moved about his Park avenue suite with the energetic agility that has characterized him from the time he went into pictures in 1915 through such acrobatic thrillers as "The Mark of Zorro" to "The Private Life of Don Juan."

"What was my last picture?" He stopped to think. "You know, I can't remember. They came so fast and shooting schedules were so involved."

Sonja Henie Bewildered by Hollywood, But Never Overlooks Overtime ($3,500 a Day)

By Hubbard Keavy.

Hollywood.

Sonja Henie and her young mother and her slim brother rolled into their courtyard behind 16 cylinders. There was scarcely room left to park. A cameraman and his two assistants, who were to photograph her house, came in separate vehicles. Three other autos brought a press agent, another cameraman and this reporter.

Finds Hollywood Odd

Sonja blinked and laughed. Why is this?" she asked of no one in particular. When she was reminded of her engagements, she said "Oh," pleasantly, and apologized for being tardy. I thought she was bewildered by the reception, but that wasn't quite true.

Skater Sonja is bewildered by Hollywood and its ways, as well as by the thousand things that complicate a career such as hers. She hasn't adopted the Hollywood manner nor the ways of Movieland, largely because she isn't aware of them. Her late father used to make the decisions, leaving Sonja free to her skating. Now she must make the decisions, too.

Said one man who knows her well: "Sonja knows what's going on, but she doesn't seem to comprehend why. She's always alert, but at the same time she seems to be in a fog when she has anything at all to think about."

Sonja likes sleep, airplanes, a good cry, overtime (at $3,500 a day), Tyrone Power, strawberry sundaes and people who do not ask her what she does with all the money she makes.

Ask her about the latter and she'll hang her head coyly and reply, "Oh, but I don't make so much."

Finances, as they concern the plump little ice queen, have been a touchy subject since so much was made of her box office inquiries, while on tour, "How much tonight?" To an associate who suggested she should appear to be less concerned about the gate, she explained:

Skimps on Rent—$750

"When I first came to this country, a lawyer and an income tax man told me I must account for every penny, because this Government is very particular about getting its taxes. They said I couldn't even go to Norway for a visit unless I pay my taxes. I like to go to Norway."

Sonja's income, from movies, skating tours and indorsements, is said to approximate a half million a year. She invests in nothing foolish and she has no expensive hobbies. Some folks thought she was getting that way when she paid $1,500 a month for an estate, but she kept it only three months. Her present furnished house costs about half that much.

Incidentally, this house is furnished tastily, but it doesn't look like the Henies. Some day, Sonja says, she may build a house. "It is as cheap to build as to pay high rent?" I'm no authority, but I agreed.

Sonja's outstanding characteristic, and an unusual one in this movie world, is her self-control.

There is no romance in Sonja's life. She's too busy and too ambitious. Right now she's rehearsing for a new tour, making a hundred decisions a day, worrying about her next picture.

"Now I am working all the time," Sonja says. "I am always early up and I don't go out much at night because I need lots of sleep. I like to sleep."

"My Lucky Star," her latest, went six days over and Sonja collected enough to pay for her European vacation this summer. Maybe she's bewildered, but she's got a good head.

THE creation of "doghouses" in at least three of the towns most notable restaurants by supersnobminded patrons and reporters avid for inside copy may have made a lot of copy for the paragraphers, but it has caused flocks of grief for the proprietors. At Jack and Charlie's, at the Colony and at El Morocco there have been sections of the premises which, while far from being bleacher seats, have not customarily been used by the management for the spotting of celebrities and headline guests, so that supercilious folk came to refer to their inmates as "doghouse" patrons, and the name stuck. In general, at 21, the back room was used as a repository, especially at dinner time, for comparative strangers to the establishment or for diners not dresesd for the evening. At the Colony the "doghouse" was less damaging and more humorous, since it was used to describe almost any table in the back of the room. The astute Gene Cavalero smiled to himself, broadened the front of the restaurant to twice its old proportions and, when this overflowed, started seating people actually in the doorway to the lobby, where they could dine in simultaneous style and discomfort. Hollywood celebrities who insisted on ringside spots can now have them at the trivial price of being just a thought jostled and quite patently laughed at by discerning folk who pass them. At Morocco, John Perona suffered to a certain extent when Maury Paul laughingly imagined a "50-cent side" and a "dollar side" of the room, but since his premises are jammed most of the time, he didn't complain too much. This year, anyway, he has reshuffled the floor layout so that even the most imaginative reporter can't separate sheep from goats, socially speaking. The restaurateurs were vaguely flattered by the first references to "doghouses" on their premises, but it got to be too much of a headache after good cash customers started turning up their noses at them.

Why not adjustable bumpers

To the Automobile Makers of America,

Gentlemen:

I see that the new models for 1939 are out, and, while I think they are very swell and have many improvements, I think there are still many good bets overlooked, which I will list as follows, knowing nobody will pay any attention:

Bumpers

I should think the engineers would do something about a bumper that could be lowered or raised by a simple mechanical process. In modern traffic somebody is always whamming into me from the front or rear or I am backing into somebody else, with the result that the bumpers get all interlocked as if they had a coupling system. When this happens it is a tough job separating the old boiler and every week I spend a few hours jumping up and down on my own bumper or the other fellow's bumper in an effort to get the two cars apart. It generally takes four or five strangers to help me and by the time the cars are apart the bumpers have been wrecked and so have I. I should think there would be brains enough in the auto industry to give the world a quick detachable bumper like a razor blade. Will you please think this over?

Jacks

You have been producing automobiles a quarter of a century and more and it seems to me that the jack used to elevate the car in time of punctures is more useless than at any time since the first car was turned loose to frighten horses. Of course the modern tire is almost puncture-proof, but now and then an autoist finds himself with a flat and when he opens the rear of the car and looks for a jack, what does he find? I will tell you and save you the trouble of apologizing. He finds a little gadget that looks something like a cross between a badly bent poker, an orange squeezer and a flatiron, and which is not big enough to lift a dollar watch.

It comes in so many pieces that an autoist is driven nuts figuring out how to set it up and I am yet to see any directions. I have known lots of autoists to give up in disgust and trade in the car for a box of cigars right on the road rather than be annoyed any further. Why is it that the auto engineers cannot devise an adequate jack that looks like a jack, that acts like a jack and that is a jack?

If you will give this your immediate attention you will do the country a great favor.

Dashboard

Must there be so much dashboard per dashboard, in a manner of speaking? It seems to me that with each system it is made more complicated and when I sat in one of the new models last week, I felt as if I were in the pilot's compartment of a transcontinental passenger plane. The dashboard had just as many instruments. It is very confusing. I am always telling time by the speedometer and trying to judge my speed by the clock. And there are so many other dials, gadgets and faces on the dash these days that if a driver really tries to pay attention to 'em all he is over a cliff before he knows it. I think 50 per cent of the accidents today are due to the fact that drivers are fascinated by all these dashboard appliances and have no time to look where they are going.

Ash Trays

I would like to ask whether there is any instance where these automobile ash trays were ever used for ashes. It is my experience that passengers prefer to dump their ashes on the upholstery and resent any suggestion that they do anything else. I have found chewing gum, hairpins, marbles, buttons, ticket stubs and what not in these ash trays but never any ashes. Wouldn't it be a good idea to throw them out and equip every car with a waste basket? I am only asking.

Upholstery

This is a big question and I doubt that it can be solved. How about a color that will not show the dog's footprints. My wife has a dog and it is always climbing into the car out of the mud. When I make any criticism she says I am a dog hater and care more about the upholstery than the pup. This is not so. I do not care more about upholstery than I do the dog but I care just as much. It seems to me the upholstery could be in a color close to mud, although that leaves the problem of what to do when the dog climbs in out of the dust instead of the mud.

Couldn't you put two or three layers of upholstery on the seats so they could be peeled off from time to time? Or have your engineers ever thought of a dog compartment in an automobile?

Cross-Ventilation

I realize that by putting in all those adjustable windows you have made it possible to ventilate an automobile, but don't you think this has been overdone? I am always getting a stiff neck or a pain in the shoulder and I think it is from those cross-drafts.

Fenders

It has become impossible to keep a fender looking like new for more than the first 100 miles and I can't see why the inventive geniuses of the auto industry have not found a way to make harder fenders. A steel fender with a razor-edge is my ideal, so I could cut right through some of these road hogs who will never get over and give a guy room. It has also seemed to me that you could give a spare set of fenders with every car. A spare set of fenders would be of more use than a spare tire, which is considered necessary. On second thought, what is the sense of any fenders? Why not do away with them? They never stay on a car long, anyhow.

Batteries

Could you put a sign in a prominent place in every car stating where the battery is located. And a diagram showing how to find it. Every time my battery goes dead and the repairman saks me where it is I have to write the factory. Yours, PATIENT MOTORIST.

I should think the engineers would do something about a bumper that could be lowered or raised. In modern traffic the bumpers get all interlocked as if they had a coupling system

Highways and Buy-ways

By Weare Holbrook

THE HIGHWAY ROBBER with his black domino and silver-mounted pistols is happily a creature of the past. You find him today only in picaresque fiction, where he displays a hand-kissing gallantry that would evoke snorts of disgust from any modern gangster. The Western bandits who used to commit their depredations to an accompaniment of galloping hoofs and blazing six-shooters have given way to pimply youths in stolen cars. The Deadwood stagecoach is now a streamlined bus.

But there is another form of highway robbery which besets the overland traveler wherever he goes. It involves no threats of violence; there is no coercion about it. Yet in the long run, the tribute that it exacts is enough to make Dick Turpin turn over on his gibbet.

The highwayman of today does not stop you at the point of a gun and demand your money. He simply sets up a roadside stand and waits for your sales resistance to weaken; eventually he gets your money just the same, with no risk of bloodshed or bastiles. Slowly but surely the highways of America are becoming a succession of long arcades, offering everything from cordwood to caraway seeds.

For years, women's clubs and other civic-conscious groups have waged war against the billboards that blot out natural charms of the countryside. Personally, billboards never bothered me. I can drive through miles of looming posters without feeling the slightest desire to follow the example of the Brobdingnagian beauties who grin over their favorite chewing gum or the elephantine executives who smirk over their favorite cigars. In fact, the more they grin and smirk, the more thoroughly I ignore them. The road could be a veritable labyrinth of lithographs, and my bankroll would remain intact.

But when various articles of merchandise are dangled right before my windshield, as it were—the old will power wilts. I may pass up the first roadside stand, or even the first dozen roadside stands, but it is only because I know that there are others just beyond the horizon.

On short motor trips my sales resistance is fairly robust; apparently, it takes a certain amount of time for visual appeal to overcome native thrift. A brief spin beyond the city limits usually yields nothing worse than a basket full of garden truck. But the accretions of a cross-country tour are not only vegetable, they are animal and mineral as well. The more baggage one carries in trunk and tonneau, the more impedimenta one accumulates en route.

When Phoebe and I set out on a four-day drive from Wisconsin to New York, our car was just comfortably full: there were three suitcases and a dog on the back seat, and ourselves on the front. And until we reached Sarnia, Ontario, we took no additional cargo except a couple of pine-needle pillows which the dog promptly dissected and spread over the upholstery. (There had evidently been a rabbit among the pine-needles before they became pillow stuffing.)

In Canada, however, the urge to invest began to assert itself. Distance undoubtedly lends enchantment—but the distance is measured not from the enchanting object to the beholder, but from the beholder to his own bailiwick. As soon as an American traveler sets foot on foreign soil, he feels a gnawing desire to do a bit of importing on his own account.

He may disguise it at first as pure altruism by saying, "There's something that would be nice to take to Cousin Millie," or "Don't you think Uncle Albert would like one of these?" But underneath his Santa Claus whiskers is the lean jaw of the Yankee tradesman. What he really wants is to get something for less than it would cost him at home. And almost anything paid for with unfamiliar currency that doesn't look like real money may be construed as a bargain.

Running true to form, Phoebe and I bought a couple of pairs of blankets from a roadside shop when we entered Canada; they were intended for gifts. Further along the King's Highway we stopped and bought some more, for ourselves. They were beautiful blankets and actually several cents cheaper than they would have been in the States. They were also several inches smaller than they would have been in the States—as Phoebe discovered when we got home. Apparently Canadian bedmakers simply lay the blanket on instead of tucking it in.

We piled the blankets on the suitcases in the back of the car, where they made a comfortable perch for a hand-carved wooden rooster that Phoebe bought at an Indian shop. The rooster was supposed to be a weather vane, and it had warped so that it wouldn't turn on its pivot, but Phoebe said that didn't matter, because our apartment had no cross-ventilation anyhow.

In the tobacco-raising district I bought a bunch of green tobacco, just as a curiosity, and when we reached the tomato belt the crimson harvest was irresistible; we added two baskets of tomatoes to our ballast in the back seat. They were more than we could possibly use in their natural state, but Phoebe declared her intention of embarking on a career of canning as soon as we got home.

At Niagara Falls we resisted the lure of the souvenir and gift shops that infest that honeymooners' haven—though I did have a fleeting impulse to invest in a picture of the Falls painted on black velvet, with real silver spangles for stars and a mother-of-pearl moon. But as we rolled down through New York State new temptations assailed us on both sides of the road. We bought Aztec pottery from some Aztecs who had unaccountably strayed up to the Finger Lake region, a set of handwrought fire irons from an ironmonger who monged his iron outside Ithaca, and a bevy of brown-and-yellow baskets from the old basket weavers of Binghamton.

At a roadside market near Middletown we stocked up with fresh eggs, comb honey and a dressed chicken, and as we approached New York City we accumulated sweet corn, potatoes and string beans. No doubt these vegetables had been brought out from the city to be sold, but they looked so much more attractive in their rural setting than on the push-carts of lower Manhattan we couldn't resist them.

Of course, by the time we reached home the Aztec pottery was in pieces, the Binghamton baskets had splintered beneath the weight of potatoes and sweet corn, Canadian blankets were soggy with a meringue of raw eggs, crushed honeycomb and pine needles, and the hand-wrought fire irons had reduced the tomatoes to catsup consistency.

Nevertheless, it was fun while it lasted, and if I ever get the car cleaned out we may take another trip through the coast-to-coast bazaars. But not until the State Highway Commission installs Shop-and-Go signals to facilitate purchasing. And not until the wayside service stations enlarge the scope of their activities. So far, the familiar announcement that "We Fix Flats" means just one thing. And it isn't pocketbooks.

culine gossip parlors, including even cocktail hour at the Racquet Club and lunch at 21, is Tony Williams' tailoring shop. Nowhere is such felonious chit-chat evolved, brought to flower and dissipated down the boulevards, and if Clare Boothe is ever moved to do a men's version of her epic, "The Women," Tony's fitting rooms rate a scene in it along with the Squibb Building barber shop and the locker room at the Athletic Club. Tony makes clothes for any number of the more gilded youths of the boulevards under a very Bond street trade name which he thought up all by himself one day while chewing a meatless veal loaf at the Vital Interest Health Food Restaurant (Tony being diet-minded and living for months on nothing but apple parings and bran) and his clientele includes Paul Draper, Frank Chapman, Jerry Zerbe, Paul Flato, C. D. Jackson, Roy Larsen, Bill Plankington, Bill Kemper, of Kansas City; Howard Dietz, Freddy Payne, A. K. Mills and Enzo Fiermonte, when the latter is in the chips, which isn't just now. And while Mr. Basile does the fittings and Mr. Williams attempts to sell his customers on rat-catcher patterns, Inverness cloaks and Wellington dinner trousers, more gab of dubious authenticity floats around the atmosphere than one could find in a week of New York gossip columns. Tales of death and divorce and division, of infidelities and impossible romance, are the order of the day, and if Gladys Swarthout and Tokio Payne don't get a load of nonsense whenever their husbands come home from a fitting they are missing a bet. So is Miss Boothe if she doesn't get around to doing a play called "The Boys," one of the scenes of which will be set in a fashionable trousers shoppe just like this one.

ALONG THE BOULEVARDS: Wilfred J. Funk, who has learned to be one of the most adroit fellows at self-publicization, has had his newest book, "When the Merry-Go-Round Breaks Down," bound in white vellum so he can write inscriptions on the outside cover instead of the conventional fly leaf . . . aware of the inclination of some persons to patronize any picketed shop, at least one Madison Avenue merchant has hired a brace of stooges to patrol his entrance . . . They wear the customary "unfair to workers" placards and mutter at pedestrians with the result that the premises are crowded with customers. . . . The trick was used for years by Jack and Charlie to keep out parlor humanitarians and other undesirables. . . . Most attention-attracting window on Madison at the moment is that of Max Schling, the super-bloom vender, where there is a full lawn with real grass and crocuses and other spring posies sprouting out of season.

THINKING OUT LOUD: To me it is a touching and astonishing thing that so many people from all over this country should write letters to my Captain Kidd. His daily mail, addressed in his name, is as large as that of many fairly well known citizens. It expresses the love of many kind-hearted persons for dogs . . . English news broadcasts are pretty poor stuff, if samples we had during the Czech crisis are a reliable criterian . . . I haven't seen a safe being hoisted up the front of a building and through a window in Manhattan for years. And it was such fun, watching . . . The tornado at Charleston, S. C., furnished me another day of gloom. For years I've rated Charleston close to the top among cities of the world. Its people, through many generations, have been chastened by fire, flood, hurricane, bombardment, siege and plague. They are the better for it, as are all who have learned how to meet adversity . . . The blue jays have been holding their noisy fall conventions in trees and on lawns about our house. They are foregathering for the flight south, I presume. Some stay all winter. Maybe they're having plebiscites to determine who shall hold the fort during the snowy season.

I like to see a man handle an axe skillfully. He seems so surely master of his job . . . Dr. Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., eating, with a corps of secretaries, at the Algonquin . . . Reminds me that, but for a very unusual combination of circumstances over which Dr. Holt had no control, my daughter, Mary, would be in Rollins . . . but she's so sold on Pembroke and Rhode Island that it would take six wild horses to transfer her to another school . . . Don Herold, humorist, also having a snack in mid-afternoon. Bald, studious, soft-spoken and unassuming, Herold, I believe, knows all anybody knows about humor.

George Hamilton Green is one of the most versatile of popular musicians in New York. His artistic and zippy handling of the zylophone has made more than one big orchestra sound twice as good as it really was, on the air. George plays any instrument, and that means any.

Green originated in Kenosha, Wis. He still speaks with the informality of the Western small town boy, and any New Yorker who doesn't like it had better keep his thoughts to himself. His English, while not strictly collegiate, is forceful.

When a mere boy, George and his girl "ran away" and were married. They are devotedly attached to one another and to their son, Gerald, and daughter, Elinor. Both the children, now rather grown up, are talented. Gerald, around 20, has had cartoons in most of the magazines.

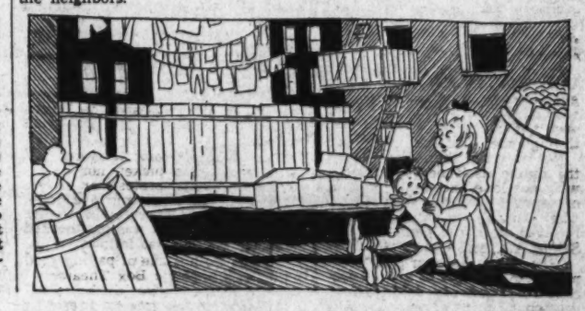
George Green is an extremely modest fellow. He mixes but little with the loud-talking big-I group of New York swing band boys. He spends his spare time with his family, in their home in Woodstock during the summer and in an apartment just over the line from Manhattan's Van Cortlandt Park in winter.

He has written a complete symphony. "Well, I got it out of my system," he says. "Maybe nobody will ever want to hear it, but what of that?" He made a small fortune out of a system of teaching music by mail. He has invented a dozen musical instruments for modern bands. He writes new music as readily as I write these words. He has a studio in Radio City, where he teaches, advises, consults on big orchestral programs.

In the heart of old Hell's Kitchen, in the Forties, I saw a pulley washline the other noon, with a set of doll clothes swinging in the breeze. It was stretched from the third story of one tenement to the opposite tenement wall. Smoke from a paving operation in the street was not helping the wet doll clothes much.

Down below, holding her nude and battered doll in her lap, sat a round-faced little girl of about 4. She was looking up at her wash, apparently trying to figure out when the sun might get a chance at it. She sat on the ground, which was none too clean, I assure you.

I walked by softly, and she didn't hear me. But I heard her say something to Dolly about ". . . clean clo's so's you won't disgrace me b'fore the neighbors."



Dale Carnegie Says . . .

I MET ON THE S. S. De Grasse last summer a charming young American woman who lived abroad. She was returning to Italy to be married On her last trip here, she had spent only a month in America; and, during that month, she had been studying subjects that she felt would help her to be a good wife and a good mother; subjects such as cooking and the feeding and training of babies and the psychology of rearing children. What a sensible girl! If nature is kind, some day she will be faced with the most important problem on earth to her; the rearing of children. Why don't all our schools teach young women more intelligently? Why?

There is one quality that is almost universally hated; and another that is universally admired. I am thinking of conceit and humility. The small soul, the untutored man, is afraid to admit that he doesn't know. It usually takes a big man to be humble. And the bigger the man, the more likely he is to be humble. For example, take Montague Norman who has been Governor of the Bank of England since 1920. He is one of the best known and learned financiers in the world; yet he is humble enough to ride to work every morning in the subway—or "Tube" to the Londoner. And he was humble enough in 1932 to admit that with all his experience, he didn't know which way to turn nor what to do. In October 1932, he said: "The difficulties are so great, the forces are so unlimited, the precedents are so lacking, that I approach the whole subject in ignorance—it is too great for me. I will admit that for the moment the way to me, is not clear."

Why don't you and I cultivate that same spirit of humility? If we are possessed with a disastrous, nauseating know-it-all attitude, let's kill it as we would destroy a diamond-back rattle-snake. If we don't know a thing, let's frankly admit it. Do that and people will have increased respect for your intelligence.

John Gunther in his book, "Inside Europe," shows how the ruling classes of England use propaganda and censorship to get what they want. Do they do it by strong-arm methods? Definitely no. Oh, I say, that wouldn't be cricket, not in England. They do it by voluntary conspiracy. For example, during the war in Abyssinia, every editor in Fleet street knew the approximate strength of the British fleet in the Mediterranean; but no paper printed it. Why? Because again it wasn't cricket. Some official in the foreign office would call an editor on the phone and say;

"Look, my dear fellow, I can't ask you not to print this information; but it would be awfully decent if you wouldn't."

There is tact for you—tact that gets astonishing results and leaves everyone happy and feeling important.

LET ME TELL you the story of Mrs. P. P. Proctor from Seattle. It was told to me by Cliff Sabrey, World Cruise Director for the Cunard White Star steamship line.

Mrs. P. P. Proctor kept trying to impress everybody on shipboard with her importance, repeatedly saying, "I am Mrs. P. P. Proctor from Seattle. I expect the ship to do thus and so for me." She carried her nose high, her manner cold as a sturgeon. She let everybody understand that she was just a little better than anyone else on shipboard. She was one of the richest persons, and she made the most of it. Of course, no one liked the hoitytoity snob. She was about as popular as a polecat at a picnic. But there she was and the rest of the passengers had to make the best of her.

Well, the ship arrived at Port Elizabeth, South Africa, where the passengers took automobiles overland to Capetown. So wonderful is the scenery that the average person would walk to get there; almost on his hands and knees.

But not Mrs. P. P. Proctor from Seattle.

She saw the automobile she was assigned to and said she didn't like it. Too old fashioned. It'd probably jolt her to pieces.

She approached the driver and gave him a piece of her sizzling mind. She did not like the car, she would not ride in it.

"Why, ma'am," said the driver respectfully, "this is considered a good car for this part of South Africa. In fact, one of the best. We are proud of it."

"Proud of that wreck!" she snorted. "Why! in Seattle there are better cars on the junk-pile. Besides, I don't like your manner. You've impudent. I'm going to report you."

The man who hitherto had been patient stepped toward her, a firm note in his voice.

"Just who will you report me to?" he asked. "There ain't no one you can report me to. I own these cars and they're the only ones in a hundred miles. And what's more, I don't care who you are. I'm boss here. You're going to get into that car and like it."

The woman was flabbergasted. No one had ever spoken to her like that.

Well, Mrs. P. P. Proctor from Seattle got into the car, and quieted down. Strange to say, instead of becoming more uppity, she became docile and thoughtful of others.

This attitude continued after they returned to the ship. She became even friendly. Before the trip was over, she was quite popular. It had taken a firm stand and sharp words to waken her.

We can learn from this. At times we meet people who will not be satisfied with anything under high heaven. They want to show their importance. Be patient; be reasonable. But after a certain point has passed, take a firm stand yourself. Explain your reason and don't retreat. If right is on you side, the person will probably come off her high horse and respect you for standing up for your rights.

WRONG DOING IS OFTEN a matter of geographical position. For example, I once attended—or rather attempted to attend—religious services in a little wooden church which graced the colorful fishing village of Volendam, Holland. But I didn't succeed in getting inside the church; and for a reason that will astonish you. I was accompanied by a young lady, and when we tried to enter the church door half a dozen angry fishermen jumped in front of us and barred the way. Some were so angry that they actually shook their fists in the face of my surprised and frightened companion. I was startled and shocked. Never before had I experienced any difficulty in attending church. And then to have this happen in a country where I have found some of the kindest people in the world.

These Dutchmen could not speak English; and the only words I could say in Dutch were "If you please," and although I set this phrase to working overtime, it availed nothing. Finally we located a fisherman who could speak a few words of English.

He said that we could not enter the church because the young lady with me was a wicked woman! They declared she was dressed indecently. She wore a dress with short sleeves and a V-shaped neck! Ten million women in America were attending church that day dressed in similar fashion. But in that particular Holland church, such a costume indicated lack of respect for religion; those people did not want a women in the church dressed in such a manner as to cause the men's minds to stray from the sermon.

The moral to this story—if there is a moral—should be that sermons should be so interesting and so inspiring that they can successfully compete with the back of a woman's neck for attention.

Political Satire Aroused No Resentment
Pokes Fun at President and the New Deal
More Concerning Director Frank Capra

By Nelson B. Bell.

HAVING at one time in his early career been the manager of that whirlwind ring gladiator, Terrible Terry McGovern—that was shortly after he had ceased "cleaning up" in the laundry business—Sam H. Harris presumably is neither ignorant of nor indifferent to the stimulating effect of a good fight upon those eager onlookers usually referred to as the "innocent bystanders." It seems a little odd, therefore, that he should have opened his production of the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart musical satire in Baltimore last season, instead of bringing it directly to Washington for its premiere while Congress was in session and all the branches of the Government were operating at full blast.

Perhaps the reason was that in the back of his mind lingered the thought that the full blast of New Deal resentment might be turned against him and his star, George M. Cohan, whose role in the tuneful dart-shooting is that of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, President of these more or less United States.

Had the play opened here and the rather confidently expected vituperation of the Federal establishment been turned upon it, Mr. Harris would have found himself the proprietor of an even more valuable theatrical property than is now the case—if such a thing is possible. Anything short of closing the show would have served only to concentrate redoubled public interest upon it. It now comes to the National a year late and in the "off season" of Government.

But quite obviously the person and dignity of the President of the United States are less sacrosanct than was supposed by the intrepid gentlemen who determined to find out. Otherwise, how can the fact be accounted for that "I'd Rather Be Right" ran all last season on Broadway without so much as a mild protest being lodged against it, even through the most subterranean of channels?

Not only has there been no "come-back" from any official source, but the public itself never once brought forth a single picket, nor did it, with one lone exception, flood the mails with heated protests or threats of reprisal. It was an event, therefore, not without ironic overtones, when Mr. Harris proudly displayed the first letter of objection he had received after the opening of the piece on Broadway. It was postmarked Selma, Ala., and signed "Southern Democrat," and read as follows:

"Sir: On a recent trip to New York I made the mistake of paying good money to see your 'I'd Rather Be Right,' at the Music Box Theater. I can't very well ask for my money back, but at least I would like to tell you what I think of your low attempt to disparage the greatest President this country has had since Abraham Lincoln and one of the best Administrations we're ever had. This is a free country, of course, and you have a perfect right to your opinion, but so have I, and mine is that a good taste of some of Hitler's methods would teach you to appreciate the value of a true liberal Government."

This was such a staggering blow to Mr. Harris that the only comment he was able to make was, "I like that. Me, a registered Democrat, who voted for Roosevelt and still have a rather fond regard for him."

SAM H. HARRIS never has been known to turn his back on a play of controversial nature, so long as it was, in his opinion, a good play or musical. He has had his share of protests, official and otherwise, down through the years and has always relished a good scrap, just as he did back in the old days of the rosin and the padded mitts worn by Mr. McGovern.

When he produced "Of Thee I Sing," the veteran and informed John Montague reminds me, he had a slight brush with the French government, represented on this side by the France-America Society, which took umbrage at the amiable side-swipes that musical fol-de-rol indulged in at the expense of the French Ambassador and his country's notorious skill at debt defaulting.

At another time, he brought the wrath of Great Britain down upon his head, when, in "As Thousands Cheer," the royal family appeared under their right names in a satirical skit. When he was asked by the editor of a London newspaper over long distance phone what he proposed to do to assuage the indignation abroad, he replied that this was America and we didn't have quite the same reverence for royalty here as some other peoples seemed to have and he didn't propose to do anything about it.

SINCE the early days of "I'd Rather Be Right," it has been viewed by uncounted thousands, including many notables, members of the President's Cabinet—many of whom are gently caricatured on the stage—members of his immediate family and other ardent partisans who were closely watched by the management throughout the performance. All have accepted it with the best of grace in a spirit of good, clean fun.

There is no reason why this should not be so. While the President, his Cabinet, the members of the United States Supreme Court and others in positions of high authority are named by name and pricked lightly by the Kaufman-Hart harpoons, they are pilloried in most amiable and kindly fashion.

When the play opened in Baltimore and was viewed there by this remote outpost, your reporter had the temerity, in the face of many charges of impropriety, to express the opinion that "I'd Rather Be Right" is one of the least offensive political satires ever written. That still is our view. There is not a malicious word in the entire book of the play. Even if there were, the sting would be taken out by George M. Cohan's unbelievably gracious and amusing impersonation of a sympathetic and kindly President, endeavoring to solve the problem of two underpaid youngsters seeking an economic adjustment that will enable them to get married.

Mr. Cohan is entitled to some sort of Congressional medal, or, at least, a set of resolutions inscribed in gold on costly parchment, celebrating his great good nature and finesse in an assignment that no one but the first gentleman of the theater might presume to undertake.

THERE is another distinguished gentleman of the theater, in its newer celluloid manifestations, still engaged in estimating the dramatic potentialities of the Capital, whose inclinations are distinctly away from the current trend toward political satire that seems so popular at the moment.

Frank Capra, perhaps the country's greatest director of motion pictures, on a basis of successful accomplishment through the years, finds himself more deeply engrossed in the enduring qualities of human nature than in the ephemeral aspects of a passing phase. Mr. Capra is a young man of independent mind who holds convention and tradition in scant respect. He places life upon the screen as he sees it through his own eyes. Mr. Capra sees life through eyes that are acute and photographic. His definite opinions of people and events spring from deep and penetrating study down on the good earth rather than from imaginative dreaming up among the clouds. It is difficult, nevertheless, to hold with all of his views.

For example, when he declares that Maxwell Anderson's blank verse writings for the stage are so much balderdash insofar as the films are concerned, one wonders if Shakespeare, too, was an incompetent oaf whose notions of "good theater' were the vaporous spindrift of a tyro. When, as and if, Mr. Anderson's play of "Valley Forge," screen rights to which are owned by Mr. Capra's company, Columbia, is made into a motion picture, the role of Washington, if Mr. Capra is able to bring it about, will be played by Gary Cooper. Mr. Cooper, in his sphere, is an able mime, thought of highly by the masses, but it has never occurred to this typewriter that the salient attributes of the first President are re-embodied in the heart and mind of the attenuated Montanan, gifted as he is.

It would be the purpose of Mr. Capra, furthermore, to abandon all of the original play but the single scene toward the end in which a small band of ragged soldiers inspire Washington to abandon the thought of deserting the cause of the Revolution and continue the bitter struggle that eventually won liberty and independence for the rebellious colonies that were destined to become America. He would build his play upon that incident and scuttle all the rest. It is perhaps that very reliance upon the trustworthiness of his own dramatic instincts that makes Frank Capra the greatest of his craft.

For a contemplated picture based on the life of Chopin, Spencer Tracy would seem not quite so adventurous a choice for the title role of the

Robert Morley Makes Wilde Vivid Figure

Stare of All-Male Cast
Role Carries Play
Filmed Opposite Shearer

By Mark Barron.
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 15.—Biographical plays, when telling the life of someone in our generation, are always dangerous because the audience is too well acquainted with the principal character. But the success of "Oscar Wilde," the story of that poet and playwright at the turn of the century, is largely due to the fact that Robert Morley is performing the title role.

Morley, the rather flabby but feeling actor who is appearing as King Louis XIV oppositet Norma Shearer in the film of "Marie Antoinette," gives here a performance that makes the audience at least understand Wilde if it does not sympathize with him.

In these days Wilde would probably have a fame as a witty man, as an author who could make the bright remark at the proper time. In his mauve decade his wit was considerably more outstanding, for in that time his contemporaries were more reticent.

For instance, in speaking of his most neutral friend, Frank Harris, he said that "Judas always writes the biographies." And Harris did write Wilde's biography, but he rarely had a more true friend than Harris, according to this drama by Leslie and Sewell Stokes.

This, like "Journey's End," is another play with an all male cast. In the parts are 14 men and they tell the dramatic scenes of Wilde's life from the time when he is most brilliant and writing his witty plays until he has finished with prison and is a derelict in the absinthe parlors of Paris.

In this are shown the humor and sparkle of Wilde, and also is shown that side of him where he had a strange friendship for young men. It is a theme that might be repugnant, but the authors have handled this with the same adroitness that Edouard Bourdet employed in presenting the love theme in his "The Captive," about ten years ago. "The Captive" was closed by the police, but in this time "Oscar Wilde" doesn't draw a nod from the City Hall censors.

In the court scenes Wilde spars with the pompous barrister who represents His Majesty's government and is giving a much better case in his own defense. Then he weakens and becomes a fragile man who must admit to his sins. He accepts his prison sentence almost as a boon, something that will give him an escape. And when he is finally released from prison he is finished, a brilliant candle once that has burned out.

There isn't much plot, but it is an electrifying character study. It is a character study not only of the man Wilde, but also of his generation. Here was a peculiar though gifted man, and he was hounded through life by minor officials who, meaning well enough, understood only that he was something a bit removed from themselves.

So their own solution was censorship or prison. They knew no other remedy.

It is an excellent cast that this play has been given, but the role that really carries here is Morley in the character of Wilde. He is a great actor, and so few you find, such as he, who knows as much about his part as the dramatist who wrote the lines.

Stone's Nephew Signed for Film

Milburn Stone, youthful character actor, was pulled off an eastbound airliner to take the role of a ship's officer in "The Storm."

Stone said his proposed trip East was for the purpose of attending the New York opening of the play "Lightnin'" which stars his famous uncle, Fred Stone.

At Universal, the younger Stone will work under direction of Harold Young in a large male cast including Charles Bickford, Preston Foster, Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Frank Jenks, Samuel S. Hinds and Joe Sawyer. The story deals with the drama found in the lives of marine wireless operators.

"Little Princess" Reaches "That Certain Age"

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 15.—For years Mary Pickford was known as America's Sweetheart, till Marie Dressler came along and got the title. Deanna Durbin's co-workers have named her Little Princess, and she lives up to it—not because she's above them in any way, but they've placed her apart. She's kept the gates of Universal Studios open and hundreds of families in jobs. Imagine a 15-year-old doing that!

I lunched at the studio recently with Deanna, her mother and teacher, Mrs. Morrison. She wore gray slacks and soft pink angora sweater, her hair tied back with pink ribbons to match. Some day they'll do her in color, then you'll really see the beauty of the girl. Lovely golden glints in chestnut hair, naturally curly, specks of same color in her eyes. And her skin you could eat with a spoon. She has a clear, steady, hypnotic gaze like a baby—and when she fastens those orbs on you, you're sunk. She's exactly the same in real life as on the screen—the same poise that she has in "That Certain Age," and she won't be 16 till December 4.

Adolescence is talked about, but I'm certain she doesn't know the meaning of the word. And never will, because she can't have natural things a kid should have. Spends most of her time with older people, except when she's working. She can't go out to parties without being mobbed, but then doesn't want to. Deanna won't go to boarding school or college, so she hasn't the joy of that outlet with other young people her own age. No sorority dances, no whipping into the kitchen to raid the ice box. The studio set is her playground. She loves all the kids in her pictures, but they treat her as someone aloof.

I questioned her about her ambitions. She thought a moment, then said: "I get more fun out of singing than anything. Some day I'd like to do opera."

"What about the Metropolitan?" I asked.

"Well," was her surprising answer, "you see, they have to choose you before anything can be said about that. So far they don't know I exist."

She's only had four years of singing lessons. The last two were with the famous opera star, Andres de Sigurola. "And yet you sing like that?" I exclaimed.

"Like what?" said Deanna, as though she considered it nothing. In two years she has learned to sing in French, Spanish and Italian, and is sorry she can't play the piano better. She took a few lessons before "Three Smart Girls" but hasn't had time for them since.

On her last trip to New York Deanna saw 11 plays and a Toscanini concert, which she liked best. Sees very few pictures. Won't do radio, except occasionally. Says it's too hard trying to be good every week. Doesn't think she could do it and pictures, too.

Mrs. Durbin might have been a school teacher. She has that straightforward, direct, unemotional quality which builds character, not headlines. Deanna's older sister did teach school until she married a short time ago. And her father could be a bookkeeper in any small town, the kind who has two suits of clothes, one for work and Sunday best.

I turned to her mother and said: "Understand Deanna gets the smallest salary of any star in Hollywood, only $30,000 a picture." She hesitated, was reluctant to talk about it.

She finally did admit she didn't think it was quite that much but that the studio was going to do better and she knew everything would be all right. They were very upset over a lawsuit recently, which involved Deanna's agent, and brought Deanna and her father into court as witnesses. So he bought off the agent's contract and now manages her exclusively.

They honestly believe the public isn't interested in what she makes and consider it bad taste and bad business to discuss it. That, my dears, is so rare it's almost unprecedented in Hollywood. I'm hoping the studio hasn't taken advantage of that refreshing attitude.

Instead of riding in a car from cottage to stage, she rides her bicycle, a present from Producer Pasternak, who's done all four of her

Kid Stars Flourish

Hollywood, Oct. 15.

Shirley Temple is, and has been for three consecutive years, Hollywood's No. 1 box office attraction.

Youngsters have consistently been near top—or top—drawing personalities of motion pictures, from the time Charlie Chaplin sent Jackie Coogan soaring to fame in "The Kid." Prior to that, the screen was largely by and for adults; children did appear before the camera, of course, but their importance was insignificant in the general scheme of things.

Once the film industry realized the enormous appeal of children, as Jackie Coogan proved so conclusively, the era of the child-star began.

Young Coogan had a rival for child acting laurels in 1920—a rolypoly little lass named Baby Peggy. She became the crowned queen of Hollywood while Jackie was ruling as king.

Next youngster to sweep movie fans off their feet was Jackie Cooper, who blazed a glowing trail as "Skippy" in 1930. Jackie was the easy successor to his namesake for whom producers had been searching far and wide.

While young Cooper was still the brightest child star in Hollywood, another youngster commenced to shine—dimly at first but with an increasing radiance that overshadowed anything that had happened in the industry before. That, of course, was Shirley Temple. In the years since then, a host of children have scored enormous Hollywood successes.

There are, to name but the leaders, Deanna Durbin, Bobby Breen, Mickey Rooney, Jane Withers, Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Irene Dare, Edith Fellows, Bonita Granville, the Mauch twins, Sabu (the Hindu lad), Donnie Dunagan, Virginia Weidler, Ann Gillis, Jackie Moran, Douglas Scott, Sybil Jason, Janet Dempsey, David Jack Holt, the "Our Gang" children, the "Dead End" kids, Shirley Temple (of course) and Tommy Kelly.

Young Mr. Kelly is Hollywood's latest rage. He is the boy selected from thousands of applicants for the title role in the recent "Adventures of Tom Sawyer." A year ago Tommy was an unknown Bronx youth. Today he can't walk down a street without being mobbed for his autograph. His career as a child star seems assured.

Producer Sol Lesser, who discovered Jackie Coogan, has taken a hand in Tommy Kelly's career. He is starring the lad in "Peck's Bad Boy With the Circus," first of a series based upon the famous, almost legendary figure of young Bill Peck, typical American boy.

The career of the child actor, like Tommy Kelly, is far more in the hands of the director than is true of adult stars who may shape and mold parts and scenes to their own liking in co-operation with the director. The child, minus a perspective on his own abilities, moves as the director molds him. The freckled Kelly bad is fortunate in that he has had two directors who have had unusual success working with children and who have specialized in pictures set in the world below 'teen age—Norman Taurog, who did "Tom Sawyer," and Edward Cline, who is directing "Peck's Bad Boy With the Circus."

Spook and Mischa In 'Service De Luxe'

Moffshovsky, an important character in "Service De Luxe," new Constance Bennett-Vincent Price offering, never appears on the screen.

The character with the Russian name is spoken to, but never answers. He influences the decisions of one of the principals, but is never heard.

The reason is that Moffshovsky is the ghost of one of the ancestors of Bebenko, the role of Mischa Auer is playing in the picture. Mischa and the spirit form the chief comedy team of the production.

Romance and Sentimentalism on Broadway

Although they are known for their sharp and caustic wit, George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart are not without their sentimental moments. Properly celebrated for their urbane and disillusioned humors, they are likewise capable of a good, hearty cry and a plunge into unashamed romanticism when they contemplate anything that is near and dear to them. And the theater is one of their devotions, for it has been good to them and they have been good to it. They love the stage for its traditions, its glamour and its excitement, as well as for the money it has made them; they rejoice in its victories and they grieve over its defeats, and when they think of the "movies" and the menace they are to its future they break out in a passion of indignation and rage. Nothing can touch their favorite art form with impunity, and when anything tries it, whether it be a film or a burlesque show, their fury knows no bounds.

They are, you might think, the ideal men to to do a long and kaleidoscopic chronicle of the theater from the beginning of the century to the present day in a fluent, eloquent and colorful play that would do for show business what Noel Coward did for another somewhat remarkable institution, the British Empire, in his "Cavalcade." No wonder we all had high hopes for "The Fabulous Invalid," in which they attempted to do just that.

To a great extent we were right in our anticipations. "The Fabulous Invalid" is, in truth, a lively and entertaining fantasy, chronicling the history of a mythical New York theater and, by implication, the whole New York theater, in terms that are humorous, sentimental and nostalgic. It is at its best when it gives us quick views of famous works from the past of the drama, and it is at is most mellow when it is reminding us that the theater has always been on the verge of death—at least ever since Elizabeth's day, Shakespeare drops in long enough to recall to us—and that somehow it is always being revived by new blood and new aspirations.

All of this is touching and sometimes stirring, but it is difficult not to feel disappointed with the results of "The Fabulous Invalid." It should have been so much better, so much more enthralling. Instead, amidst all of your enjoyment, you are likely to be conscious of a stubborn impression that you have in some part been let down.

There can be no doubt of the genuineness of the affection that the Messrs. Kaufman and Hart bear for the theater, but, unfortunately, there are times when the sincerity of "The Fabulous Invalid" does not ring true. For one thing, the authors are not completely at home in fantasy, and their play, which has as leading figures the ghosts of three actors who are passing their eternity in the theater, is chiefly fantasy. The main trouble of the two playwrights, however, is that some of their leading virtues work against them. Their talent is, among other things, glib and brittle and polished, filled with a deep understanding of all the mechanical tricks of their business. It all comes under the head of showmanship, and showmanship is certainly not a quality to be ignored in the theater.

The danger, though, is that too much of it, unless handled with the greatest dexterity, has a way of interfering with the air of sincerity that is so important to a sentimental work. Unless the sentiment seems entirely without affectation or fabrication, it loses all of its persuasiveness, and there are times when "The Fabulous Invalid" seems to be having a good cry simply because tears can be a good box-office commodity. Such a suspicion is fatal to such a work.

It is too bad that "The Fabulous Invalid" is not completely satisfying, because its basic idea is a delightful one and this is a perfect time for an unashamedly sentimental chronicle of the course of our theater in these difficult years. All of us, I think, are ready for a good, hearty romantic orgy about the trials, tribulations and final triumph of show business amid the exigencies of war, unrest, social upset and the "movies," for a deep affection for the theater and a strange optimism about its future are prevalent these days.

It is fine and fitting, too, that a pair of our most commercially successful playwrights should pay a tribute to such earnest organizations as the Group and Mercury Theaters as harbingers of the drama's future, and the Messrs. Kaufman and Hart do this handsomely in their play. And I repeat that I enjoyed "The Fabulous Invalid," admired the settings, costumes and production and liked the work of the large cast, in particular that of Richard Gordon as the owner of the Alexander Theater—a good performance that I carelessly forgot to mention in my first-night review. But the play really should have been a little bit beter.

If "The Fabulous Invalid" made a particularly timely appearance, Laurence Housman's "Victoria Regina," with Miss Helen Hayes in the title role, seemed equally unfortunate in the timing of its return engagement, for, as you know, "Victoria Regina" is very romantic about the glories of the British Empire, and somehow this is not exactly the moment in our lives when many of us are feeling sentimental about England and her rulers.

Here, despite anything in the way of historical or political prejudice, is an extraordinarily touching and lovable chronicle play, and here, above everything else, is a truly magnificent performance. After watching Miss Hayes' superb characterization there can be little doubt in one's mind that she is the greatest of American actresses. I have a deep and abiding admiration for Miss Cornell, but not even her Saint Joan, in a far finer play, is as brilliant a portrayal as Miss Hayes' Victoria.

There is a fine performance, too, by Werner Bateman, a new German actor, in the role of the prince consort. Mr. Bateman is an admirable player and he is of great help to "Victoria Regina." But it is Miss Hayes whose triumph must be celebrated. That she can make us tearful about the good old empire today is proof of her greatness.

Boston was on the witness stand when Dewey blundered in cross-examining him and a mistrial had to be declared . . . The New York County Lawyers' subcommittee now is deciding upon a resolution to whether it is ethical for Dewey to hold his prosecutor's job while a candidate for higher office . . . And one of the members of that subcommittee is Lyon Boston.

Last week-end one of the night-club owners received an unusual phone call . . . "I'm bringing the Governor of Kentucky to your place," the caller suggested. "And if you'll see that there's no check, I'll see that you'll be appointed a Kentucky Colonel" . . . "A Kentucky Colonel?" the cafe owner replied. "I'd rather he pay the check!"

On the steps of St. Thomas' yesterday, a newly married couple posed for the news photographers . . . A cop dispersed two passersby, who had noticed the swank proceedings and shouted: "It can't last!" . . . The playful duo were Oscar Levant and Harpo Marx.

Warden Lawes of Sing Sing has written a new book, "Invisible Stripes," which will be released soon . . . Lawes included a foreword in which he discussed his belief in democracy. But all this was written months ago . . . This week he wrote to his publishers, Farrar & Rinehart, asking them to change the line to read: "I believe in democracy—but not as evidenced by France and Great Britain."

JUSTICE COTILLO: Your pro-labor decision last week came too late. Jim Farley wanted you on the Democratic State ticket—until he learned of the injunction you had issued against picketers . . . TIM MARA: Sammy Baugh, the football player, has signed a contract to appear on the vaudeville stage . . . WILLIAM GREEN: The Federal Government will take a crack at your A. F. of L., because of its policy making it so difficult for apprentices . . . NEWCOMB CARLTON: A Columbia Films executive sailed to Europe last week. Jack Cohen, vice president of Columbia, sent him a bon-voyage wire, and added: "Give my regards to Hitler—Jack Cohen" . . . Because a Cohen was sending regards to Herr Hitler, Western Union refused to send the wire.

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: On May 10 three cowboys, Jack Rosse, Joe Bradley and Shorty Carson, left Los Angeles to ride across the country on horseback. They announced that they had decided upon the trip as a means of saying good-by to horses and get a job in radio . . . In every city they touched, the newspapers reported their job-getting purpose . . . The trio arrived Tuesday. After two hungry days, they signed for a job at Madison Square Garden—to lead the Rodeo parade, on horseback.

'Judgment Day' Enlists Civic's Full Strength

Season's First Offering Written by Elmer Rice Opens at Rialto

The Washington Civic Theater has provided Elmer Rice's "Judgment Day," the opening play of its third season, with a cast which includes many of its most popular players. "Judgment Day" is a dramatization of a purge trial in a dictator country of middle Europe. The role of Lydia Kuman, who is accused of conspiring to assassinate the dictator and who is on trial for her life, has been given to Eileen Fowler.

Norman Rose, well remembered for his performance of the psychiatrist in last year's "Johnny Johnson," will play Dr. Bathory, the prosecuting attorney while Arthur Westover will be seen as George Kitov, who is also accused of the conspiracy.

Murray Sheehan, who was last seen as Little Man in the Civic Theater's memorable production of "...one third of a nation...," plays Count Slatarski, who refuses to conform to the government's dictation. Harry Estcott and Arthur Isler, both well known to Civic audiences, play Judge Murusi and Judge Vlora, while Joseph Cochran and Kenneth Banghart will be seen as the other two judges.

Paul Walter will play General Rakovski, the Minister of Culture and Englightenment, who is the spokesman for the dictator and who is not only called upon to testify, but who is also accused by the defendants of having himself planned the attempted assassination in order falsely to accuse his political enemies.

Much of the comedy and also much of the excitement of "Judgment Day" is provided by the various witnesses who are called upon to testify. First is Hugh Smythe as Mr. Parvan, the personal secretary of the dictator and an eye-witness of the supposed crime. He is followed by a waiter in a cafe who testifies that he saw the conspirators together, and he also relates some of the more personal events of his own private life. This part, one packed full of laughs, falls to Joe Bourne.

The entire action of the play takes place in the courtroom, William M. Girvan will, as usual, design the sets. Rehearsals have been in progress for a number of weeks, and the play will open October 26 at the Rialto Theater great composer whose life was packed with drama as Gary Cooper's for the role of the father of his country. If Mr. Capra can, he will bring that about, also.

STARRING IN CURRENT CAMERA DRAMAS

Underlying all this extensive, if tentative, planning is that constant urge to stay down to earth and represent people on the screen as people are in life. Realizing this from his own conversations on the topic, it is not difficult to perceive why Capra nurtures strong enthusiasms for "Lady for a Day," as his favorite of all the pictures he has made, and looks upon "Lost Horizon" as something big and imaginative that "didn't quite come off."

There is only one Frank Capra. In his nature there is to be found no trace of pretense or subterfuge. He is not even a faint carbon copy of anybody else, in or out of his profession. That alone is ample cause for rejoicing—and his modest salary of $400,000 a year, or thereabouts, less taxes.

Popular Story In Play Form Children's First

"The Five Little Peppers," which comes to Washington as the first play of the curernt season of the Children's Theatre of New York, was written by Margaret Sidney fifty-seven years ago at "The Wayside," the historic old Concord, Mass., home, which she bought from Nathaniel Hawthorne's son, Julian, in 1883. Nathaniel Hawthorne had bought the house from Bronson Alcott in 1852. It is rich in literary atmosphere.

In addition to the many works Hawthorne wrote there, Mrs. Sidney lived in it for forty years and wrote innumerable stories about the Pepper family. On its little winding stair Louisa Alcott and her sister played "Pilgrim's Progress," as she later described in "Little Women."

And here Margaret Lothrop, Margaret Sidney's daughter, still lives. Under her direction it is now open to the public—not as a museum—but as a home little changed from the days when Emerson, Thoreau and others sought its hospitality. It is one of New England's oldest and most interesting houses.

From the American scene, the Children's Theatre's next play will carry its audience to France, the local for "Nobody's Boy," Hector Malot's celebrated story, which comes to the National Theater as the next production in the series of six on Saturday morning, November 19.

pictures. He also gives her a penny every day. From the look on her face, you'd think it was a $100 bill.

She has a stamp collection. Henry Koster gave her an album and her first stamps. She has five bracelets, well filled with charms, and gets new bangles after each picture. I suggested that after her sixteenth birthday she should begin gathering diamond ones. She laughed and said: "That's an idea—but it wouldn't have occurred to me. Do you really think I'm a diamond girl? I don't mind your suggesting it, but I'm afraid we'll have to wait a long time before anything happens."

She never tries to beg off work. When she says she's tired, they let her go home immediately—they know she's speaking the truth.

Deanna doesn't diet and polished off luncheon with a piece of chocolate cake and glass of milk. She always visits the other sets when not working. Never pushes herself forward. She is never satisfied—keeps wishing she'd done her scene better and must have a reason explained to her for everything. Believe me, a quizzly actress or actor is at a terrific disadvantage playing opposite Deanna. She's so real they squirm by comparison.

She's reserved. You know better than to ask her about love. That's sacred and shouldn't be mentioned, and mind you, she's just ready to bloom into womanhood.

'Bozo' at Gayety

"Bozo" Snyder, and his own show of talented burlesque and vaudeville artists, will make their season's bow at the Gayety Theater, starting with regular matinee today.

"Bozo's" supporting company is a good one. It includes Valerie Parks, one of the brightest and most glamorous luminaries in the disrobing firmament; Tommy Raft, eccentric comedian and mad musician; Edith Walton, chanter of the bluest of blues songs; Lou Browne, vigorous master of ceremonies, fine "feeder" for the comedians; Margie Bartel and Ruth Donald, pretty young display artist; Jack O'Malley, skillful character man, and Harry Seymour, Dutch dialect comic of "Hot-Dog" fame. There is, also, a bevy of well trained chorus beauties.

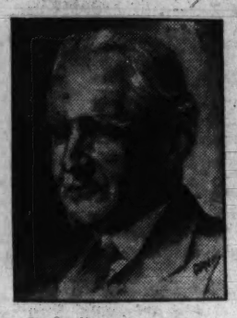
Swing Music Receives Academic Recognition

Cited by Macmillan Encyclopedia
New Reference Work Comprehensive
Lists 1,220 American Composers

By Ray C. B. Brown.

At long last it has happened! Swing music, frowned upon by the pedants and cheered by the people, conqueror of a popularity unprecedented since the vogue of the waltz, has finally been accorded the accolade of academic recognition. It is true that signs have not been wanting that such an event would come to pass. Four years ago Hugues Panassie published "Le Jazz Hot," the first serious study of swing, and this was followed by Sonia Armstrong's "Swing That Music." But up to the present one sought in vain for any mention of swing in reference books, which always lag a little behind the times. Now comes the Macmillan Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians to remedy the omission, although the editor, Albert E. Wier, seems somewhat dubious and almost unhappy about the whole thing. He writes thus:



RAY C. B. BROWN.

"Swing, a term applied to a certain jazz type of music, so elastic and vague in meaning that no one has been able to procure even from swing experts—dance orchestra leaders, players or composers—any precise statement as to exactly what the expression means or the kind of jazz to which it specifically applies. Some experts claim that swing is improvisation; to controvert this statement it is only necessary to draw attention to the fact that such improvisation is permitted only in scores specially arranged above a specified rhythmic and harmonic skeleton. Only late at night, when frequenters of night clubs and restaurants have mellowed to the point where 'anything can happen' without disturbing their equilibrium through the aural sense, are players permitted to exercise their talents in absolutely unsupervised swing, known in the Harlem vernacular as 'screw-ball,' 'gut-bucket,' 'whackey' and "barrelhouse;' the utmost in individual expression.

"Robert McBride, a modern composer who has introduced swing in the symphonic concert hall, states, 'a musician cannot define it without doing it; it must be heard, not read about.' Benny Goodman, who can perform in the swing style or play classical quintet parts on his clarinet, remarks that 'swing is probably rhythmic integration,' a statement that probably requires elucidation for the jazz expert as well as the 'classical' musician. Sonia Armstrong remarks that 'any average player can play through a score, but it takes a good swing player, and a real good one, to be able to leave that score, and to know, or to feel, just when to leave it and when to get back in it.'

"In 1938 Benny Goodman gave a concert in Carnegie Hall, New York, to an audience which filled the auditorium, designed to 'prove' swing, but the music critics who attended, and they were many, failed to find anything in the new form of jazz which would finally succeed in revolutionizing the art of music. The majority expressed a vehement preference for the Whiteman brand of jazz, one even going so far as to say that the proceedings as a whole were a bore." Mr. Wier then appends a short glossary of what he calls the "curious expressions" brought into the language by swing: alligator, barrelhouse, boogie-woogie, canary, cat, clambake, getoffman, growl, hidebeater, jam, jitterbug, licks, push box, scratch box, chirp box, agony pipe, licorice stick and fog horn.

When Mr. Wier found that swing experts could not give him precise descriptions of the technique, he might have consulted Virgil Thomson, who contributed this definition more than two years ago: "Swing music is a form of two-step in which the rhythm is expressed quantitatively by instruments of no fixed intonation, the melodic, harmonic and purely percussive elements being freed thereby to improvise in free polyphonic style." Another time I shall go more fully into the question of swing and its fascination for "serious" musicians as well as for jitterbugs, but I wish now merely to point out that the inclusion of swing in the new Macmillan encyclopedia is characteristic of its up-to-date timeliness.

This is just the kind of reference book that the average music lover will want to consult when in a hurry for concise information. It is a hefty tome of 2,089 pages, which the publishers say contain more than 2,000,000 words covering 51,000 references to persons, compositions, musical terms, instruments, organizations, and other pertinent data. I have not checked these figures, being willing to take them on trust in lieu of spending weeks in verification, but I have tested the book's resources and seldom found them wanting.

Albert E. Wier, the compiler and editor, is an American violinist whose music studies, both practical and theoretical, were pursued at the New England Conservatory with Benjamin Cutter, Emil Mahr and George W. Chadwick, and at Harvard University with John Knowles Paine and Walter Spaulding. Since 1900 he has been editor for New York publishing houses, and the enumeration of the works he has edited would fill a paragraph. With a background of specialized knowledge and experience, he speaks with authority in his field.

It has been his evident aim to compile an encyclopedia which will be a time saver, and he has unquestionably done that very thing. Every item is stripped of nonessentials. The synopses of operas, for example, are unadorned by adjectives and relate the stories with a minimum of words. In the matter of compression he is an adept, and his chronological history of music, reduced to 18 pages, is an excellent bird's-eye survey. His article on modern harmony is recommended to the puzzled layman, for the subject is treated lucidly and with as few technicalities as possible.

"How is the average concert-goer or radio listener to understand," he asks, "that the tonal masses crashing about his ears are substitutes for more pleasant sounds, and that they are derived from this or that chord in conventional harmony? Busoni voiced the opinion that the higher music of his day was intended for the musical elite, and that public performances of great art should be restricted rather than multiplied. The evidence shows that this thought may have been justified unless there occurs an about-face before music enters the realms of the most abstruse sciences."

While the book is comprehensively international, more consideration has been given to native music and musicians than in any previous one-volume work. There are, for instance, 1,220 American composers mentioned, and the list of American operas is the most complete that I have seen.

In his preface, the editor asks for indulgence for any possible errors, and requests the co-operation of readers in correcting them in future editions. It is inevitable that the industry of one man in this laborious task would entail an occasional lapse in vigilance. I have found a few errors which have slipped in, but the marvel is that they are so few.

National Symphony to Play Three New American Works

Compositions Will Be Given Premiere Here
Season Begins October 30 With Rosenthal Soloist
To Give Kindler Arrangement of Handel Concerto

First performances of three new works by American composers have been obtained by Hans Kindler for the eighth season of the National Symphony Orchestra, which will begin on Sunday afternoon, October 30, in Constitution Hall with Moriz Rosenthal, the veteran pianist, as soloist in Liszt's E flat major concerto. In addition to these premieres, Dr. Kindler plans the first American performances of three works and the presentation of a number of unfamiliar compositions for the first time in Washington.

The three premieres are a new symphony by Roy Harris, a piano concerto by Paul Nordhoff and a suite of "Miniatures" by Isidore Freed. Of these the most important is the Harris symphony, for this 40-year-old musician has during the past decade advanced to the front rank of American composers. His "Symphony 1933" was given its premiere by the Boston Orchestra under Kusevitzki, and the same organization presented his piano concerto for the first time. His recent choral works, "A Song for Occupations" and "Symphony for Voices" were introduced to the public by the Westminster Choir.

To Play Schelling's Work

Ernest Schelling's "Suite Variee" will be given its American premiere on January 11, when the composer appears as guest conductor. The work is being presented for the first time this month by the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Holland under the composer's direction. Another American composition listed for performance this season is "Scenes of Poverty and Toil," by Robert Sanders, of Chicago.

American premieres of at least two more works will be given here. One is a composition for string quartet and orchestra by a young Belgian composer, Marcel Poot, to be presented by the Pro Arte Quartet, of Brussels, on March 26. The other is an early symphony in C major by Bizet, a work which was found three years ago in the archives of the Paris Conservatoire; it has been heard in this country only in a radio performance.

Dr. Kindler's arrangement of the prelude and fugue from Handel's fifth Concerto Grosso will be played for the first time anywhere. The scoring of the transcription was completed during the past summer, and the piece is a worthy successor to his editions of other works for orchestra.

The third symphony of Karl Philip Emmanuel Bach and the fifth symphony of Jan Sibelius will be added to the orchestra's repertoire this season, as will "Rio Grande," a work for chorus, piano and orchestra by the contemporary English composer, Constant Lambert; Ravel's second suite from "Daphnis et Chloe," Sibelius' "Pohjola's Daughter," an arrangement of Albeniz's "Triana" Liszt's "Mephisto Waltz," Glazunov's "Overture Solenelle," Balakirev's "Islamey," Franck's "The Redemption," and several other works.

The National Symphony Orchestra's season will consist of 12 Sunday afternoon concerts and 8 mid-week evening concerts, and there will be in addition two special performances in collaboration with the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo. The new and enlarged ballet company, under the artistic direction of Leonid Miassin, made its American debut last Wednesday in the Metropolitan Opera House, and its two appearances here on November 16 and 17 will be the first following the New York engagement.

Dates for the Sunday concerts are: October 30 (Moriz Rosenthal), November 13 (Vienna Choir Boys), November 27 (Lucille Manners), December 18, January 15 (Lucille Manners), January 29 (John Powell), February 12 and 26, March 12 (Ruth Posselt), March 26 (Pro Arte Quartet), April 9 and 16.

The mid-week series is scheduled as follows: November 9 Lauritz Melchior, November 23 Myra Hess, December 14 Mischa Elman, December 28, January 11 Ernest Schelling, guest conductor; February 9 Rosa Ponselle, March 8 Walter Gieseking, April 12 Bruno Walter, guest conductor.

Season tickets for both series and single tickets for the Ballets Russes performances are on sale daily from 9:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. at the National Symphony box office in Julius Garfinckel & Co.'s store, Fourteenth and F streets. For the convenience of patrons, the Sunday series may be divided on a season basis into two series of six concerts each, running alternately.

Musical Notes

At the opening meeting of the German Literary Society last night Ethel Pyne, soprano, contributed songs by Schubert, Rubenstein, Grieg, Sinding, Wagner and Richard Strauss, playing her own accompaniments. Anthony Chanaka, pianist, played four compositions by Brahms. On November 19, the society will devote a program to compositions by Richard Strauss.

Arnold Belnick, sensational 13-year-old American violinist, who recently played the Bruck G minor concerto as soloist with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, will be heard here in a recital on Thursday afternoon, November 17, in the home of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, for the benefit of Georgetown Visitation Alumnae Association.

Beginning its eleventh season, the Gradus Junior Music Club, an affiliate of the District Federation of Music Clubs, held its October meeting last Sunday in the studio of its counselor, Virginia Bestor. Helen Burchard was elected president, Jean Hoffman vice president, Margaret Monteith secretary, and David Elliott treasurer. Plans were made for more intensive work by the club chorus under the direction of Ruth Burchard, assistant counselor. The business meeting was followed by an impromptu piano recital by several members.

Lucia Mackenzie Hendley will present Shirley Levin, 14-year-old pianist, in recital on Friday evening at 8 o'clock at 1858 Kalorama road. Miss Levin has just returned from New York where she gave a recital in the Master's School at Dobb's Ferry.

Music for the evening services in Bethesda Presbyterian Church will be provided this season by a newly organized quartet consisting of Mary Blair, Esther Marlow, Charles Pentz and Tracy Winters. This evening they will sing J. V. Roberts' "Seek Ye the Lord."

Directed by Robert Frederick Freund, the choir of Metropolitan Memorial M. E. Church will sing Dett's "Listen to the Lamb" at this morning's service. Crowninshield's "There is a Land Mine Eye Hath Seen" will be the solo number, sung by Beatrice Holland.

Sophocles Pappas announces that his students' orchestra of fretted instruments will begin weekly rehearsals tomorrow evening at 7:30 in his studio, 2000 N street northwest. The orchestra will give a concert during the Christmas season.

National City Engages Soloists

W. E. Braithwaite, choirmaster of the National City Christian Church, announces the engagement of Pauline Holcomb, dramatic soprano, and Maxwell Galloway, lyric soprano, as soloists. Mrs. Holcomb, a newcomer to Washington, has an A. B. degree from Friends University, where she majored in music. She has done graduate work in music at Chicago Musical College and at Northwestern and Columbia Universities. Miss Galloway was a popular soloist with the American University Glee Club while a student. During the past three years she has appeared in recitals and concerts, and she recently won a prize for her radio singing.

Other soloists in the choir are Henriette Bagger Plun, mezzo-contralto; E. E. Condron, tenor; and J. Horace Smithey, barytone. Hester Smithey is the organist. The choir will sing several cantatas and give one or more out-of-town concerts during the season.

Johnson Lectures To Begin Thursday

Harriet D. Johnson, of New York, artistic director of the Layman's Music Course founded by Olga Samarov-Stokovski, will begin the second season of the Washington Layman's Music Course on Thursday evening at 8:30 in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets. The fugue form will be explained and demonstrated in this lecture, the first of a fortnightly series of ten. On alternate Thursday evenings, an assistant will discuss the lecture of the preceding week.

The purpose of the series is to present certain fundamentals of music in such a way as to enchance the enjoyment of the untrained listener. Points will be illustrated at the piano, with phonograph records and lantern slides. Practice in active listening will be encouraged by rhythmic drill and ear-training. Composers will be discussed in their relation to the evolution of music, and compositions will be treated as types encountered in the exploration of music literature. Whenever possible, the works used for illustration will be taken from current programs of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Library of Congress Room to House Five Stradivari

Construction has begun on a room which will house the five Stradivari instruments presented to the Library of Congress by Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittall. In addition to her gift and the establishment of a fund to provide for the use of the instruments in concerts, Mrs. Whittall has recently donated funds for their suitable exhibition. The room, located in the northwest courtyard of the library, will be known as the Whittall Pavilion.

Recessed into one wall will be illuminated cases in which the instruments will be kept at the proper temperature and humidity by air-conditioning apparatus. The music division of the Library of Congress expects to open the Whittall Pavilion to the public before the end of the year. The structure was designed by David Lyons, architect of the Capitol, with Messrs. Pierson and Wilson, of Washington, as consultants.

Symphony Makers Retaliate By Stealing Swing Band Songs

'Turkey in the Straw' Clothed in Dignity
Killer-Dillers Reply With Hot Bach Concerto
Strauss Waltzes Decorated With Fripperies

By Jay Walz.

Either the jitterbugs and long hairs are swapping tunes like good sports, or they are making new raids on each other's music cabinets.

Anyway, its getting harder every day to tell the swing band recordings from the symphonic—the titles overlap so. There is word (although no disks have yet appeared) that a French swing trio has produced a "hot" arrangement of the first movement of Bach's Concerto in D Minor. If Bach goes swing, so can anything the die-hard music lovers hold sacred.

The borrowing, if that's what it is, hasn't been one-sided. Not long ago we reported the very symphonic treatment given "Pop Goes the Weasel" by the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, recorded by Victor (disk No. 4387). And this respectable organization has also gone on record with a dignified arrangement of "Turkey in the Straw."

But most of the trading has resulted in jam. Here are some jars from recent cannings:

"My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" (and "A Pretty Girl Milking Her Cow"), Victor 26024. Larry Clinton and his orchestra make real swing out of Saint-Saen's aria. And Bea Wain's singing, which doesn't in the least detract from the swingability of the piece, is a relief from an overdose of straight Delilah.

"Barcarolle" from the Tales of Hoffman (and "Canadian Caprice"), Victor 25887. Even this innocent little lullaby has been picked, transformed into a glamour gallop. Tommy Dorsey's orchestra keeps everything in good taste. But remember it's swing—not Wayne King.

"In the Hall of the Mountain (and "Jockey on the Carousel"), Burnswick 8020. This piece was full of dynamite as Grieg wrote it for for the concert hall. But Joe Usifer's orchestra has added a few explosives of their own for the cats.

"Caprice Viennois" (and "Blue Danube Waltz"), Burnswick 6475. These are the Kreisler and Strauss favorites. But excuse, please, for bringing them up as swing—Wayne King's orchestra.

"My Reverie" (and "Boogie Woogie Blues"), Victor 26006. Larry Clinton's men are loud and not so funny with the shadow and velvety substance of a Debussy piece the pianistic great are wont to play with their mittens on. Glenn Miller, the Dixieland trombonist, and his orchestra make it the means for a hot debut on Bluebird Record, B-7853.

"St. Louis Blues" (and "L'Amour, Toujours, L'Amour"), Victor 25895. Who hasn't given us an interpretation of this ever-loved ballad? So who would be left to add a new touch, but Maxine Sullivan, who did the strange things with the Scotch songs? She puts it over nicely with the efficient help of Claude Thornhill. But wait a minute—wasn't this classic born and raised on the swing side of the tracks?

In addition to being good swing, some of thes rate as first-class burlesque. And don't some of the classical airs deserve it! It's disappointing, though, the way so many swing bands are content to bag a good tune, add a lot of drums and call it a killing—the term, I believe, is killer-diller. I know one swing arrangement that didn't stop with this, and while it's old it is still one of my favorites—"The Wren"—sung by Josephine Tumminia and played by Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra, Decca 29009B. Ya, I know—it's not swing, and it's not a killer-diller.

Mordkin Ballet To Perform Here

Two performances by the new Mordkin Ballet will be given in the Rialto Theater on December 6 and 7, under the local management of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau. Headed by Mikhail Mordkin, the company of 60 includes Patricia Bowman, who began her dancing career in Washington; Lucia Chase, Nina Stroganova, Leon Varkas and Dmitri Romanov.

Two new works, "Trepak," with music by the younger Cherepnin, and "Voices of Spring," with music by Johann Strauss, will be included in the performances here. Other ballets in the Mordkin schedule are "Giselle," "The Goldfish," "La Fille Mal Gardee," 'Dionysus" and 'Swan Lake."

Violinist and Pianist Will Play Wednesday

Under the auspices of the D. C. Federation of Music Clubs, Irving Lean, violinist, and Elena Crivella, pianist, will give a recital on Wednesday evening at 8:15 in Roosevelt High School auditorium. Mr. Lean is a member of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Miss Crivella is a counselor of the Federation of Music Clubs. The work of both young musicians is well known here through public appearance.

The following program is announced: Concerto in C major (Vivaldi-Kreisler), Concerto in E minor (Mendelssohn), Waltz in C sharp minor (Chopin), Fantasie-Impromptu in C sharp minor (Chopin), "Danza Ritual del Fuego" (De Falla), Concerto in D major (Paganini-Kreisler).

Soprano, Violinist Recital Tomorrow

Carolyn Nordica-Bost, mezzo-soprano, a cousin of the late Lillian Nordica, will give a song recital tomorrow evening at 8:15 in the ballroom of Henderson Castle, assisted by Cecelia Mary Mahoney, violinist. The accompanists will be Malton Boyce and Marjorie Davis.

The vocal numbers are announced as follows: "Ah, rendimi" (Rossi), "Furibondo spira il vento" (Handel), "Hexenlied" (Mendelssohn), "Die junge Nonne" (Schubert), "Waldeinsamkeit" (H a i l e), "Erist's" (Wolf), "Nobles Seigneurs, Salut" (Meyerbeer), "The Soldier's Wife" (Rakhmaninov), "The Little Shepherd's Song" (Watts), "Do Not Go, My Love" (Hageman), "To the Birds" (Hue), "Minor and Major" (Spross), "Awake, Beloved" (Edwards), "Home" (MacFayden), "My Johann" (Grieg).

The selections for violin and piano are Heifetz transcription of Debussy "Prelude a L'Apres-midi d'un Faune" Valdez' "Serenade du Tsigane."

3 Organ Recitals Planned in Week

Three organ recitals will be given this week at 8 p. m. in the L. D. S. Washington Chapel, Sixteenth street and Columbia road. Tomorrow's program includes Bach's "St. Ann's Fugue," a toccata from Mulet's "Byzantine Sketches," a movement from Widor's fourth symphony, and three Chopin preludes transcribed by D. Sterling Wheelwright, organist at the chapel.

On Wednesday will be heard Philip James' tribute to Cesar Franck, "Meditation in St. Clotilde," and composition by Schumann, Handel, Mozart, Guilmant and Dawes. At Friday's recital Mrs. Edna C. Wheelwright, soprano, will sing Katherine Manning's "Sketches of Paris," and Mr. Wheelwright will play requested pieces by Bonnet, Thompson, Clerambault, Wagner, Nevin and Kinder. The recitals are open to the public without charge.

Belasco Opera To Open Oct. 31

A week of standard grand opera will open in the Belasco Theater on Monday evening, October 31, with the performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" by the newly-formed National Opera Co., a merger of the Columbia Opera Co., which visited Washington a year ago, and the Chicago Opera Co., which was heard here last spring. J. Franklin Viola, manager, and Armand Bagarozy, general director, aim to present grand opera at popular prices, and to encourage American talent by recruiting their singers from the young artists.

The repertoire for the week includes "Carmen," "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," "La Traviata," "Faust," "Martha," M a d a m a Butterfly," "Rigoletto" and "Aida." Tickets are on sale at the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau, 910 G street.

Y. W. C. A. to Resume Sunday Music Today

Resuming the Sunday Music Hours at 5 o'clock this afternoon, the Young Women's Christian Association, Seventeenth and K streets, presents Elena de Sayn, violinist, assisted by Mrs. J. Wendell Coombs, Mary Alice Ferguson and Elizabeth McLaughlin, violinists; Banjamin Ratner and Ruth Ferguson, pianists. These weekly events are open to both men and women, and the public is invited.

Miss De Sayn and Mrs. Coombs will play the Bach concerto for two violins, and Mrs. Coombs will be heard in the second and third movements of De Beriot's seventh concerto. Mary Alice Ferguson, aged 12, will play the first movements of Mozart's D major concerto, and Elizabeth McLaughlin, aged 7, will play a sonatina in G major by Hauptmann.

Rakhmaninov To Be Soloist

Sergei Rakhmaninov, distinguished Russian composer and pianist, will play his own concerto No. 1 in F sharp minor when he appears as soloist at the first Washington concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra on Tuesday evening, October 25, in Constitution Hall. The program also promises Rakhmaninov's third symphony and Beethoven's "Leonore" overture No. 3. Eugene Ormandy will conduct.

The second concert on November 29 will consist of excerpts from Wagner's "Der Ring des Nibelungen." Kirsten Flagstad will be the soloist at the third concert on January 31. George Enescu will conduct and appear as violin soloist on February 28.

It is now an assured fact that Leopold Stokowski will conduct the final concert of the Philadelphians' season here on March 21. Word has been received that he has recently signed a contract to conduct a limited number of concerts including the one scheduled for this city. The Philadelphia Orchestra appears here under the local management of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau, 910 G street.

Lhevinnes Plan Duo Recital

One week from today the season's musical activities in Constitution Hall will begin with a duo-piano recital by Josef and Rosina Lhevinne, the first of 17 attractions to be offered by Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey. Both these artists were prize-winning graduates of the Moskva Conservatory. At the age of 17 Josef won the coveted Rubinstein prize in competition with 35 students. Five years later Rosina duplicated his record by graduating at the same age and winning the same award. Nine days after Rosina's graduation, the two young artists were married, and their careers have been merged for two score years.

The program to be played by the Lhevinnes on October 23, including both solo and duet numbers, is announced as follows: Two Chorale-Preludes, "In Thee Is Joy" and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" (Bach), Sonata in D major (Mozart), Impromptu in F sharp minor, Mazurek in in C sharp minor, Op. 50, No. 3; Scherzo in C sharp minor (Chopin), "Valse Oubliee" in F sharp major, "Gnomenreigen," "La Campanella" (Liszt), Impromptu (Reinecke), "Prelude a l'Apres-midi d'un Faune," "Fetes" (Debussy), "Arabesques on The Beautiful Blue Danube Waltz" (Schultz-Evler, arranged by Abram Chasins

Season's First Offering Written by Elmer Rice Opens at Rialto

The Washington Civic Theater has provided Elmer Rice's "Judgment Day," the opening play of its third season, with a cast which includes many of its most popular players. "Judgment Day" is a dramatization of a purge trial in a dictator country of middle Europe. The role of Lydia Kuman, who is accused of conspiring to assassinate the dictator and who is on trial for her life, has been given to Eileen Fowler.

Norman Rose, well remembered for his performance of the psychiatrist in last year's "Johnny Johnson," will play Dr. Bathory, the prosecuting attorney while Arthur Westover will be seen as George Kitov, who is also accused of the conspiracy.

Murray Sheehan, who was last seen as Little Man in the Civic Theater's memorable production of "...one third of a nation...," plays Count Slatarski, who refuses to conform to the government's dictation. Harry Estcott and Arthur Isler, both well known to Civic audiences, play Judge Murusi and Judge Vlora, while Joseph Cochran and Kenneth Banghart will be seen as the other two judges.

Paul Walter will play General Rakovski, the Minister of Culture and Englightenment, who is the spokesman for the dictator and who is not only called upon to testify, but who is also accused by the defendants of having himself planned the attempted assassination in order falsely to accuse his political enemies.

Much of the comedy and also much of the excitement of "Judgment Day" is provided by the various witnesses who are called upon to testify. First is Hugh Smythe as Mr. Parvan, the personal secretary of the dictator and an eye-witness of the supposed crime. He is followed by a waiter in a cafe who testifies that he saw the conspirators together, and he also relates some of the more personal events of his own private life. This part, one packed full of laughs, falls to Joe Bourne.

The entire action of the play takes place in the courtroom, William M. Girvan will, as usual, design the sets. Rehearsals have been in progress for a number of weeks, and the play will open October 26 at the Rialto Theater great composer whose life was packed with drama as Gary Cooper's for the role of the father of his country. If Mr. Capra can, he will bring that about, also.

Underlying all this extensive, if tentative, planning is that constant urge to stay down to earth and represent people on the screen as people are in life. Realizing this from his own conversations on the topic, it is not difficult to perceive why Capra nurtures strong enthusiasms for "Lady for a Day," as his favorite of all the pictures he has made, and looks upon "Lost Horizon" as something big and imaginative that "didn't quite come off."

There is only one Frank Capra. In his nature there is to be found no trace of pretense or subterfuge. He is not even a faint carbon copy of anybody else, in or out of his profession. That alone is ample cause for rejoicing—and his modest salary of $400,000 a year, or thereabouts, less taxes.

Popular Story In Play Form Children's First

"The Five Little Peppers," which comes to Washington as the first play of the curernt season of the Children's Theatre of New York, was written by Margaret Sidney fifty-seven years ago at "The Wayside," the historic old Concord, Mass., home, which she bought from Nathaniel Hawthorne's son, Julian, in 1883. Nathaniel Hawthorne had bought the house from Bronson Alcott in 1852. It is rich in literary atmosphere.

In addition to the many works Hawthorne wrote there, Mrs. Sidney lived in it for forty years and wrote innumerable stories about the Pepper family. On its little winding stair Louisa Alcott and her sister played "Pilgrim's Progress," as she later described in "Little Women."

And here Margaret Lothrop, Margaret Sidney's daughter, still lives. Under her direction it is now open to the public—not as a museum—but as a home little changed from the days when Emerson, Thoreau and others sought its hospitality. It is one of New England's oldest and most interesting houses.

From the American scene, the Children's Theatre's next play will carry its audience to France, the local for "Nobody's Boy," Hector Malot's celebrated story, which comes to the National Theater as the next production in the series of six on Saturday morning, November 19.

pictures. He also gives her a penny every day. From the look on her face, you'd think it was a $100 bill.

She has a stamp collection. Henry Koster gave her an album and her first stamps. She has five bracelets, well filled with charms, and gets new bangles after each picture. I suggested that after her sixteenth birthday she should begin gathering diamond ones. She laughed and said: "That's an idea—but it wouldn't have occurred to me. Do you really think I'm a diamond girl? I don't mind your suggesting it, but I'm afraid we'll have to wait a long time before anything happens."

She never tries to beg off work. When she says she's tired, they let her go home immediately—they know she's speaking the truth.

Deanna doesn't diet and polished off luncheon with a piece of chocolate cake and glass of milk. She always visits the other sets when not working. Never pushes herself forward. She is never satisfied—keeps wishing she'd done her scene better and must have a reason explained to her for everything. Believe me, a quizzly actress or actor is at a terrific disadvantage playing opposite Deanna. She's so real they squirm by comparison.

She's reserved. You know better than to ask her about love. That's sacred and shouldn't be mentioned, and mind you, she's just ready to bloom into womanhood.

'Bozo' at Gayety

"Bozo" Snyder, and his own show of talented burlesque and vaudeville artists, will make their season's bow at the Gayety Theater, starting with regular matinee today.

"Bozo's" supporting company is a good one. It includes Valerie Parks, one of the brightest and most glamorous luminaries in the disrobing firmament; Tommy Raft, eccentric comedian and mad musician; Edith Walton, chanter of the bluest of blues songs; Lou Browne, vigorous master of ceremonies, fine "feeder" for the comedians; Margie Bartel and Ruth Donald, pretty young display artist; Jack O'Malley, skillful character man, and Harry Seymour, Dutch dialect comic of "Hot-Dog" fame. There is, also, a bevy of well trained chorus beauties.

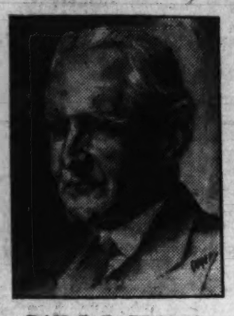
Swing Music Receives Academic Recognition

Cited by Macmillan Encyclopedia
New Reference Work Comprehensive
Lists 1,220 American Composers

By Ray C. B. Brown.

At long last it has happened! Swing music, frowned upon by the pedants and cheered by the people, conqueror of a popularity unprecedented since the vogue of the waltz, has finally been accorded the accolade of academic recognition. It is true that signs have not been wanting that such an event would come to pass. Four years ago Hugues Panassie published "Le Jazz Hot," the first serious study of swing, and this was followed by Sonia Armstrong's "Swing That Music." But up to the present one sought in vain for any mention of swing in reference books, which always lag a little behind the times. Now comes the Macmillan Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians to remedy the omission, although the editor, Albert E. Wier, seems somewhat dubious and almost unhappy about the whole thing. He writes thus:



RAY C. B. BROWN.

"Swing, a term applied to a certain jazz type of music, so elastic and vague in meaning that no one has been able to procure even from swing experts—dance orchestra leaders, players or composers—any precise statement as to exactly what the expression means or the kind of jazz to which it specifically applies. Some experts claim that swing is improvisation; to controvert this statement it is only necessary to draw attention to the fact that such improvisation is permitted only in scores specially arranged above a specified rhythmic and harmonic skeleton. Only late at night, when frequenters of night clubs and restaurants have mellowed to the point where 'anything can happen' without disturbing their equilibrium through the aural sense, are players permitted to exercise their talents in absolutely unsupervised swing, known in the Harlem vernacular as 'screw-ball,' 'gut-bucket,' 'whackey' and "barrelhouse;' the utmost in individual expression.

"Robert McBride, a modern composer who has introduced swing in the symphonic concert hall, states, 'a musician cannot define it without doing it; it must be heard, not read about.' Benny Goodman, who can perform in the swing style or play classical quintet parts on his clarinet, remarks that 'swing is probably rhythmic integration,' a statement that probably requires elucidation for the jazz expert as well as the 'classical' musician. Sonia Armstrong remarks that 'any average player can play through a score, but it takes a good swing player, and a real good one, to be able to leave that score, and to know, or to feel, just when to leave it and when to get back in it.'

"In 1938 Benny Goodman gave a concert in Carnegie Hall, New York, to an audience which filled the auditorium, designed to 'prove' swing, but the music critics who attended, and they were many, failed to find anything in the new form of jazz which would finally succeed in revolutionizing the art of music. The majority expressed a vehement preference for the Whiteman brand of jazz, one even going so far as to say that the proceedings as a whole were a bore." Mr. Wier then appends a short glossary of what he calls the "curious expressions" brought into the language by swing: alligator, barrelhouse, boogie-woogie, canary, cat, clambake, getoffman, growl, hidebeater, jam, jitterbug, licks, push box, scratch box, chirp box, agony pipe, licorice stick and fog horn.

When Mr. Wier found that swing experts could not give him precise descriptions of the technique, he might have consulted Virgil Thomson, who contributed this definition more than two years ago: "Swing music is a form of two-step in which the rhythm is expressed quantitatively by instruments of no fixed intonation, the melodic, harmonic and purely percussive elements being freed thereby to improvise in free polyphonic style." Another time I shall go more fully into the question of swing and its fascination for "serious" musicians as well as for jitterbugs, but I wish now merely to point out that the inclusion of swing in the new Macmillan encyclopedia is characteristic of its up-to-date timeliness.

This is just the kind of reference book that the average music lover will want to consult when in a hurry for concise information. It is a hefty tome of 2,089 pages, which the publishers say contain more than 2,000,000 words covering 31,000 references to persons, compositions, musical terms, instruments, organizations, and other pertinent data. I have not checked these figures, being willing to take them on trust in lieu of spending weeks in verification, but I have tested this book's resources and seldom found them wanting.

Albert E. Wier, the compiler and editor, is an American violinist whose music studies, both practical and theoretical, were pursued at the New England Conservatory with Benjamin Cutter, Emil Mahr and George W. Chadwick, and at Harvard University with John Knowles Paine and Walter Spaulding. Since 1900 he has been editor for New York publishing houses, and the enumeration of the works he has edited would fill a paragraph. With a background of specialized knowledge and experience, he speaks with authority in his field.

It has been his evident aim to compile an encyclopedia which will be a time saver, and he has unquestionably done that very thing. Every item is stripped of nonessentials. The synopses of operas, for example, are unadorned by adjectives and relate the stories with a minimum of words. In the matter of compression he is an adept, and his chronological history of music, reduced to 18 pages, is an excellent bird's-eye survey. His article on modern harmony is recommended to the puzzled layman, for the subject is treated lucidly and with as few technicalities as possible.

"How is the average concert-goer or radio listener to understand," he asks, "that the tonal masses crashing about his ears are substitutes for more pleasant sounds, and that they are derived from this or that chord in conventional harmony? Busoni voiced the opinion that the higher music of his day was intended for the musical elite, and that public performances of great art should be restricted rather than multiplied. The evidence shows that this thought may have been justified unless there occurs an about-face before music enters the realms of the most abstruse sciences."

While the book is comprehensively international, more consideration has been given to native music and musicians than in any previous one-volume work. There are, for instance, 1,220 American composers mentioned, and the list of American operas is the most complete that I have seen.

In his preface, the editor asks for indulgence for any possible errors, and requests the co-operation of readers in correcting them in future editions. It is inevitable that the industry of one man in this laborious task would entail an occasional lapse in vigilance. I have found a few errors which have slipped in, but the marvel is that they are so few.

Rakhmaninov To Be Soloist

Sergei Rakhmaninov, distinguished Russian composer and pianist, will play his own concerto No. 1 in F sharp minor when he appears as soloist at the first Washington concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra on Tuesday evening, October 25, in Constitution Hall. The program also promises Rakhmaninov's third symphony and Beethoven's "Leonore" overture No. 3. Eugene Ormandy will conduct.

The second concert on November 29 will consist of excerpts from Wagner's "Der Ring des Nibelungen." Kirsten Flagstad will be the soloist at the third concert on January 31. George Enescu will conduct and appear as violin soloist on February 28.

It is now an assured fact that Leopold Stokowski will conduct the final concert of the Philadelphians' season here on March 21. Word has been received that he has recently signed a contract to conduct a limited number of concerts including the one scheduled for this city. The Philadelphia Orchestra appears here under the local management of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau, 910 G street.

Lhevinnes Plan Duo Recital

One week from today the season's musical activities in Constitution Hall will begin with a duo-piano recital by Josef and Rosina Lhevinne, the first of 17 attractions to be offered by Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey. Both these artists were prize-winning graduates of the Moskva Conservatory. At the age of 17 Josef won the coveted Rubinstein prize in competition with 35 students. Five years later Rosina duplicated his record by graduating at the same age and winning the same award. Nine days after Rosina's graduation, the two young artists were married, and their careers have been merged for two score years.

The program to be played by the Lhevinnes on October 23, including both solo and duet numbers, is announced as follows: Two Chorale-Preludes, "In Thee Is Joy" and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" (Bach), Sonata in D major (Mozart), Impromptu in F sharp minor, Mazurek in in C sharp minor, Op. 50, No. 3; Scherzo in C sharp minor (Chopin), "Valse Oubliee" in F sharp major, "Gnomenreigen," "La Campanella" (Liszt), Impromotu (Reinecke), "Prelude a l'Apres-midi d'un Faune," "Fetes" (Debussy), "Arabesques on The Beautiful Blue Danube Waltz" (Schultz-Evler, arranged by Abram Chasins

Compositions Will Be Given Premiere Here
Season Begins October 30 With Rosenthal Soloist
To Give Kindler Arrangement of Handel Concerto

First performances of three new works by American composers have been obtained by Hans Kindler for the eighth season of the National Symphony Orchestra, which will begin on Sunday afternoon, October 30, in Constitution Hall with Moriz Rosenthal, the veteran pianist, as soloist in Liszt's E flat major concerto. In addition to these premieres, Dr. Kindler plans the first American performances of three works and the presentation of a number of unfamiliar compositions for the first time in Washington.

The three premieres are a new symphony by Roy Harris, a piano concerto by Paul Nordhoff and a suite of "Miniatures" by Isidore Freed. Of these the most important is the Harris symphony, for this 40-year-old musician has during the past decade advanced to the front rank of American composers. His "Symphony 1933" was given its premiere by the Boston Orchestra under Kusevitzki, and the same organization presented his piano concerto for the first time. His recent choral works, "A Song for Occupations" and "Symphony for Voices" were introduced to the public by the Westminster Choir.

To Play Schelling's Work

Ernest Schelling's "Suite Variee" will be given its American premiere on January 11, when the composer appears as guest conductor. The work is being presented for the first time this month by the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Holland under the composer's direction. Another American composition listed for performance this season is "Scenes of Poverty and Toil," by Robert Sanders, of Chicago.

American premieres of at least two more works will be given here. One is a composition for string quartet and orchestra by a young Belgian composer, Marcel Poot, to be presented by the Pro Arte Quartet, of Brussels, on March 26. The other is an early symphony in C major by Bizet, a work which was found three years ago in the archives of the Paris Conservatoire; it has been heard in this country only in a radio performance.

Dr. Kindler's arrangement of the prelude and fugue from Handel's fifth Concerto Grosso will be played for the first time anywhere. The scoring of the transcription was completed during the past summer, and the piece is a worthy successor to his editions of other works for orchestra.

The third symphony of Karl Philip Emmanuel Bach and the fifth symphony of Jan Sibelius will be added to the orchestra's repertoire this season, as will "Rio Grande," a work for chorus, piano and orchestra by the contemporary English composer, Constant Lambert; Ravel's second suite from "Daphnis et Chloe," Sibelius' "Pohjola's Daughter," an arrangement of Albeniz's "Triana" Liszt's "Mephisto Waltz," Glazunov's "Overture Solenelle," Balakirev's "Islamey," Franck's "The Redemption," and several other works.

The National Symphony Orchestra's season will consist of 12 Sunday afternoon concerts and 8 mid-week evening concerts, and there will be in addition two special performances in collaboration with the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo. The new and enlarged ballet company, under the artistic direction of Leonid Miassin, made its American debut last Wednesday in the Metropolitan Opera House, and its two appearances here on November 16 and 17 will be the first following the New York engagement.

Dates for the Sunday concerts are: October 30 (Moriz Rosenthal), November 13 (Vienna Choir Boys), November 27 (Lucille Manners), December 18, January 15 (Lucille Manners), January 29 (John Powell), February 12 and 26, March 12 (Ruth Posselt), March 26 (Pro Arte Quartet), April 9 and 16.

The mid-week series is scheduled as follows: November 9 Lauritz Melchior, November 23 Myra Hess, December 14 Mischa Elman, December 28, January 11 Ernest Schelling, guest conductor; February 9 Rosa Ponselle, March 8 Walter Gieseking, April 12 Bruno Walter, guest conductor.

Season tickets for both series and single tickets for the Ballets Russes performances are on sale daily from 9:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. at the National Symphony box office in Julius Garfinckel & Co.'s store, Fourteenth and F streets. For the convenience of patrons, the Sunday series may be divided on a season basis into two series of six concerts each, running alternately.

Musical Notes

At the opening meeting of the German Literary Society last night Ethel Pyne, soprano, contributed songs by Schubert, Rubenstein, Grieg, Sinding, Wagner and Richard Strauss, playing her own accompaniments. Anthony Chanaka, pianist, played four compositions by Brahms. On November 19, the society will devote a program to compositions by Richard Strauss.

Arnold Belnick, sensational 13-year-old American violinist, who recently played the Bruck G minor concerto as soloist with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, will be heard here in a recital on Thursday afternoon, November 17, in the home of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, for the benefit of Georgetown Visitation Alumnae Association.

Beginning its eleventh season, the Gradus Junior Music Club, an affiliate of the District Federation of Music Clubs, held its October meeting last Sunday in the studio of its counselor, Virginia Bestor. Helen Burchard was elected president, Jean Hoffman vice president, Margaret Monteith secretary, and David Elliott treasurer. Plans were made for more intensive work by the club chorus under the direction of Ruth Burchard, assistant counselor. The business meeting was followed by an impromptu piano recital by several members.

Lucia Mackenzie Hendley will present Shirley Levin, 14-year-old pianist, in recital on Friday evening at 8 o'clock at 1858 Kalorama road. Miss Levin has just returned from New York where she gave a recital in the Master's School at Dobb's Ferry.

Music for the evening services in Bethesda Presbyterian Church will be provided this season by a newly organized quartet consisting of Mary Blair, Esther Marlow, Charles Pentz and Tracy Winters. This evening they will sing J. V. Roberts' "Seek Ye the Lord."

Directed by Robert Frederick Freund, the choir of Metropolitan Memorial M. E. Church will sing Dett's "Listen to the Lamb" at this morning's service. Crowninshield's "There is a Land Mine Eye Hath Seen" will be the solo number, sung by Beatrice Holland.

Sophocles Pappas announces that his students' orchestra of fretted instruments will begin weekly rehearsals tomorrow evening at 7:30 in his studio, 2000 N street northwest. The orchestra will give a concert during the Christmas season.

National City Engages Soloists

W. E. Braithwaite, choirmaster of the National City Christian Church, announces the engagement of Pauline Holcomb, dramatic soprano, and Maxwell Galloway, lyric soprano, as soloists. Mrs. Holcomb, a newcomer to Washington, has an A. B. degree from Friends University, where she majored in music. She has done graduate work in music at Chicago Musical College and at Northwestern and Columbia Universities. Miss Galloway was a popular soloist with the American University Glee Club while a student. During the past three years she has appeared in recitals and concerts, and she recently won a prize for her radio singing.

Other soloists in the choir are Henriette Bagger Plun, mezzo-contralto; E. E. Condron, tenor; and J. Horace Smithey, barytone. Hester Smithey is the organist. The choir will sing several cantatas and give one or more out of-town concerts during the season.

Johnson Lectures To Begin Thursday

Harriet D. Johnson, of New York, artistic director of the Layman's Music Course founded by Olga Samarov-Stokovski, will begin the second season of the Washington Layman's Music Course on Thursday evening at 8:30 in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets. The fugue form will be explained and demonstrated in this lecture, the first of a fortnightly series of ten. On alternate Thursday evenings, an assistant will discuss the lecture of the preceding week.

The purpose of the series is to present certain fundamentals of music in such a way as to enchance the enjoyment of the untrained listener. Points will be illustrated at the piano, with phonograph records and lantern slides. Practice in active listening will be encouraged by rhythmic drill and ear-training. Composers will be discussed in their relation to the evolution of music, and compositions will be treated as types encountered in the exploration of music literature. Whenever possible, the works used for illustration will be taken from current programs of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Library of Congress Room to House Five Stradivari

Construction has begun on a room which will house the five Stradivari instruments presented to the Library of Congress by Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittall. In addition to her gift and the establishment of a fund to provide for the use of the instruments in concerts, Mrs. Whittall has recently donated funds for their suitable exhibition. The room, located in the northwest courtyard of the library, will be known as the Whittall Pavilion.

Recessed into one wall will be illuminated cases in which the instruments will be kept at the proper temperature and humidity by air-conditioning apparatus. The music division of the Library of Congress expects to open the Whittall Pavilion to the public before the end of the year. The structure was designed by David Lyons, architect of the Capitol, with Messrs. Pierson and Wilson, of Washington, as consultants.

Strauss Waltzes Decorated With Fripperies

By Jay Walz.

Either the jitterbugs and long hairs are swapping tunes like good sports, or they are making new raids on each other's music cabinets.

Anyway, its getting harder every day to tell the swing band recordings from the symphonic—the titles overlap so. There is word (although no disks have yet appeared) that a French swing trio has produced a "hot" arrangement of the first movement of Bach's Concerto in D Minor. If Bach goes swing, so can anything the die-hard music lovers hold sacred.

The borrowing, if that's what it is, hasn't been one-sided. Not long ago we reported the very symphonic treatment given "Pop Goes the Weasel" by the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, recorded by Victor (disk No. 4387). And this respectable organization has also gone on record with a dignified arrangement of "Turkey in the Straw."

But most of the trading has resulted in jam. Here are some jars from recent cannings:

"My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" (and "A Pretty Girl Milking Her Cow"), Victor 26024. Larry Clinton and his orchestra make real swing out of Saint-Saen's aria. And Bea Wain's singing, which doesn't in the least detract from the swing-ability of the piece, is a relief from an overdose of straight Delilah.

"Barcarolle" from the Tales of Hoffman (and "Canadian Caprice"), Victor 25887. Even this innocent little lullaby has been picked, transformed into a glamour gallop. Tommy Dorsey's orchestra keeps everything in good taste. But remember it's swing—not Wayne King.

"In the Hall of the Mountain (and "Jockey on the Carousel"), Burnswick 8020. This piece was full of dynamite as Grieg wrote it for for the concert hall. But Joe Usifer's orchestra has added a few explosives of their own for the cats.

"Caprice Viennois" (and "Blue Danube Waltz"), Burnswick 6475. These are the Kreisler and Strauss favorites. But excuse, please, for bringing them up as swing—Wayne King's orchestra.

"My Reverie" (and "Boogie Woogie Blues"), Victor 26006. Larry Clinton's men are loud and not so funny with the shadow and velvety substance of a Debussy piece the pianistic great are wont to play with their mittens on. Glenn Miller, the Dixieland trombonist, and his orchestra make it the means for a hot debut on Bluebird Record, B-7853.

"St. Louis Blues" (and "L'Amour, Toujours, L'Amour"), Victor 25895. Who hasn't given us an interpretation of this ever-loved ballad? So who would be left to add a new touch, but Maxine Sullivan, who did the strange things with the Scotch songs? She puts it over nicely with the efficient help of Claude Thornhill. But wait a minute—wasn't this classic born and raised on the swing side of the tracks?

In addition to being good swing, some of thes rate as first-class burlesque. And don't some of the classical airs deserve it! It's disappointing, though, the way so many swing bands are content to bag a good tune, add a lot of drums and call it a killing—the term, I believe, is killer-diller. I know one swing arrangement that didn't stop with this, and while it's old it is still one of my favorites—"The Wren"—sung by Josephine Tumminia and played by Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra, Decca 29009B. Ya, I know—it's not swing, and it's not a killer-diller.

Mordkin Ballet To Perform Here

Two performances by the new Mordkin Ballet will be given in the Rialto Theater on December 6 and 7, under the local management of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau. Headed by Mikhail Mordkin, the company of 60 includes Patricia Bowman, who began her dancing career in Washington; Lucia Chase, Nina Stroganova, Leon Varkas and Dmitri Romanov.

Two new works, "Trepak," with music by the younger Cherepnin, and "Voices of Spring," with music by Johann Strauss, will be included in the performances here. Other ballets in the Mordkin schedule are "Giselle," "The Goldfish," "La Fille Mal Gardee," "Dionysus" and "Swan Lake."

Violinist and Pianist Will Play Wednesday

Under the auspices of the D. C. Federation of Music Clubs, Irving Lean, violinist, and Elena Crivella, pianist, will give a recital on Wednesday evening at 8:15 in Roosevelt High School auditorium. Mr. Lean is a member of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Miss Crivella is a counselor of the Federation of Music Clubs. The work of both young musicians is well known here through public appearance.

The following program is announced: Concerto in C major (Vivaldi-Kreisler), Concerto in E minor (Mendelssohn), Waltz in C sharp minor (Chopin), Fantasie-Impromptu in C sharp minor (Chopin), "Danza Ritual del Fuego" (De Falla), Concerto in D major (Paganini-Kreisler).

Soprano, Violinist Recital Tomorrow

Carolyn Nordica-Bost, mezzo-soprano, a cousin of the late Lillian Nordica, will give a song recital tomorrow evening at 8:15 in the ballroom of Henderson Castle, assisted by Cecelia Mary Mahoney, violinist. The accompanists will be Malton Boyce and Marjorie Davis.

The vocal numbers are announced as follows: "Ah, rendimi" (Rossi), "Furibondo spira il vento" (Handel), "Hexenlied" (Mendelssohn), "Die junge Nonne" (Schubert), "Waldeinsamkeit" (Haile), "Erist's" (Wolf), "Nobles Seigneurs, Salut" (Meyerbeer), "The Soldier's Wife" (Rakhmaninov), "The Little Shepherd's Song" (Watts), "Do Not Go, My Love" (Hageman), "To the Birds" (Hue), "Minor and Major" (Spross), "Awake, Beloved" (Edwards), "Home" (MacFayden), "My Johann" (Grieg).

The selections for violin and piano are Heifetz transcription of Debussy "Prelude a L'Apres-midi d'un Faune" Valdez' "Serenade du Tsigane."

3 Organ Recitals Planned in Week

Three organ recitals will be given this week at 8 p. m. in the L. D. S. Washington Chapel, Sixteenth street and Columbia road. Tomorrow's program includes Bach's "St. Ann's Fugue," a toccata from Mulet's "Byzantine Sketches," a movement from Widor's fourth symphony, and three Chopin preludes transcribed by D. Sterling Wheelwright, organist at the chapel.

On Wednesday will be heard Philip James' tribute to Cesar Franck, "Meditation in St. Clotilde," and composition by Schumann, Handel, Mozart, Guilmant and Dawes. At Friday's recital Mrs. Edna C. Wheelwright, soprano, will sing Katherine Manning's "Sketches of Paris," and Mr. Wheelwright will play requested pieces by Bonnet, Thompson, Clerambault, Wagner, Nevin and Kinder. The recitals are open to the public without charge.

Belasco Opera To Open Oct. 31

A week of standard grand opera will open in the Belasco Theater on Monday evening, October 31, with the performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" by the newly-formed National Opera Co., a merger of the Columbia Opera Co., which visited Washington a year ago, and the Chicago Opera Co., which was heard here last spring. J. Franklin Viola, manager, and Armand Bagarozy, general director, aim to present grand opera at popular prices, and to encourage American talent by recruiting their singers from the young artists.

The repertoire for the week includes "Carmen," "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," "La Traviata," "Faust," "Martha," Madama Butterfly," "Rigoletto" and "Aida." Tickets are on sale at the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau, 910 G street.

Y. W. C. A. to Resume Sunday Music Today

Resuming the Sunday Music Hours at 5 o'clock this afternoon, the Young Women's Christian Association, Seventeenth and K streets, presents Elena de Sayn, violinist, assisted by Mrs. J. Wendell Coombs, Mary Alice Ferguson and Elizabeth McLaughlin, violinists; Banjamin Ratner and Ruth Ferguson, pianists. These weekly events are open to both men and women, and the public is invited.

Miss De Sayn and Mrs. Coombs will play the Bach concerto for two violins, and Mrs. Coombs will be heard in the second and third movements of De Beriot's seventh concerto. Mary Alice Ferguson, aged 12, will play the first movements of Mozart's D major concerto, and Elizabeth McLaughlin, aged 7, will play a sonatina in G major by Hauptmann.

A few days ago the 1938 Carnegie International Exhibition opened to the public in Pittsburgh. For more than 40 years the exhibition has tried to carry out the will of the founder, Andrew Carnegie, who hoped through the annual showing of a large international group of paintings from many countries to promote understanding, peace and good will among the nations. Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts of the Carnegie Institution has, for many years, been in charge of selections, and has acted as chairman of the jury of awards. The purpose of Saint-Gaudens was to present, year by year, a cross-section of contemporary art as he found it, both here and abroad. Naturally the choices were bound to reflect the tastes and even prejudices of the director, and there have been many who approved neither the method nor the selections. Yet the Carnegie International has served an extremely useful function in more than one respect. Most important of all, it provides the American public with a view of the work of foreign artists, and gives it a chance to follow the trends of art in other countries. Then, too, though the "cross-section" may not be altogether adequate or all-inclusive, it does provide a numerous showing which contains most of the elements of modern art.

This year's prizes are in some respects more even than last year's awards, and will probably find more popular appeal than the selections of former years. Six of the eight awards went to Europeans and two to American artists. The first prize, an award of $1,000, went to Karl Hofer, the German artist, for his strongly painted "The Wind." The selection of Mr. Hofer's imaginative canvas will be far more warmly welcomed than the abstraction of Georges Braque, which won a Carnegie "first" last year, and probably still more than Leon Kroll's landscape with figures which received the prize the year before.

Frenchman Second

Second prize went to Maurice de Vlaminck, of France, for a landscape of a bleak countryside under a lowering sky, entitled "Winter." Arnold Blanch, of Woodstock, N. Y., won third prize for a group composition, "People." First honorable mention was given to Albert Marquet, of France, for a brilliant Paris night scene, entitled "Le Pont Neuf." Maurice Utrillo, French artist, received second honorable mention for a characteristic "street portrait," which he calls "Consulat d'Auvergne, rue Norvins." Third honorable mention was awarded to the American artist, Rockwell Kent, for his dark-keyed "Storm Clouds, Greenland." Edmond Ceria, of France, was the recipient of the fourth honorable mention for his competent still life, "Game."

The Allegheny CountyGarden Club prize of $300, awarded to the best painting of a garden or flowers in the show, went to Roger Chapelain-Midy, young Paris artist, for his distinguished "Bouquet at the Window." The jury which made the awards this year was composed entirely of artists. The two Americans were John Carroll and Charles Hopkinson, while Othon Friesz, the Frenchman, and Sidney Lee, from England, represented the European artists.

Nothwithstanding the difficulties—political, social, economic and artistic—in the European countries, each of the eleven nations showing is fully represented in the exhibition. There are 365 paintings in all, of which less than one third are by Americans. The Spanish section has 22 canvases, many of which came out of war-torn Spain itself. Czechoslovakia will have 12 paintings by artists who represent almost all the different national groups in that country. Germany shows 35 canvases, eight of which are by artists who were formerly Austrians. The plan of the International is to furnish the current news of the art world and at the same time to include such pictures from older schools that it may also be a historical resume of the art of oil painting through the past 40 years.

Hofer World Figure

Karl Hofer, the winner of first prize, is a world figure in contemporary art. He was born in Karlsruhe, Germany, in 1878. He received his early training at the Karlsruhe Academy, and later studied in Paris and in Rome. His early work was influenced by Puvis de Chavannes, but he soon began to be interested in primitive art, and the work of Cezanne, Picasso and Derain. After the armistice, he took up his residence in Berlin, and became an outstanding figure among the more advanced artists of Germany. Through his work and his professorship of painting at the Berlin Academy he exerted a great influence on the whole field of German art. He is perhaps the most international of the German modernists, and his paintings are to be found in practically all the important collections, state and private, of Europe and the United States.

Hofer has been called the "classic modern," because within the simplicity of his own art he has succeeded in confining and refining—taming, as it were—many of the exceedingly complex and unruly elements of modern painting, and in reducing them to a kind of order. Hofer believes "painting should be kept apart from nature, and yet remain within actual contact of it." His style, severe and thoughtful, places its emphasis on construction. However, an inner spirit animates even the most extreme of his structural severities, and they are often further softened by the use of a rich textural surface and a still richer color.

Maurice de Vlaminck, who received second prize, is one of the ranking artists of France. Besides being a painter, he is also a distinguished water colorist, lithographer, illustrator and author. He was born in Paris in 1876. Vlaminck's first love among the arts was music, and he supported himself by his violin until his thirty-fifth year. His first interest in painting, apart from an early association with Derain, came indirectly through his interest in bicycling, in which sport he won many championships. Frequent bicycle excursions over France awakened his love of nature, and he turned to painting as a means of expressing it. He received encouraging recognition almost immediately, and his life career was determined. For some years now he has lived on his small estate in the country, where he leads the simple life of a farmer and laborer. He first exhibited in Carnegie Internationals in 1924, and received the Allegheny County Garden Club prize in the 1935 Exhibition for his painting "Flowers."

The art of Vlaminck is of the utmost simplicity, and really expresses the man himself. It is compounded chiefly of two elements that spring, perhaps, from the two strains within him—a disciplined intelligence, typical of his French ancestry; and a robust delight in nature and in the humble things of life, which may be the heritage from the Flemish forebears, who gave him his name. He can see—and depict—the "soul" of the humble dwellings, the roads, the villages of the countryside. Because he shuns the sentimental in nature, he prefers to paint its autumnal and wintry moods, and he might almost be called the "artist of bad weather." His style is free and sweeping. Much of his work in landscape has been distinguished by the use of an almost monotone pallette—whites, grays and blacks, though his flower paintings show brilliant color. In recent years more of this rich color appears in his landscapes.

Blanch From Illinois

Arnold Blanch, the Woodstock painter whose picture "People" received third prize, is well known in this country, He was born in Illinois in 1896. He attended the Minneapolis School of Art for four years, and then won a scholarship to the Art Students' League of New York, where he studied with Kenneth Hayes Miller, John Sloan and Robert Henri. Arnold Blanch has produced distinguished work in both figure painting and landscape. He knows the American scene, and has painted it authentically; but in recent years, he has been less concerned with its beauty and picturesque aspects than in pointing the contrast between these and the poverty of people that inhabit this opulent land. His technique has taken on new freedom and vigor, and is marked by boldness in conception and composition, and an economy of means in the projection of his ideas.

Albert Marquet, the French artist who was awarded first honorable mention, was born at Bordeaux in 1875. When he was quite young he went to Paris and entered the studio of Gustave Moreau, where his fellow-students were Matisse, Flandrin and Manguin. Later he fell under the influence of Claude Monet and Cezanne, and gave himself almost entirely to landscape painting. It has been said of Marquet with justice that, since Monet, no other painter has possessed to the same degree the gift of a keen and penetrating vision. After the fashion of the modernists, he modifies the actual to create a pattern; but he never falls into heaviness or resorts to distortion, thanks to the deftness and grace of his technique.

Mother Taught Utrillo

Maurice Utrillo, the recipient of second honorable mention, is one of the foremost figures in contemporary French art. He began to paint about the age of 19, his first teacher being his mother, Suzanne Valadon, a famous model of Degas, Renoir and Toulouse-Lautrec, and herself a painter of distinction. Almost from the beginning his work received unusual recognition. He is represented in the Luxembourg, in the Tate Gallery, and in almost all the important collections of this country and Europe. Utrillo has been called the "portrait painter of streets and squares." To him bricks and mortar are much more exciting than the human face or figure, and he invests them with poetry and an amazing sense of atmosphere. Though influenced in his early work by the impressionists, and later associated with the modern French group, "les fauves," he imitates no one and belongs to no school. In his rather grave and humble attitude towards his subjects—woebegone houses, commonplace old streets, obscure little shops and churches—he is perhaps more the primitive than the modern. His work is characterized by a power and quiet solidity.

"Storm Clouds, Greenland," by Rockwell Kent, which won third honorable mention, is perhaps the least significant of the prize pictures. It seems unfortunate that with only two awards going to Americans so uninteresting a picture should receive one of them. Kent is an unusually versatile artist, working, as he does, in several different artistic mediums, and is also an author, explorer, illustrator and editor of note. He has painted the lonely, barren places of the earth from the Arctic to the Antarctic, and prefers their austere stretches and stark outlines to those of rich and fertile lands as subjects for his paintings. His style is decorative, inclining to the monumental.

Edmond Ceria, winner of the fourth honorable mention, has been described as a "painter who paints as though he loved to paint," a legacy, perhaps, from his Italian ancestors. He is a modern, but without extravagance. His is a serene and graceful art, without extremes and full of a quiet dignity. His technique, exceedingly meticulous, is distinguished by an exquisite sense of tonal values and fine draughtsmanship.

Roger Chapelain-Midy, winner of the award of the Allegheny County Garden Club prize, is one of the most talented of the younger French painters. He has not studied formally under any modern school, but has traveled extensively throughout Europe, studying the old masters. Although distinctly of his own century, he has received his artistic inspiration from another day, from men like Chardin, Courbet, Cezanne. More recently he has turned from the still life, which interested him first, to landscape and figure painting, and has produced canvases of great distinction in these fields. His art is a very personal one, and though of great delicacy has a depth and spirituality that give it solidity. He is now working on sketches for a large tapestry to be executed by the Manufactures Nationales de Beauvais and Gobelins

Marjorie Phillips' Paintings Shown

News comes from Chicago that the Washington painter, Marjorie Phillips, was one of the limited number of artists to be invited to show in the important exhibition opening there next week at the Art Institute. This will be the Institute's forty-ninth annual showing of American painting and sculpture and promises to be one of the most vital held in many years. Mrs. Phillips' work is perhaps even more known throughout the art world generally than it has been here in Washington. A pupil of such different masters as Kenneth Hayes Miller, Boardman Robinson and Gifford Beal, she has, nevertheless, developed a style which is very personal and her own. Many of her delicately painted landscapes and still life have found their way into the big museums and collections which represent American contemporary art—the Yale University Gallery of Fine Arts and the Whitney Museum among others.

Though Mrs. Phillips is perhaps best known for her landscapes, which are peculiarly marked with lyric charm, it is a still life, "Blue Hyacinths," which has been invited to the Chicago exhibition. The painting, which was done here in Washington last spring, is a simple composition of a garden pot with the blue flowers against the background of a red tile mantelpiece. Another still life by Mrs. Phillips also has won distinction this month, as her "Bohemian Glass Vase" is now on view at the Carnegie International Exhibition at Pittsburgh. This same painting was shown last year in London at the big exhibition there of American art arranged by Wildenstein & Co.

The name of Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery, is well known in Washington, yet comparatively few people realiez that the associate director is his wife, Marjorie Phillips. Not only has Mrs. Phillips made an enviable career in her own field, but she has long held this influential position and worked with her husband in the building up of the gallery. With the eye of a true painter and the sympathetic approach of a person of unusual attainments, she has done much to help create the especial atmosphere of the Phillips Gallery. Her taste in the arranging of exhibitions and the buying of pictures has had no small part in the success of the gallery. The two "print rooms" on the first floor have been entirely in her charge, and it is she who has chosen and hung the numerous shows that have appeared there. Confining herself mainly to selection of prints and water colors, she has continually presented fresh displays, supplementing pictures from the collection itself by loans from out of town. At the present moment and until November 1 a group show of contemporary water colors is on view in Mrs. Phillips' "print room."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are leaving in a few days for Chicago, where Duncan Phillips will lecture at the Art Institute on October 18, just two days before the opening of the big exhibition. His subject is to be "Expression of Personality in Design," a lecture which he delivered last spring before the Art Students League in New York.

Certainly there is no better critic of Marjorie Phillips' work than her husband. In his book, "A Collection in the Making," Duncan Phillips has written a brief estimate of her painting. "Marjorie Phillips," he writes, "has the unmistakable style of the born painter. Although her art is delightfully young, she already reveals qualities we associate with maturity—a tempered glow of spirit and a sensitive but never sentimental transcript of the joy of life into the poetry of design . . . Of this artist it has been said that 'she paints as the sparks fly up' and, again, that her touch is equal to her taste and her expressive urge greater than either. Consequently her craft is adequate and appropriate to her emotion."

'Dead Pan' No Defense With Emotion Meter

Iowa Invention Like Terrier After Rat Captures and Measures All Reactions Professor Too Busy to Use on Love

By Darrell Huff.

You can mask your thoughts behind the deadest of dead pans. You can stare straight ahead without blinking an eyelash. You can keep your breathing even and your blood pressure constant so that your attitude is nonchalance itself.

This may fool your best friend, but not for an instant will it hide a secret from the emotion meter.

The emotion meter, or dermohmograph, was developed in the psychological laboratories of the State University of Iowa by Dr. Christian A. Ruckmick and his assistant, Dr. D. Ulrich Greenwald. Its function is to smell out an emotion lodged in the human body as surely as a terrier detects a rat, and it is not only one of the latest but one of the most interesting devices with which modern science is uncovering secrets of personality.

If flattery pleases you, if criticism makes you unhappy, if a threat frightens or enrages you, the emotion meter not only discovers and records the fact, but with mathematical precision it indicates just how pleased or terrified you are. And your most desperate attempt to conceal a secret will not in the least hamper the machine as it tells your all in the form of a jagged black line on white paper.

Marks Electric Reactions

In constructing the dermohmograph, Prof. Ruckmick has made use of the important discovery of twentieth-century science that every gland in the body is constantly producing an electrical current. It has been found that a change in the emotional state of the individual is reflected by a sharp variation in this electrical output. Ruckmick has chosen the sweat glands of the hand as the organs to activate his machine simply because it is easy to attach the electrodes of the device to the palm without causing discomfort. And discomfort must be avoided, for it would create an emotion of its own and interfere with the experiments.

In appearance the device hardly suggests its uncanny properties. It is merely a metal box, about a foot long, high and wide, containing an assortment of meters, wires and resistance units.

Here is how it works:

Prof. Ruckmick has chosen at random on the campus a woman student. As he follows her through the door of the soundproof, electrically insulated room in the psychology building, the scientist stoops. He is a six-footer and the door is low.

Puts Subject at Ease

He leads her to a chair near the emotion meter, keeping a conversation running as he explains the workings of the device to her. The object of this is to put her at her ease so that no feelings of apprehension will disturb the recordings of the sensitive device.

The co-ed sits down and while Ruckmick explains to her what the test is, he clamps onto her left hand an inch-wide band containing a rubber sponge. The sponge, he tells her, simply operates to keep even the pressure of two little copper plates that are held in contact with her hand. The plates nestle side by side, a fraction of an inch apart, and from each runs a wire that connects to the control board of the emotion meter.

When anything occurs that arouses emotion in the young woman, her sweat glands immediately become more active. You have seen the same phenomenon when beads of sweat were standing out on your brow at the conclusion of a harrowing experience—such as an automobile accident or an interview with the boss.

Even the most insignificant emotion, far too weak to bring perspiration into view, is enough to activate the glands electrically. This activity is picked up by the pair of copper plates in the coed's hand. The battery of dry cells in the machine is sending out electricity at the same time and the current from the girl's hand bucks against the juice from the battery to produce a fluctuating light, visible as it jumps back and forth on a ruled scale just above the instrument panel of the emotion meter.

Must Invent Secrets

This girl has no secrets that Prof. Ruckmick is interested in laying bare, so he must invent one for her. He is going to show her a card trick, one in which he must read her mind to succeed. He asks her to choose a card from a full pack and to replace it without letting him know which she has chosen.

One by one he displays the cards and asks, "Is this the one?" She has been instructed to say "no" each time, and her voice and expression give no hint that one answer is false.

By the time he has run through the pack once the psychologist has a pretty good idea that the chosen card is one of a very few. He has been watching the moving light leap about on the scale and he has noted which cards seemed to bring a response.

But a lie about so small a matter as this is not likely to have a strong emotional effect upon the girl. Indeed, any random thought of the dance she attended last night might arouse more emotion in her than the exposure of the chosen card, and thus bring a stronger fluctuation of the band of light. So Ruckmick checks his results by running through the entire deck five times, watching closely to discover which card invariably brings an emotional reaction. Then he names the wanted card.

Meter Not a Plaything

Ruckmick's card trick is merely a stunt he uses as a spectacular demonstration of the dermohmograph. The emotion meter is not a plaything but a research tool for this man, who is internationally recognized for his work in the psychology of emotion. He has found this machine extremely valuable in studying the relative reactions to surprise, fear, joy, embarrassment and other emotions. To measure these reactions, he and his fellow workers have developed ingenious devices for making to order desired emotions in the subjects of the experiments.

One of the most effective of his inventions is his disgust-arouser. He boiled a pot of macaroni, added a slippery soap solution, then chilled it with ice. When the blindfolded subject plunges an unsuspecting hand into this slimy, clammy mess the light on the meter jumps.

But not always. One girl amazed the psychologist by showing no reaction to the slippery handful. Suspiciously he checked the machine, then he began to question the girl. She told him she had often hunted night crawlers to use as bait for fishing. She had become conditioned to the stimulus.

Dr. Ruckmick would be the first to remind you that the emotion meter is not infallible. But carefully checked experiments have shown that it is from 85 to 90 per cent accurate when used as a lie detector.

Different emotions are not differentiated by the machine. The curve produced by joy cannot always be told from the one produced by fear. However, you do not need to be a psychologist to know that when the light jumps as you tell a co-ed she is said to be the best dancer on the campus, pleasure is the emotion.

When Ruckmick is doing important research or lie-detector work on accused criminals he does not rely on watching the moving light. An addition to the machine is an electric motor which turns a long roll of sensitive photographic paper on which the emotional changes are recorded in a wavy, jumpy black line.

Love Too Much Work

Another feature of the machine is that although it makes no qualitative distinctions it is quantitatively exact. Experiment has shown that when one curve is twice as strongly out of line as another, the emotion behind it is exactly twice as intense.

Ruckmick and his associates have tested the responses of children and adults to movie scenes, particularly those involving danger or love-making. Ruckmick found that children in the youngest age group—under 12 years—generally responded little to love scenes, while danger aroused them. Adults showed little emotion while watching portrayals of fictitious peril, but responded quite strongly to love scenes. The most powerful responses to pictures of love-making were recorded in boys and girls about 16 years old.

Reports of this work suggested to University of Iowa students that the device might be able to show which boy a girl loves most, if the boys were to be paraded before her as she sat strapped to the machine. Ruckmick cautiously admitted that his dermohmograph might do the work, but declared, "If I started that I'd never have time for anything else."

Four Factors in Snakebite

The quantity of venom injected into a victim when bitten by a poisonous snake depends upon the size of the snake, the length of time the poison has been accumulating, the depth of the fang thrust and the location of the bite.

Civilians' Part in Defense War Dramatically Demonstrated at Fort Bragg Air Maneuvers

750,000 Act in Response To 'Blackout' Signal

Men, Women Warn Defenders
Co-operation Pleases Officials
Develop Means of Defending Cities

By Barry Sullivan.
A Staff Correspondent.

Fort Bragg, N. C., Oct. 15.—"Blackout immediately; Blackout immediately!"

The cry crackling through scores of radio loudspeakers to the accompaniment of factory whistles, church bells and fire sirens presented a striking modernization of Paul Revere's ride the other night as the Army brought its North Carolina air maneuvers to a climax.

"Lights out. The enemy is coming." This new version of the warning a lone horseman once barked into the night air to rouse his fellow countrymen met a response equally modern. Not a few hundred patriots heard it—but more than 750,000 citizens living in the hills and valleys of eastern North Carolina. The Minute Men of 1938 dashed not for their muskets—but for electric light switches.

In no time they had a fourth of North Carolina—66 villages in 21 counties—covered with a veil of darkness.

The enemy wasn't a column of redcoats this time. It was a fleet of bombers just sighted off the coast!

Of course, it wasn't war. Just make-believe. But in their excitement, even though not prompted by fear of death, the men, women and children of this coast region demonstrated that civilians will co-operate with their Army in defending their homes from invaders.

The Army chalked up no "victories" following the night raid Thursday night, but officials reported the maneuvers a "complete success."

The Army men were interested in the response civilians displayed throughout the whole mimic-war program. They noted with satisfaction that men of the soil and factory gave material assistance in defense of Fort Bragg, objective of the "enemy" planes. Filling station operators, farmers, mill hands, lawyers, foresters, merchants and housewives—not to mention C. C. C. boys and Coast Guardsmen—manned a total of 307 warning stations, keeping vigil on eight-hour shifts. This network provided defense headquarters with constant lookout service. And when the spectacular night attack on Fort Bragg was launched Thursday night, the defenders got more than an hour's warning.

The Army has doubtless developed many ideas from the maneuver program—ideas to go into practice if actual war comes. From the exercises between aircraft and anti-aircraft may emerge a system for defending America's great industrial and Governmental cities. Their defense, it is now recognized, presents a unique problem, and the mechanisms set up to protect cities abroad won't help much here.

Paris and London are protected by rings of permanently installed searchlights and antiaircraft guns. Defending aircraft operate in separate sectors where they will be in no danger from antiaircraft fire of their ground forces.

In the United States, the number of important cities makes the establishment of permanent antiaircraft defense impossible. Therefore, a mobile protective system must be devised.

Co-ordinated But Separate

As has been shown during the maneuvers attacking planes can be engaged by pursuit aircraft far from the post, and it is probable that pursuit planes and antiaircraft defense in the future will be widely separated, although co-ordinated in their activities at central headquarters. Brig. Gen. Fulton Q. C. Gardner, who commanded defense units, indicated that such an anti-aircraft defense would provide for pursuit aviation fields a considerable distance from the regions to be protected. Near the strategic point itself would be antiaircraft equipment and pursuit ordinarily would not enter the sector in which the guns were operating.

In the maneuvers planes of the General Headquarters Airforce were engaged in international attacks upon a hypothetical air base located within the military reservation here.

As the attacking planes drove in from the seacoast they were spotted by civilian observers who relayed the position of the aircraft to defense headquarters here by telephone and teletype messages. Nearing the post, the G. H. Q. air force planes find that defense, commanded by Brig. Gen. Fulton Q. C. Gardner, not only forewarned of their approach, but has antiaircraft artillery, direction finders, sound locators and searchlights ready for operation.

Protecting Guns

Fort Bragg was protected by a ring of guns comprising all but one regiment of antiaircraft artillery in the Army. In night attacks defending guns, aided by searchlights and the other scientific instruments of modern warfare went into action as the attacking planes neared their objective.

Pursuit planes, based the three airfields surrounding the post, rose from the ground to meet the attackers as they approached.

During the day pursuit craft watchfully awaited the assaults of bombardment planes, such as the flying fortress and smaller fighting craft, which attempted to destroy the emplacements of antiaircraft ordnance.

While the bombing planes advanced a smoke screen was laid to blind antiaircraft gun crews, and especially those manning fire control instruments. When the bombing planes were sighted by defending aircraft, engagements in the sky, interceptions, the Army calls them, sometimes took place at heights between 20,000 and 25,000 feet.

No "Victory" Planned

Although this mimic war will be concluded without either side being judged the victor, many military problems will be worked out here and in the offices of the general staff in Washington from the data obtained during the present maneuvers.

The value of the warning net, extending over the eastern section of North Carolina, is carefully being examined as a possible forerunner of similar protective meshes to be thrown around strategic United States cities.

Citizens usually engaged in the prosaic duties of their own occupations scan the sky on watch for attacking planes. One morning they were at their posts at 4 a. m. as military personnel at Langley Field, headquarters of the attacking planes, and at the post here, went about their respective activities.

In every way, Gen. Gardner says, the net functioned beyond the expectations of the original planners of the defense.

Advance Mapped

After observers in the net transmitted word of the approach of enemy planes to Fort Bragg, the course of the aircraft during their advance was plotted on a map. When the attacking planes came within striking distance, military observers keep a careful watch in readiness to open fire.

In defense at night, searchlights were used sparingly because as their beams flashed across the sky, their positions become apparent to the assaulting aircraft. Usually one or two searchlights focused on a formation of bombers while the antiaircraft guns blazed away. Blank shells were not used in this exercise, but photographic flash bulbs were employed to simulate the fire of the guns.

To approximate regular combat conditions still farther, camouflage was used to hide guns and locating instruments and dummy roads were built to confuse the attacking aviators.

Guns Coated with Bark

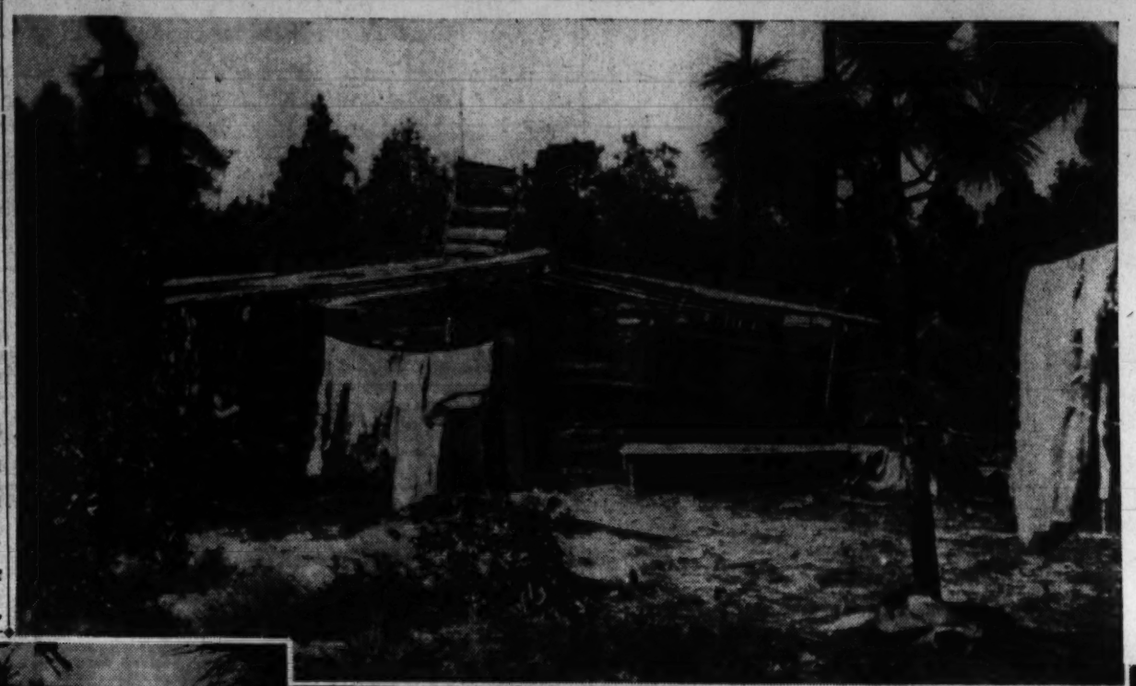
At some batteries the bark was taken from trees and wrapped around a gun, making it appear like hundreds of stumps throughout the military reservation.

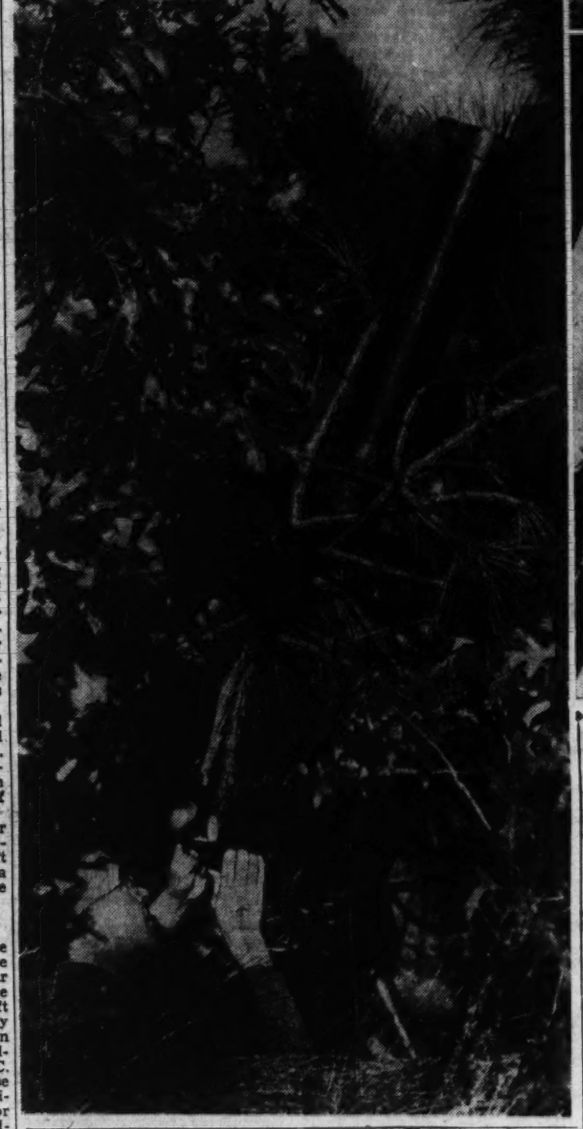
Green foliage covered instruments, searchlights and guns at other batteries to obscure them from sight. However, the dying leaves would change color and foliage had to be removed as it turned brown and replaced by the brightly colored leaves of the region. Pine branches also had to be changed frequently so the disguised guns would remain hidden.

One gun was camouflaged by a small hut with a roof which could be rolled back in 30 seconds. Real smoke poured out of the chimney of the hut and an artifical well and pigstye made the representation complete. Even a clothes line was strung up and clothes hung upon it.

Planes also can be aided by protective coloration, although they have not been camouflaged in these war games.

In an actual war, aircraft would be given a dull finish of lampblack to prevent reflection. Lampblack absorbs rather than reflects light.





The cabin in the pines, left, is not the peaceful place it appears to be. The wash on the line, and all, is just part of a ruse—under the log house are two U. S. Army soldiers ready to fire away with a 3-inch anti-aircraft gun at "enemy" planes attacking Fort Bragg, N. C., during last week's war games. Also on the lookout for "enemy" aircraft is the operator, below left, who looks across the business end of a smal anti-aircraft gun of recent design

Military Order Of World War Honors Cox

Named Judge Advocate Guard Parade Slated To March to Church

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, of the District National Guard, was elected National Judge Advocate of the Military Order of the World War at that organization's convention in New Orleans last week.

Plans are being discussed for the second Sunday in January, when the entire National Guard will march en masse to church.

Gen. Cox is chairman of the Halloween parade committee. Officers and enlisted men will play a prominent part in the parade and in maintaining order. This is in line with the General's desire to make of Washington's own militia an organization of more service to the community.

Examination for the eligible list for commissions will be held beginning Tuesday, November 8. It is an educational examination that is required of applicants for commission in the National Guard, and is open to all enlisted men between the ages of 21 and 31. Closing date for applications is November 4. The examining board consists of Maj. Sidney Morgan, Capt. Hugh Everett, jr., Capt. George F. Harbin, and Capt. Robert J. Martin.

Private Sidney Young of Company A, 121st Engineers, was appointed to West Point this past June, his company boats. Corpl. James R. Mitchell is a member of the team to be awarded medals this coming Tuesday for excellence at the Camp Perry, Ohio, National rifle matches. He was high man of the team with a score of 277. The company is studying the problem of field fortifications. It is a map problem with the location situated in Washington.

New enlistments: Pvts. Albert Echaves, John G. Bugbee, Donald H. Musick, Howard M. Hudgins and Virgil C. Kress.

Hurricane Safety Test For Airlines

Its Course Charted
All Ships Grounded
Vigilance Constant
Weather Bureau Aid

By Ansel E. Talbert.

The major airlines of the United States gave a striking demonstration during last month's hurricane of the value of their constant vigilance in observing weather conditions.

If the hurricane had caught one of the all-metal airliners in the open about to take off or land, it could easily have piled the plane against the nearest obstruction. A skillful pilot might have ridden out the storm at a reasonable altitude, but only with great risk. But no pilot was forced to give an exhibition of storm-battling, because several hours before the worst of the hurricane swept across Newark Airport and other Eastern flying fields, all planes had been stored in hangars.

The air-line meteorologists share credit for this foresight with the Weather Bureau. For several days before the storm reached New York City they had been watching its erratic progress.

Ship and Land Reports

Original sources of weather information are ships at sea and weather-reporting stations, including the Coast Guard. These start their observations daily at 7:15 a. m., and report by wireless or telegraph to the Weather Bureau in Washington. The correlated material is sent by teletype to the airports, usually at 8 a. m., 2 p. m. and 8 p. m., but some member of the meteorological staff at each air line is on duty night and day in the event that the bureau should send a special report of some unusual atmospheric condition. Such a special report was sent by teletype and radio when the hurricane was first reported off the coast, even before it became clear in which direction it was headed.

Map Prepared for Pilots

A weather map, made by an airline meteorologist after each Weather Bureau report, is hung in the operations office, accessible to the pilots. Usually pilot and co-pilot drop in at the operations office a few minutes after their plane has been checked by mechanics for its coming flight.

The pilot discusses weather conditions on the route he plans to take with the meteorologist, who advises the pilot how high he should fly for the most favorable winds, and provides other information. The meteorologist also has reports on ceiling and visibility at the airport where a flight is to end. These are important, because a heavy fog over the terminal airport might force cancellation of a flight although the weather was clear along the route.

Pilot Maps His Route

With this information the pilot makes out his flight card, which shows the exact route he intends to take and the altitudes at which he intends to fly to avoid storms or to take advantage of favorable winds. While he is doing this the co-pilot and the stewardess look on; she frequently is able to soothe nervous passengers by warning them in advance of spots of rough air, thereby gaining their confidence.

Before the take-off the pilot must get approval of his plans by the flight superintendent, who is a sort of general manager of all the line's flights. When the pilot is doubtful because of disturbed weather the superintendent must take final responsibility.

Radio Another Protection

There is another safety check in the two-way radio. If a flight superintendent had misinterpreted the Weather Bureau information before last month's hurricane and allowed a plane to head for New York as the storm was about to sweep across Long Island the pilot could have been warned by radio.

No such happening occurred; however, and there was no confusion at Newark Airport the day of the hurricane. At 8 a. m. the hurricane was located east of Cape Hatteras, due to reach Long Island in the afternoon. At 2 p. m. it was reported east of Philadelphia, but 90 minutes earlier all flights had been suspended, even though ceiling and visibility at Newark were good. Operations were resumed the same evening after the meteorologists were sure the storm had passed

G. W. Women Begin Drive For Building

Students Raising Funds Plan Many Benefit Events Mortar Board to Help

A movement to raise funds for the proposed women's activities building at George Washington University is being sponsored by student and alumnae organizations.

At their opening meeting of the year Columbian Women voted to hold a card party and musicale November 5 at Wardman Park Hotel to help in the drive for funds. Mrs. Tomas Cajigas is chairman of the benefit. Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., is chairman of patronesses.

Mortar Board, the senior women's honor society, also will encourage the project by giving one event each month during the academic year in the interest of fund raising. The chapter is composed of nine outstanding women members of the senior class, including Mary Jo Mitchell, president; Elizabeth Burnett, vice president; Marjorie Allen, secretary; Marie McNeese, treasurer; Barbara Harmon, publicity director, and Muriel Merelman, Dorothy Ames, Carol Hobart and Betty Griswald.

The Women's Athletic Association, under the chairmanship of Doris Ludwig, also is making plans to further the project.

Preliminary plans for the women's activities building were drawn up some time ago under the direction of the president of the university, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin.

The building will serve not only students of the university but women graduates and women members of the faculty, accommodating a large number of activities, recreational and social, as well as sports. It will provide the most modern facilities for the department of physical education for women, the activities of the Women's Athletic Association and the women's intramural sports program.

There will be a main gymnasium large enough for basketball, a smaller student gymnasium for games, such as badminton and volley ball, and a small gymnasium for the use of alumnae and faculty women; a dance studio with a small stage; also a full size swimming pool with gallery and dressing room, showers and lockers.

Other sports will be accommodated in the archery range, bowling alleys, squash court, handball court and fencing room. Here will be located the offices and classrooms of the department of physical education and the offices of the director of women's personnel guidance.

In the medical unit will be the offices and examining room of the university physician for women and a corrective gymnasium.

Recreational and social features of the building will include club rooms for Mortar Board, the Panhellenic Council, the Women's Athletic Association and other student and alumnae groups; lounges with kitchenettes, a cafeteria, a browsing room and rest room. On the roof will be a solarium, deck for games and promenade.

The building will form a part of the womain's group on the university campus which was started by Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, of the board of trustees, with her gift of a woman's residence hall which was opened two years ago.

—And He Hasn't Dropped a Dish Yet

"It's not as bad as I thought it'd be," says Donald Phillips, student in cookery at Abbot Vocational School. Dorothy Kane, who is incidentally the only girl in the kitchen, smiles her approval, reserving the opinion that Don might handle his dish-washing a little less clumsily. It's a boy's class in cooking and it's quite a success

Dads Honored In Program at American U.

Today, Dad's Day on the American university campus, scores of dads from several States are on hand for special ceremonies.

Some of the dads watched their sons in yesterday's football game, while others sat in the stands with sons or daughters.

A special celebration in honor of the dads was planned today following the big "Dad's Dinner" in the college dining room. Other features of the day include church services in the morning which students attend with their fathers, followed by a reception, and the college open house in the afternoon during which the fathers are given an opportunity to inspect the entire campus.

Washington Club Maps Plans at Georgetown

Four Formal Proms Slated for Coming Year At Least a Dance a Month Likely Fifty Frosh Admitted and Are Given Party

With the resumption of extra-curricular activities at Georgetown University, the Washington Club, one of more than a dozen student organizations in the College of Arts and Sciences, formulated its plans for the year.

Under the direction of John Flynn, president, the club is arranging four formal proms along with one informal dance each month. More than 50 freshmen were admitted last week and the new members were given a party Friday evening at the Sylvan Studios, in nearby Virginia. Membership in the club is restricted to students residing within the metropolitan area of Washington.

In addition to Flynn, who is a senior, the other officers for the year are James John Kelly, of the senior class, vice president; James Joseph Kelley, of the sophomore class, secretary; Frederick McCoy, of the senior class, treasurer, and William Quinn, a junior, manager of publicity.

The R. O. T. C. Band marched in Wednesday's Columbus Day parade and was one of the chief attractions. The 54 musicians who have mastered some intricate maneuvers are a feature of Georgetown's football games and always travel with the varsity team.

Maj. Stonewall Jackson, U. S. A., of the R. O. T. C. staff, has general supervision over the band and was enthusiastic over the number of excellent musicians among the freshmen recruits. They had all belonged to high school bands and orchestras.

Members of the Mask and Bauble Club are rehearsing three short plays for presentation in Gaston Hall the evening of October 25 which inaugurates the dramatic season at the Hilltop. William J. Driscoll, jr., president of the club, is planning an active season. In addition to Mr. Driscoll, the casts for the forthcoming plays will include such veterans as J. Vincent Watson, John M. Haffen, Thomas F. Mullahey and Robert W. Barnitt.

Strayer Group Holds Outing

Elizabeth Glenn, faculty advisor of Alpha Iota Sorority of Strayer College, and L. B. Conner, advisor of Phi Theta Pi, national commerce fraternity, sponsored a wiener roast at Fort Dupont Park Saturday afternoon.

The committee in charge of arrangements included Helen O'Shaughnessy, secretary to the president, E. S. Donoho; Marie Swann, Nancy Fischer, Helen Moran, Shelley Edwards, Paul Matthews, Lee Paul Switzer, and Schell Hoye.

Refreshments were provided by the sorority and fraternity, and the college, as joint host, provided transportation.

Members of the faculty and office staff who accepted invitations to be present as guests were President and Mrs. Donoho; E. G. Purvis, vice president; Alice Wakefield and Charles F. Cronin, stdent counselors.

Robert Hart Wins Honor at Central High

He'll Head Regiment
Changes Are Made Magazines Rivals

By Helen Drazen.

Lieut. Paul Doerr, military instructor at Central High, has announced that Robert Hart will be lieutenant colonel of the Central High School regiment for the coming year.

In the past summer a few changes have been made in the school. A new maple floor was laid in the girls' gymnasium. Landscaping, surrounding the tennis courts, was completed.

On Friday, the students of Central will stage a fair. Freaks, puppets, and many stunts will be presented by the students themselves. For 25 cents the students are given six tickets to attend any of the six different shows they wish to see. Outsiders are welcome. Proceeds will be used to improve the school.

Four Central teachers, Miss Louise Moore, Miss Mildred Stallings, Miss Grace Johnson and Harold Crankshaw, were honored with the only high school faculty promotions to be given by the board of education this year. All of them have been promoted from the A class to the B class of teachers.

There is another rivalry with Tech at Central this year, that of the greatest number of subscriptions for their respective publications, Tech Life and the Central Bulletin. This is the first time that a Tech-Central feud has centered around publications. The school that gets the greatest number during October will be awarded a trophy by the losing school. The first copy of the Bulletin came out Thursday.

Already more than doubling last year's purchases, Centralites bought over 800 Athletic Association tickets and are still adding to the goal which is set at 1,000. Miss Clare Driscoll, a physics teacher, has put a chart in the front entrance of the building where the students may watch the daily climb to the top. It also shows the five sections which have sold the most.

Every school in the Sixth Division contributed to the art exhibit in Peabody School last week. Children and parents by the hundreds attended the show, which included each afternoon on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, a tea. Some of the interesting items on display are pictured here. The mural, "Pioneer Days," upper left, was made last spring by fifth grade pupils in Blake School; admiring it here are Carl Steadman and Sylvia Flynn, both Peabody pupils. Above right, Jean Poston, 10, of Peabody, adds another mask to the Congo exhibit (the masks were made in Peabody's fourth grade). Boy Who Would Be President Still Typical Type at College

Vocational Adviser Discovers Dream Persists
Supreme Court Is Next Most-Coveted Job
Other Young Hopefuls Want to Emulate Edison

Most people would follow the boyhood dream of being President of the United States if they had their preference of vocations, Dr. Clifton W. Hall, placement advisor for Adelbert College of Western Reserve University, has discovered.

"Next to President, most people would like to be a member of the U. S. Supreme Court or hold some other high national office," Dr. Hall told a United Press reporter.

"There still are many hopeful trodders in the footsteps of Thomas A. Edison, however. Those interviewed chose the occupation of an inventive genius for third place."

For several years, Dr. Hall has sounded out people on their hopes and ambitions.

Various Ages Represented

The results of his research are unusually representative because he questioned people of various ages, occupations and environments. He learned their preferences on 249 occupations.

The vocations of actor, actress and aviator seem to be losing in popularity, Dr. Hall reported.

He said that the vocation of research scientist—like Louis Pasteur—vied in popularity with that of inventor.

"I am certain many people are influenced in their ideas of prestige by preconceived notions and taboos," Dr. Hall said.

"When I was vocational counselor at Collinwood High school several years ago, I had to deal with the problems presented by boys and girls who wanted to be doctors, lawyers, writers or inventors, yet had little ability or background to pursue these lines of work."

Ten Most Unpopular

Ideas of prestige apparently influenced those questioned by Dr. Hall in choosing the 10 occupations which they liked least.

These were: adult newsboy, unskilled farm laborer, fortune teller, bartender, bootlegger, junkman, circus roustabout, garbage collector and—at the bottom of the list—professional bobo.

The professions of writer, surgeon, foreign consul, and Catholic Church bishop ranked high among the favored occupations. The job of bank president—unpopular during the depression—has regained its former popularity.

Here are where some other occupations rank in the esteem of the people to whom Dr. Hall talked:

Father O'Neill Has Third Plant Named After Him

Synagonanthus Oneilli Moldenke, It's Called One of Species of 'Hat-Pin Plants'
Garden of Catholic U. Professor Is Famous

For the third time the Rev. Hugh O'Neill, assistant professor of biology at the Catholic University and curator of the Langlois Herbarium, has had a plant named for him.

Dr. Harold N. Moldenke, of the New York Botanical Garden, announced last week that he had named a plant, collected by Dr. O'Neill in British Honduras in 1936 for the Catholic University botanist. It appears in botanical records as Syngonanthus Oneilli Moldenke and is one of the numerous species familiarly known as "hat-pin plants."

Father O'Neill, one of the leading Catholic botanists in the United States, is widely known for his ingenious means of providing his students with appropriate specimens for their studies and for the care of the plants in the university's collections. Several years ago he started the transformation of the university campus into an arboretum, and has added more than 600 different varieties of plants, trees and shrubs to the university grounds. To prevent insect inroads on the extensive plant collections in the herbarium, he invented an electric oven, which has attracted great attention among the botanists of the country.

Learning that a number of his students were well-acquainted with plants from all parts of the world but, curiously enough, lacking a personal acquaintance with some of the common varieties, he planted a garden on the campus late last spring to provide materials for class use this fall. He attended this carefully throughout the summer months and now has the specimens he needs for his fall work.

His garden includes important plants both from an economical and ornamental point of view, not ordinarily grown together in this locality. Within a 50-foot square he grew rice, cotton, figs, tobacco, cassava, more commonly known as tapioca; six species of cacti from Arizona, 12 kinds of aromatic plants, including thyme, coriander, dill, sweet basil, fennel and others; five different kinds of tomatoes, the ordinary garden variety or ponderosa, the plum tomato, yellow in color, cherry tomatoes, closely resembling the fruit of that name; yellow egg-shaped tomatoes and a pear-shaped tomato also yellow.

A banana tree reached a 4-foot stature and has since been potted and placed in the plant physiology laboratory. Twelve species of palms were in the small garden, some from seeds from one of the most famous gardens of the world, La Mortala at Ventimiglia, Italy.

In an inner court of the library, Father O'Neill also grew a tea plant, pomegranate, guava, satsuma orange, Job's tears, from which rosaries can be made; a coffee tree, paper mulberry and a Japanese persimmon. Another plant grown also on the campus by Father O'Neill was Franklinia. This was named after Benjamin Franklin by the famous botanist Bartram, who discovered it in the latter part of the eighteenth century in the Okefinokee Swamp in Florida and Georgia. He brought the seeds back to Philadelphia, where it was grown in a cultivated state.

Educators Prepare for School Week

Adult Interest Sought
Will Exhibit Wares
To Open Nov. 6

"Education for Tomorrow's America."

What education offers—and what it doesn't—will go on display next month. And last week Washington public schools set out to attract the attention of thousands of District adults during American Education Week, November 6 to 12.

Local schools will follow the lead of the National Education Association in adopting a seven-day program to throw the spotlight on every activity in the public education system.

"The week is an opportune time for the profession and the public to give mutual consideration to the problems of Education for Tomorrow's America," the National Education Association announced last week. "On this occasion let us encourage the people to come to the teaching profession with constructive expressions about the educational program. There is as much need for interpreting the needs of the community to the school as for interpreting the school to the community. The schools will serve democracy best as they meet the needs of all the people."

So it's not to be a one-sided affair. If you don't like what the schools are doing, now's the time to say so. If you don't know what they're doing, it's a good time to find out.

"Visit Your School" posters went up in the schools last week. Programs to bring activities to the attention of parents and other adults are in preparation.

Thousands of pieces—yea, millions—of literature have been sent out of National Educational Association headquarters here recently for distribution to pupils and parents throughout the country.

One of the folders was prepared by a committee of Washington teachers. Bertie Backus, principal of the Alice Deal Junior High School, was chairman of a group that wrote and edited a booklet on "Attaining Values and Standards." That is to be the theme of one day of the celebration. She was assisted by Florence M. Lumsden, Woodrow Wilson High English teacher; Mabel F. Murray, Latin teacher at Roosevelt, and Hugh Stewart Smith, Jefferson Junior High principal. The booklet contains suggestions for high school participation in the week's events.

Old Papers Reveal Schools' Prim Past

Girls Attended in Pantalettes and Ankle Skirts
They Had to Pay Share of Fuel Bills
Miss Tenney's Building Still in Georgetown

By Josephine D. Leary.

The early October sun must have felt comforting on the bare necks and arms of Miss Caroline Tenny's small pupils as they trooped in through the side garden gate to their school which stands today as it it did over a hundred years ago, at 3010 O street, in Georgetown.

Miss Caroline and her sister lived in this dwelling and gave "instructiontion in the English branches and in painting and drawing" as one of their bills dated 1831, recently unearthed, stipulated.

In Frills and Furbelows

Although the pupil's frocks, made of alpaca or merino or bombazine, were low necked and short sleeved, they had ankle length shirts with frilled pantalettes showing below in perfect Godey book form.

Some hint of why the October sun was grateful to these little girls was given by an item on the bill which read, "Fuel, 37½ cents." And as we know there was neither oil heat nor air conditioning in Miss Tenny's little school house. Instead there were drum stoves where knots of hickory were burned, each pupil being taxed this small sum to meet the expense of the heating system.

The school was known then as a "young ladies seminary." In the garden beside the house which is a white frame structure of simple design, there is a one-storied, one-room building that used to be called the office.

The bill which we refer to, written in finest feminine script on thinnest paper, receipted by Miss Caroline Tenny, is one of many like documents that were signed by various Georgetown school ma'ams and school masters, with dates running from 1830 to 1843, that were discovered a short time ago in an old Georgetown secretary.

They included besides bills for school tuition, statements from a book shop proprietor and from a glazer.

The book shop proprietor, Samuel Thomas, itemized his accounts in a bould, flourishing hand, as follows:

1 Pike's Arithmetic, priced	$ .37½
1 Polite Learning, priced	.50
3 Copy Books, priced	.25
1 Lincoln's Botany, priced	1.50
1 Webster's Spelling Book	.20
1 The Young Reader	.20
1 Question and Key to Grimshaw's United States	37½

The glazer's bill read: "For glazing and lighting" and was rendered by one George Offutt. This was addressed "To the Trustees of the Lancaster School, female side." It had been indorsed in meticulous feminine hand writing with the words "This bill is correct, signed, Miranda Morgan Guy, Trustee, 1838."

Quaker School

This we know was a Quaker academy and a more properly organized educational institution than Miss Tenny's, having a board of trustees and apparently including both boys and girls. The building, also a present-day residence stands with little outward change except for the bright purple trimmings, on the south side of O street between Thirty-first street and Wisconsin avenue.

A bill from the Lancaster School reads:

To instructing Miss Sarah—
Painting 1 dr	$ 5.00
1 Brush	.25
1 Hair Pencil	.06
1 Guilt Frame	10.00

Miss Sarah's artistic efforts seem to have been considered a success since they were worthy of a ten-dollar frame.

There were receipted school bills, too, from the Misses A. and E. Bootes, whose school was on N street (then called Gay street; also from Miss Harover and Miss Dean).

The largest school for young ladies of Georgetown was presided over by Miss Lydia English, which for many years, in fact within the writer's memory, was referred to as the seminary. It, too, stands today with almost no outward alteration on Thirtieth street, the east side, between Dumbarton avenue and N street. Though outwardly unchanged the building has been internally revolutionized. It is now the Colonial Apartment. During the Civil War this school closed; the United States Government took it over and used it as a soldier's hospital.

Another well-known school for girls in the early 1830's was Miss Lipscomb's, which is on the north side of N street between Thirtieth and Thirty-first streets. It is a handsome brick house, set up on a double-decker terrace, with two beautiful magnolia trees on the upper one. Here Newton D. Baker lived during the World War.

It is a far cry from the pantaletted, bombazine clad young ladies of Miss Tenny's school to the athletic girls wearing shorts and sweaters at Western High School today. And while the students' costumes have contracted their curriculum has expanded. From "instruction in English branches and in painting and drawing" it has grown to cover a preparatory study for "the entire course of culture."

Studebaker Finds Radio, Press, Free Discussion Vital to Solution of War Crisis, Other Problems

Paul Revere Recalled
Roosevelt Plea Cited

By Dr. John W. Studebaker
U. S. Commissioner of Education

(In this article which includes remarks made recently by Dr. Studebaker in a radio broadcast, the chief of the Federal Office of Education answers the question, "Can Discussion Muzzle the Guns?")

A man on horseback sat one night with his eyes fixed on a church steeple. He was watching for a message to be transmitted by lanterns. "One if by land or two if by sea" . . . the number of lights in the steeple would indicate by which route the British were approaching. The message came to this man on horseback and then he rode miles at a gallop to pass it on. That happened in the modern era of history. But the message was unknown to some people in America for several days and even weeks.

Contrast with that the broadcast of a long message from Washington a few days ago. Within seconds after the message was prepared at 3 o'clock in the morning people all over the United States who had been told to expect an important statement at that time heard every word of it. People in Europe, at their breakfast tables got it by short-wave. But more than that—within six hours competent students of the international situation from New York, London, and other capitals analyzed its meaning and significance. Within six hours from the time a typewriter had made the final draft, that message was the topic of discussion in all parts of the civilized world. People heard it on loud-speakers, then read it in the morning newspapers.

Heard 'Round the World

This strange and yet powerful thing we call public opinion was feeding on that message. In the time that it would have taken Paul Revere to ride less than 100 miles with his message, the appeal of the President of the United States, for peace went around the globe and became a part of world public opinion.

This serves merely to illustrate how we have annihilated time and made it possible for people to get an accurate and exact statement of an important message together with clarifying comment on its implications for peace or war.

But the means of communication have gone beyond this. We have been able to sit at our radios and to hear the dictators and the democratic leaders express their positions and to argue their cases. We got not only what they said, but we experienced the manner in which they said it. Maps and charts clarified the situation for us. Pictures were flashed by wireless to enable us to see important aspects of the crisis we were discussing and trying to understand. We heard the crowds shout. We experienced what it means to prepare cities for air bombardment. We followed the mobilization of troops and were given a real sense of the meaning of it.

Literally, we stood on the brink of war and we were able to see vividly some of the consequences of a false move.

Historical facts were marshaled and presented to us in order that we might understand the background of the situation. Conflicting opinions and views were presented from all parts of the world. The issue was approached from every angle and sharpened by critical comment. We learned much in a very short time.

This achievement in making the major crisis in this decade vivid and understandable to masses of people calls for the unreserved praise of educators. But it calls for more than praise. In my judgment, it is the responsibility of the educational forces to keep the discussion going and to prepare for better use of the press and radio in organized education in the future. . .

Ironic as it may seem, with thousands dying daily in wars in progress in the Far East and in Spain, we say we have peace. What we mean is that only the biggest guns in our world have been muzzled for the time being. World war has been narrowly averted. But we do not have peace. We have a little more time in which to try to find and follow the road to peace.

Talk Must Go On

This means that the discussion which the press and radio have so magnificently stimulated and nourished in recent weeks must go on. The situation has been radically changed in the last few days. This is not a time to drop the problem and wait for another period of feverish excitement. The problems which created this crisis are still with us, in great part. They are capable of producing another crisis. We need now to redouble our efforts to get at an understanding of these problems in a more relaxed but organized way. The organization and management of this long-term program of public discussion is in part the responsibility of local public education. Having stood on the brink of war, certainly no one will come forward now and tell us that an understanding of the war-and-peace question is not the concern of education. What can the people be more in need of knowing than how to cope with this problem—how to make public opinion push the right answers into the position of international action?

This war-and1peace question cannot be separated from a number of other controversial questions. It is bound up with domestic policies and local isues. The basic question is not how to prevent war but how to make peace possible and reasonable. Having stood on the brink of war for a few brief days, we should now have the dynamic impulse to promote a permanent peace. This requires that public opinion in the democracies be invested with understanding of the problems which must be solved if we are to have peace. Many of these problems are very close to us and are almost as urgent as the crisis through which the world has recently passed. Unemployment, farm surpluses, social security, standards of living, business confidence, monopolies, taxation and money problems—these and other issues are bound up in the question of war or peace.

We cannot expect, perhaps, to achieve such a rapid and extensive educational result about any of these vexing issues as we achieved during the recent crisis due to the unusual devotion of every means of communication to that problem. But we might expect to move more rapidly in the direction of general civic literacy than we have in the past.

I should like to see a group of American leaders make a national call to study and discussion, selecting perhaps one vital national or international issue each month. Through the office of education, the educational forces of the Nation might be mobilized to help people come to an understanding of the monthly No. 1 problem of America. The radio, press, and thousands of organized groups might concentrate special attention on the No. 1 problem. By an organized approach, using every means available for clarifying the issues and making the alternative arguments and proposals vivid and meaningful, we might speed up the formulation of public opinion enough to keep pace with the problem being put to us so insistently.

To my mind it is much more important that the Nation engage in a national fact-finding and opinion-testing campaign from time to time on specific major issues involving the peace and happiness of our people than that we should set

Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Dr. Lewis Meriam, of the Brookings Institution and nationally known authority on government, has taken a special interest in the in-service training to be conducted under mandate of the Executive Orders of June 24. Dr. Meriam has prepared for the Federal Diary the appended article:

Pactically all administrators and all personnel men believe in "in-service training." Long before the technical term "in-service training" was invented practical administrators appreciated that employes had to be trained to perform their duties, or "broken in," as some of the old-timers said, borrowing their term from the days of the horse.

..If one goes way back to primitive socities, one will find striking examples of "in-service training" by the clan to fit the youth for the service which he was to render the tribe. Thus only the name is new, the function is probably as old as human organization.

DR. MERIAM

Methods of in-service training are likewise old, because human beings have been so long at the job of fitting persons to do the necessary work of the world. It is doubtful whether any modern personnel specialist will be able to devise anything absolutely new and untried. The great advance will probably come not from the invention of new devices but from intelligent analysis of existing situations and the intelligent application of the time-tried devices best suited to each particular situation.

The national Government is so large and geographically so far flung and it is engaged in such a diversity of activities and enterprises that no standard pattern of in-service training is practicable. Each program of in-service training must be adapted to meet the needs of a particular organization unit or of a particular group or class of employes.

A program perfectly adapted to a large homogeneous unit located in a single metropolitan area would be absurd if applied to a small staff scarttered over the entire country. In many cities, for example, excellent work has been done in the in-service training of policemen and firemen, but those methods are not suitable for a highly scattered service. For scattered services the methods of the correspondence schools are more promising than the methods of the assembled class.

Objectives of in-service training likewise differ. Training for the immediate duties of the position the employe occupies may be very different from training for promotion to managerial duties. In-service training to enable an employe to make up for deficiences in his pre-entry education is very different from training designed to permit the employe splendidly equipped at entrance to advance in the higher specialized branches of his field of civilian competence.

One important objective of training may be to offset and correct the narrow and high specialization that is characteristic of many government jobs, to give more perspective and better orientation. In-service training is not for a single uniform objective, it is for many different objectives.

Since situations are so different, training devices so numerous, and objectives so diverse, there is a real danger that the service may try to move too fast, by adopting standard patterns that do not meet the real needs. If such programs do not produce results commensurate with expenditures of money and labor, in-service training may be in part discredited as a fad of a particular period.

On the other hand, if the service proceeds more slowly and personnel men and administrators co-operate first in analyzing the problem in each situation and then developing a well-considered program for meeting that situation, in-service training may well be a fundamental in a more efficient civil service. The ideals are excellent, but it will take sound personnel engineering and administration to make them real operating forces. For that reason it is well to bear in mind the old proverb, "More haste, less speed."

Pisgah Deer Hunt To Open November 7

4,500 Animals in Herd on Preserve
Hunters Will Be Allowed One Kill Each
Season Opened to Thin Out Overpopulation

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 15.

The biggest single hunting event in North Carolina and one anticipated throughout the Southeastern States is the annual Pisgah deer hunt, held every fall in the Pisgah National Game Preserve in western North Carolina. This year's hunt will extend from November 7 to December 3, according to the U. S. Forest Service, which supervises the hunt in conjunction with the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development. A total of 1,600 hunters will be allowed to participate in the hunt, but no hunter will be allowed to hunt more than three days.

4,500 in Herd

A herd of approximately 4,500 deer roam the ridges and valleys of the 100,000-acre Pisgah preserve. Approximately 150 black bear also are to be found in the more remote recesses of the forest. The supply of food in the preserve is inadequate for so large a herd, especially in view of the fact that almost a thousand fawns are born every year on the preserve.

As a result, the Pisgah Forest preserve is opened every fall and adventurous huntsmen are permitted to try their luck, in an effort to reduce the herd to a number that can be adequately cared for.

Hunters are allowed to kill either buck or doe, but each hunter is allowed only one kill, after which he is automatically disqualified. If a huntsman accidentally crosses the path of a bear, he is allowed to kill it, but that also disqualifies him from the remainder of the hunt, since only one bear or deer can be killed by one hunter.

Few Bears Bagged

Last year hunters seemed to prefer to treat the bears in the preserve with more circumspection than the deer, since only 10 bears were killed during the month-long hunt as compared with 709 deer.

Applications to participate in the hunt always exceed the number that can be accepted, with the exceptions of those on the "black list" for violations of the regulations in previous years. Only 1,200 applicants will be accepted for the main hunt, the "check-in, check-out" hunt. The other 400 will participate in the wilderness hunt. In the latter hunt, only men in good physical condition are allowed to go into the preserve to stay for three days, carrying their own camping equipment and paraphernalia, and hunting under rugged and primitive conditions.

In the main hunt, women as well as men will be allowed to participate.

Hunters will check in every morning and out at night, camping on the public grounds adjoining the game preserve, or staying for the night in the nearby towns of Asheville, Brevard, Hendersonville, Pisgah Forest and Waynesville.

The main hunt is conducted in three-day periods, starting every Monday and Thursday during the four weeks. About 150 hunters will be allowed in each group.

Approximately 60,000 acres of the preserve will be covered during the four weeks, the remainder of the preserve being inaccessible due to barren rocks, dense thickets and precipitous slopes. It has been divided into two separate sections, the northern and southern shooting circles. The main hunt will open on the southern area the first week, going on to the northern circle the second week to give the first a rest. The third week will be a repetition of the first.

Cars Permitted

Hunters this year will be allowed to take their own cars into the preserve, to get to and from the "stands" or compartments. This will greatly facilitate transportation, as heretofore trucks have been used to carry the hunters about inside the preserve. Dozens of special officers, rangers and State game protectors will be on hand to supervise the hunt, to guide hunters to their assigned areas, and help them carry out their kill.

Chances for bagging a deer during the hunt this year are better than in previous years, since both doe and buck are legal targets. At first only the bucks were allowed to be killed, but it soon became apparent that the ratio between buck and doe on the preserve was becoming badly proportioned, likely to result in a smaller and scrawnier herd. With the decision of the game and fish division of the Department of Conservation and Development to allow hunters to shoot doe as well as buck, the hunters' chances of bagging his prey have been increased more than 50 per cent.

Successful applicants for the hunt will be required to possess either a resident or nonresident North Carolina State hunting license, in addition to a $7.50 co-operative agreement charge by the U. S. Forest Service. The non-resident license fee is $15.25 and resident license $2.10 and can be obtained either at the checking stations of the hunt or from the North Carolina Department of Conservation and development. State hunting licenses can be obtained in practically all towns throughout the State.

Complete information about the hunt can be obtained from the Forest Supervisor, Pisgah National Forest, Asheville, N. C., or the District Forest Ranger, Pisgah Ranger District, Pisgah Forest, N. C.

After walking 275,097 miles on his route in 46 years, Albert E. Jones, a postman of Sydney, Australia, thinks its time he had a rest. He claims the world's record for a postman on the same route. During his long walk he delivered an average of 1,000 letters and papers a day with practically no errors.

Things in Ecuador Move Slow, But Business Is Not Lacking

Guayaquil, 40 Miles Inland, Is Chief Port
Quito, the Capital, Is 9,500 Feet Above Sea
Temperature Springlike All Year

The searchers after sights new and different have found a new delight in Ecuador, the little country which straddles the Equator on South America's west coast.

Ecuador's chief seagate is Guayaquil, 40 miles from the ocean on the Guayas River and visited weekly by Grace Line Santa ships. The river trip unfolds a panorama remindful of the rivers in China. Tropical shrubs and trees crowd their way to the very edge of the water, and thatched huts set high on stilts peep through the jungle foliage. Over the copper-colored waters the fantastic homemade craft of the natives ply beside great ocean liners—house rafts thatched with bamboo carrying a cargo of native families, their household pets and poultry; gondolas piloted by Indians out to tempt the voyager into buying Panama hats and tagua nut souvenirs; tiny balsa sailboats on their way to market with piles of red and golden fruit—bananas, naranjillas, pineapples, melons and chirmoyas.

Guayaquil with its 100,000 population is a port with a personality all its own—streets leading from the harbor are spread with drying cacao beans and animated with natives bagging them for shipment; spic and span new office buildings, banks, and hotels rise proudly among picturesque old buildings of bamboo. Townsfolk and visitors sit at sidewalk tables enjoying cool drinks or slices of the fruit for which Ecuador is famous—the juiciest, most delicious pineapples to be found anywhere in the world—while itinerant artists wander among the tables making portraits of those they think might buy. Buses blare forth radio programs for the benefit of native passengers who cheerfully pay the fare just to ride around and listen to American jazz.

Everything moves at a much slower tempo than in our own hectic cities, yet there's no lack of business, for Guayaquil is the chief outlet for the country's exports which include cacao bound for the chocolate factories of the world, tagua nuts, the vegetable ivory from which collar buttons and similar articles are made; balsa, the feather-weight wood used in refrigeration and sound proofing, for artificial legs and beach gadgets; the delicious fruits raised in the republic; and Panama hats—the world's finest are produced in Ecuador.

Quito, the capital, about 300 miles inland from the port is another intriguing objective—one of the three oldest cities in the Western Hemisphere. It is reached by rail, a rail and motor combination, or by Pan-American Grace Airways—all of which routes are thrilling, for they cover one of the most gorgeous sections of the Andes. A veritable avenue of mountains and volcanoes—ranging in height from 15,000 to 20,000 feet, leads into the capital which itself is located 9,500 feet above sea level, an elevation which not only affords wonderful mountain vistas but keeps the temperature spring like all year round.

Quito, a city of 120,000, has carefully preserved the old while taking on the new. Centuries-old churches and Spanish colonial residences bear testimony to the skill of stonecutters and architects of former days, while new museums and theaters, clubs and hotels bespeak the progressiveness of the present-day republic. In the Plaza Mayor flanked by a massive cathedral and the government buildings, the band concert still brings forth all classes of people for the evening promenade.

Alligator hunting in launch and canoe is a popular sport provided by the Guayas River above Guayaquil and by the jungle-fringed rivers near Quito—with the voyager having almost as much fun in taking pot shots at the hundreds of orchids hanging from the trees as in shooting the alligators which slither along the bank. The spas near Quito—ranking with those of Europe—attract visitors from all over the continent as well as from the north.

Britannic to Make Nine Cruises To Nassau, Havana This Winter

Cunarder Has One of Biggest Sports Decks
Is New to Service, Replacing Carinthia
Southern Cities Have Historic Charm

According to a Cunard White Star announcement the motor vessel Britannic will make nine cruises to Nassau and Havana during the 1939 winter social season. There will be two seven-day cruises from New York, January 17 and January 25, calling at Nassau and Havana, and seven eight-day cruises, the first on February 4 and the last on April 7, calling at Nassau, Havana and returning to Nassau for passengers who make a stop-over at this port. The minimum rate for seven days will be $87.50; for eight days, $97.50.

The 27,000-ton motor vessel Britannic will be a new ship in this service, heretofore covered by the Carinthia, now allocated to a cruise to South America, South Africa and the Mediterranean.

The Britannic has one of the largest sports decks on any steamer, extending the full width of the ship and being as long as it is wide.

Many Changes in Nassau

Many changes have taken place in Nassau, now well into its third century, yet it retains much of its old-time charm.

Nassau is a popular bathing resort, the beaches being washed by gentle tides that are always temperate, clean and invigorating. And there are nearly always palm fronds to cast their cooling shadows during siestas between dips in the bracing surf.

Big fish may be hunted with ease and pleasure. The giant blue marlin is numerous. So is the wide-spreading sailfish.

Besides its gayety, its cosmopolitan charm and its offerings as a pleasure resort, Nassau possesses many other attractions. Not the least of these is the carefree native life along the waterfront in a setting of varying merchandise, quaint carts and tall masts of sailing craft.

The Charm of Havana

With a foreign charm entirely its own, Havana is often called the Paris of the New World, and yet it is as Spanish as old Madrid. Happiness is in the very air. The visitor can actually feel it. The weather is nearly always perfect.

Being an old and historic city, there are naturally many points of interest in Havana. The romance connected with the Old Fort (La Fuerza) will appeal to people from the United States, as it was De Soto's starting point for the conquest of Florida, which expedition led to the discovery of the Mississippi River. Some months after his departure his wife came here daily to watch for a sight of his returning sails, finally, disappointed, dying of a broken heart.

The walls of this fort are 75 feet high and are surmounted by a tower, on top of which stands a bronze figure of "La Habana," the Indian girl for whom the city was named.

The Costly Fortress of Cabana

The fortress of Cabana, crowning a hill opposite Havana, was completed in 1774 at a cost of $114,000,000, a sum so vast in those days that it led the King of Spain to declare that for such an expenditure the walls should be high enough to be visible across the Atlantic.

The foundations of the Cathedral on Empedrador street were laid in 1656. At one time the church contained the remains of Christopher Columbus. A beautiful Murillo hangs in this Cathedral.

The Prado, the Champs Elysees of the city, is a beautiful central parkway connecting with several parks in the stretch between La Punta and Central Park, the latter the hub of Havana's social life.

Morro Castle, standing like a sentinel at the sea gate, is more than 300 years old.

St. Petersburg To Be Host to Tennis Stars

St. Petersburg, Fla.

Resort hotel society here is becoming more and more tennis conscius as St. Petersburg takes its place as tennis capital of the South with the completion of a battery of magnificent courts in tropical Bartlett Park and the announcement of an impressive program of tournament and exhibition matches which will bring to the city this winter such outstanding stars as Donald Budge, Ellsworth Vines, Fred Perry, Bobby Riggs and Bitsy Grant and virtualy all the top-flight women players in the game.

Society Meets Open November 15

First of the so-called society tournaments will be the Florida west coast championship matches, starting November 15, when the fashionable set will see champions of several sections in action for the first time this season.

In the last three years the city has become a center for high school and college tennis, the game taking hold with the young stars of the future in a phenomenal fashion.

Heading the long season's program of gay social events will be the annual Halloween Ball at the Coliseum Academy Monday night, October 31, with the revelers in the fantastic costumes of witches, gnomes, black cats, goblins, and the like. The ball will be preceded by the city's annual Halloween celebration, when thousands of visitors and residents mill up and down Central avenue in costumes and with noise-making devices, competing for a long list of prizes to be awarded for the most humorous and fantastic get-ups.

J. C. Hughey, local rail executive, is the new president of the St. Petersburg Chamber of Commerce, succeeding LaVerne Thomas, manager of the Peninsula Telephone Co. Douglas Davis, young hotel man, is the new head of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, whose extensive program for entertaining young winter visitors won national honors at the last convention of the United States junior chamber.

Registrations of winter visitors at the city information bureau are running 15 per cent above the total at this time last year, with 45 States, Canada and several foreign countries already represented on the books.

Cereal Raised by Electricity

In a recent electrical show, enough fodder for ten milk cows was grown in a low-roofed shed. This is accomplished by tiers of shallow trays over which is spread grains of corn or any other cereal. Electric heat applied to the tray acts so quickly and efficiently that ten inches of growth can be brought about in eight days.

Maori Chief Greets Airmen

New Zealand history was made by a seaplane which flew 200 miles from the naval base at Auckland to make a descent on Lake Taupo, largest lake in the country. The first person to greet the naval officers was the paramount Maori chief, Tupara Maniapoto, who went out in his motor launch.

aside the innumerable so-called "special attention" wees. A Presidential uroclamation might well call on us to think through and discuss some of these issues and make it the patriotic duty of all of our means of cummunication to contribute to this national discussion program.

Liberty Necessary

Can discussion muzzle the guns? No one can be too hopeful in answering this question. What people in a democracy of free speech may be able to know and understand through free discussion may give us reasonably adequate solutions of war-breeding problems. But in those parts of the world where discussion is not free, where the carriers of information and ideas are strictly controlled, where the real issues are approached through emotionalized symbols, there may be no chance to stay the impatient fingers at the triggers.

When we realize what the facilities of a free press and a free radio might mean in restraining belligerency and making possible the rule of reason in some other countries, we must determine to hold fast to these free institutions ourselves. It is time to repudiate the discredited idea that we may best hold fast to these free institutions by not putting them to the test of free discussion. This is the counsel of those who do not trust the ways of democracy. Whatever may be the outcome of the present unfinished crisis, the world has need of these free institutions and of this public discussion system. Ultimately, the guns will be muzzled by the power of reason, free to function with the aid of all modern devices of communication. The great majority of the people must know in a general way how to get peace before it can be had. War is the failure of public opinion to find solutions to real problems. No people want war. All people fear war. Those who go to war do so because the people who didn't want to go couldn't find the way to peace.

We who have stood on the brink of war and have seen people fitting gas masks to their faces, we who have heard the rumble of guns, we who have had a glimpse of the chaos of a world rupture in trade and commerce, we cannot be lulled back into quiescence. We feel the responsibility for finding the road to peace. How else shall we find it except as we seek it together and discuss freely and fully our several views? The quiet strength which comes from knowledge may in the end overcome the blustering bravado which is born of ignorance and prejudice. The shortest road to peace is the one that really gets there. The forces of education and democracy recognize that road as the product of patient study and discussion, of free speech and free communication.

Miami Gets New Airport At $2,500,000

Miami.

A $2,500,000 airport, described by experts as the world's largest and most modern, will be the latest addition to accommodations for the 50,000 or more vacationists who travel to Miami annually by way of the skies.

The expansion of landing facilities has been made necessary by the steadily growing air traffic from northern cities and from South American points to Miami, gateway of the Americas, according to airline officials. There are now 27 clipper ships and a large fleet of 21-passenger Douglas planes operating out of Miami.

The new field, which has been approved by three Federal agencies, not only will facilitate further transportation of the 3,000,000 annual winter vacationists, but will provide more adequate space for the 1,500 or more planes that use Miami's landing fields each year.

Several additions have been made recently to the network of air lines that spread out to the North and South from the Nation's largest foreign air terminal. National Air Lines has added feeder lines connecting the South-Central and Southwestern States to direct service into Miami, and Pan-American Airways has placed additional flying boats to serve the wide area around the Caribbean.

Construction of the new airport calls for completion of the first hangar in time for the Eleventh Annual All-American Air Maneuvers, a mid-winter resort highlight that draws the leading speed and stunt flyers of two continents to Miami. The maneuvers, opening January 8, will wind up a week of nationally important sports activity featured by the Orange Bowl Football Game on January 2.

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn.

"Don't finesse against your partner," used to be one of the first rules pounded into the head of a beginner, but contract has opened vast resources of play unknown to the experts of the older games; and it is no longer a faux pas, but often a brilliant expedient to finesse partner's lead.

However, as one modern expert puts it, "95 per cent of the finessing against partner is done in pure meanness, 5 per cent for other and better reasons." Therefore, while a player may no longer feel obliged to blindly follow the rule, he had best do so unless convinced beyond doubt that another play will gain more.

Finessing against partner is justified when it is part of a plan to:

Preserve entries for partner's suit.

Preserve entries for player's own suit.

Mislead opponent into a losing finesse.

Whenever the leader's partner holds a higher honor than one in dummy, it is usually advisable to save it until he can kill dummy's honor with it.

Supposing partner leads the deuce of hearts, and dummy and you have this arrangement of cards:

Dummy
H K 7 5

Partner — You
H 2 — H A J 6

Dummy plays the heart five. For you to play the jack is to finesse against your partner, yet if you play the ace and declarer has the queen, you will set up two tricks for him. By playing the jack, you can hold him to one, for your ace will kill the king whenever it is played.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ K J 9 8 ♡ 7 5 3 ◇ J ♣ A Q 9 6 3

WEST: ♠ 10 5 4 ♡ A 10 8 4 2 ◇ 9 8 7 2 ♣ 5

EAST: ♠ 7 6 3 2 ♡ K J ◇ K 6 5 4 ♣ K 8 2

SOUTH: ♠ A Q ♡ Q 9 6 ◇ A Q 10 3 ♣ J 10 7 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT.	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 4 ♡

Today's hand, taken from championship play, raises the finessing of partner's lead to a fine art. Here East deliberately finesses against his partner, blocks the suit, and forfeits a trick, all to mislead the declarer and prepare the way for his downfall. Had East played normally, declarer would have a method of combating the defense and fulfilling the contract.

West leads the four of hearts, and from the bidding and the strength of his own hand, East realizes there is no chance for his partner to have the ace of hearts together with a side entry. Having only two hearts, East will be unable to reach his partner's hand if he plays the king and then the jack for declarer's only chance is to hold up with the queen on the second round, hoping for a five-two split. If declarer has the ace, East's play makes no difference.

Completely fooled by the false-card, declarer takes the queen, and when the club finesse fails the defense easily defeats him by West (who fortunately counted the hearts) overtaking his partner's heart king and running the rest of the suit. Four hearts and a club trick score a set of down one.

With the normal play of the heart king, followed by the jack declarer would hold off the second round and when East gained the lead with the club king, he would have no heart left to return to his partner. In this way the contract would be easily made.

Bridge

By Marian H. Barre

BRIDGE CHAMPIONSHIPS in various parts of the country, but all under the authorization of the American Contract Bridge League, have become so numerous that the national organization now finds itself with two tournaments scheduled for the same week-end. The central Virginia championships at Lynchburg and the eastern Pennsylvania tournament in Reading both begin on Friday afternoon, October 23, both with women's events.

From the local point of view the timing is most unfortunate. Capital players have been going to Reading for the past five years, while on the other hand Lynchburg's first annual in 1937 drew a record-breaking delegation from this city. Several Washingtonians are in the embarrassing position of having dates for both tournaments. As engagements to play are often made a year ahead it is easy to see how this might happen. The unavoidable decisions are causing headaches.

Lynchburg's proximity doubtless will tip the scales in its favor. That, and the fact that 15 local players are members of the Virginia tournament committee. They include: Mrs. Frances Barry, Mrs. Charles Boyce, E. B. Conolly, Commander W. A. Corley, Col. E. B. Bray, Thomas Hamlin, Mrs. A. R. Hodgkins, Mrs. D. H. Mott, E. A. Perkins, A. M. Sheppard, Richard Skinner, D. E. Sergeant, J. G. Stone, Mrs. E. B. Swanson and Mrs. C. W. Zimmer.

The Virginia card will be run off in two days, women's pairs playing on Friday afternoon, with a one-session team championship held that evening. The Millner Trophy and the News-Daily Advance Trophy will be awarded to the titlists in these games. Open pairs will play Saturday in an afternoon qualifying session, the finals are slated for the evening session. The usual special trophy game is provided for players eliminated from the opens, and for others who have not taken part in it. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Taylor, of Bluefield, Va., will defend the Bell Trophy for open pair championship. The tournament ends with this event. National master points will be awarded in all three games. Scoring will be done by Ellis Butt, of Norfolk.

Reading has four events on its program; women's and mixed pairs, both one-session games, to be played on Friday. Open pairs, through two sessions Saturday, with a two-session team match concluding the activities on Sunday evening. Some notable trophies may be garnered at Reading. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Kreider, of Harrisburg, now hold the Nicolls Cup; all other trophies must be wrested from the Philadelphians who cleaned up the Pennsylvania tournament in 1937. The wins will carry national master point awards, in accordance with the strength of the field. Russell J. Baldwin will direct.

In this city the standard of play gets higher every year! The Washington Bridge League now defines an intermediate player as one who has not won a national master point. Hence, the intermediate event in the coming District tournament will be open to a greatly increased number of players. Any member not in possession of a master point, or who has not been a winner, or a runner-up in the event will be eligible.

This new ruling should make the amateur game the most popular event in the program. It has no handicaps about partnership restrictions—two men, two women, or a "mixed" pair may compete. It is a one-session match, which appeals to many players, and the trophy of the Evening Star is one of the handsomest cups in the league's collection. If these inducements were not sufficient, there is also the plaque donated by James H. Lemon which goes to the duplicate club whose members have made the best record in the event.

The Washington Bridge League started off the 1938-39 season with 29 tables in play, divided into three Mitchell pair sections and a priority match in the Clifford challenge cup series. The games were held at the Hotel Shoreham on Wednesday, October 5. This coming Wednesday, the first game of the new team season will be held at the same hotel.

It was "Teachers' night" in the pair game; three members of the profession winning three out of four personal tops in section 1. They were Mrs. Alma Byrne and Mrs. Katherine Priest, in the north-south, and Mrs. T. M. Boyle in the east-west. Mrs. Boyle was paired with Mrs. Lillian M. Leddy in an able partnership. Mrs. John Seward carried the professional honors in section 2, playing with Mrs. Jere Crane. This partnership made several wins during the league's summer season. In section 3, Mrs. Dixie T. Wright won in the east-west with Mrs. B. Robins; these ladies hold the women's championship of eastern Virginia.

Other winners in the same game were Martin Stark and P. W. Sheppard, Mrs. T. Tidball and Col. E. B. Gray. In the Clifford match section, the Lemon team suffered another defeat, losing to the foursome of Al Roth, J. Brotman, Sam Stamboul and John Mothershed. The team of Commander W. A. Corley, Dr. C. C. McDonnell, F. M. Lake and D. C. Elliott defeated Mrs. Katherine J. Fenton, Miles E. Myers, Miss Mabel Tobin and W. E. Kelly. The Roth team and the Corley team will meet in the final priority round at the next league game to play for the right to challenge the present holders of the Clifford Cup.

It is just about a year ago that "peace broke out" in the bridge world through the formation of the American Contract Bridge League, the national association that reconciled the difficulties of two rival organizations, both seeking dominance in the national field. Harassed players drew a sigh of relief; they were tired of strife; they wanted to settle down and play bridge.

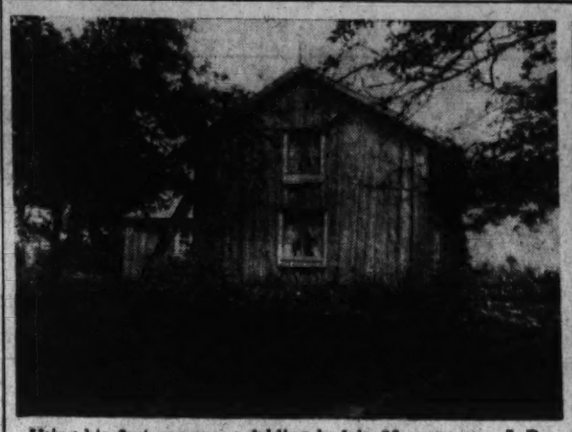
And now, less than 12 months after the first official meeting and election of the A. C. B. L. a group of players have announced the formation of a new organization, the North American Bridge Association, which plans to invade the tournament field. The following officers and directors are in charge, to serve until the election on January 1, 1940: George S. Johnston, Buffalo, N. Y., president; L. C. Urquhart, Ithaca, N. Y., vice president; R. E. Needham, Greenville, Pa., secretary. Directors include Ray Eisenlord, Erie, Pa.; R. J. Henderson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; James H. Higgins, Akron, Ohio; W. L. Jenkins, Cleveland, Ohio; Henry P. Jaeger, Cleveland; B. N. Katzen, Pittsburgh; Ralph R. Richards, Detroit, Mich.; L. A. Snyder, Canton, Ohio; Dr. D. D. Tomb, Youngstown, Ohio; W. H. Weber, Clarksburg, W. Va., and C. M. Whitehead, Pittsburgh.

The announcement states that: This organization has been formed because its founders believe that it is for the best interests of the duplicate bridge players of the United States and Canada not to have the business of conducting tournaments monopolized by one concern, but rather open to fair competition in accordance with recognized democratic principles."

Addresses of the officers and directors seem to indicate that the organization is a revolt against Eastern dominance in bridge affairs. It will be noted that there are no New Yorkers on the board. Washington sponsors also are missing. Whatever may be the merits of open competition in the tournament field is a question that can only be answered by "the customers" themselves. If players feel there is a place for a rival league, the new N. A. B. A. will succeed. If on the other hand they want peace and amity, and things as they are, the association at Greenville will be just another flash in the pan.

Camera Angles

By Arthur Ellis



Using his first camera, a folding kodak, 35 years ago, J. P. Johansson made the photograph above of his mother's farmhouse in Sweden. His "picture sense" is apparent in his very first efforts with a camera. Today the nationally known camera artist and international exhibitor treats such homey subjects as an old pair of shoes with the results shown at the right. Utilizing a patch of sunlight, he dramatizes his subject and produces an interesting picture of technical excellence.

"I've been using a camera ever since I was 15," J. P. Johansson was saying over the clatter of dishes during the noon rush hour in a downtown cafeteria, "but they say life begins at 40 so I was only 10 last month."

As we attempted a series of mental calculations, the international exhibitor, nationally known cameraman and employe of Uncle Sam's Aerial Photographic Laboratory, pushed back his chair, lit a cigar, then handed us an 8 x 10 enlargement.

Pointing to the print, a photograph of an old farmhouse in a setting of pastoral loveliness, he said, "I made that picture of my mother's old home in Sweden with my first camera, an old folding kodak, when I was 15. Of course that print is a copy and enlargement of the original contact. If I had to do that same shot over again after my years of experience with the camera, I am sure that I would make the picture from the very same angle, using the same composition. Although I knew nothing of composition or photography, I am sure that I had picture sense."

Picture Sense Needed

According to this camera artist, it is the lack of "picture sense" that is the common fault of amateur photography today. And his knowledge of amateur photography comes from a direct contact with the cameramen. He has spoken to nearly every camera club on one or more occasions, has examined hundreds of amateur prints and his services are in constant demand.

Speaking of "picture sense" he explained:

"A picture begins in the top of the head, and is likely to end there as well. It doesn't begin in the camera or film material. Nor does it begin in optical perfection, chemical purity, or mechanical ingenuity. It begins when we have developed not so many rolls of film or so many prints, but "picture sense." Without sense there is no feeling, and without picture feeling no picture was ever conceived much less completed. Through contact with hundreds of aspiring pictorialists I have come to the unalterable conclusion that some people are blessed with an inherent feeling for line and composition, while others are not. Some may acquire this feeling for line or "picture sense" through close contact with things pictorial or by laborious efforts; others should give up the attempt and go in for other hobbies."

We reminded Mr. Johansson that there are a good number of amateurs who get a kick out of making their snapshots and messing around in darkrooms to watch something pop up on sensitized paper in developing trays.

"What have they got then, he demanded, "a print that has no meaning that gives no satisfaction. If they want a genuine kick out of their efforts they should try to produce something that would find its way to an international salon. I've had that pleasure a few times and I can say that for a grand and glorious feeling the experience is hard to beat. It is a joy of accomplishment which could be shared by many more amateur photographers if they would take up pictorialism in earnest instead of messing around to see something pop up."

Doesn't Like Alibis

Mr. Johansson has no patience with the amateur who blames his inability to produce good pictures on his meager equipment, and the amateur who always says "if I had this" or "if I had that." He claims that the photographic "ifs" are the mumps and measles of the aspiring pictorialist, young or old. He says that we have the camera collectors, gadgeteers, gamma curve connoisseurs, fine grain experts, emulsion speed fanatics and temperature control fanatics— all without a picture to show for a lot of headaches and a flock of currency.

Two years ago Mr. Johansson bought a Rolleiflex to replace the 9 x 12 cm. Ernaman Reflex that he had been using. There was a commercial contest on in Atlantic City with $2,000 in prizes to be given away. He was determined to make a picture that would win a prize to pay for his camera and expenses to Atlantic City. He made a picture of a child, titled it "Little Man" took it to the resort city and returned with a cash prize that paid for his camera and trip. All of Mr. Johansson's pictures are made with the Rolleiflex.

He came to Washington four years ago to take a position with the Government in a photographic capacity. For 25 years he had been a portrait photographer in the Middle West. He made no pictures after his working hours during those years. And it has been only since his employment here that he has turned to the camera as a hobby. He joined the Leica Club a year ago and has been a most active member since. He thinks that club work is of vital importance to the ambitious amateur.

Laboratory Not Elaborate

Despite his success as an exhibitor Mr. Johansson does not have an elaborate laboratory nor expensive lighting set-up. He does his work in a basement and makes use of the wash tubs. One of his best pictures, a friend posed in a Mexican costume, has been shown in three international salons, although the lighting consisted of but one $1.50 portable light set on a music stand and the subject photographed with an army blanket serving as a background.

He reads everything about photography that he can get his hands on but says he only believes half of it. He digests the fundamentals, then learns by working things out for himself.

We asked him what he thought about Washington as a field for the pictorialist.

"Any modern city provides poor material for the pictorialist," he answered. "I would like it better if there were more market districts, dilapidated waterfronts. The buildings here are too cold and snooty. They are too correct, symmetrical. Nature is not symmetrical. That is why the few good pictorial things have been done over so many times here."

He thinks that the miniature camera is responsible for the tremendous interest shown in photography in recent years. He says it was the inception of his interest in photography as a hobby.

The exposure meter is the one accessory that he thinks absolutely necessary to the photographer. He thinks the individual is a fool to think that he can guess exposures when a meter reading is so simple.

Anyone who has ever seen any of Mr. Johansson's prints is immediately struck by the amazing technical excellence.

"The amateur does not keep in mind," he said, that the print is the ultimate achievement. The negative is only the means to the end. And of course a very important means. The negative should be made to suit that end. He should know the contrast range of his printing medium. The negative should be made to meet that range."

He relit his cigar and, gazing past us at the white tiled wall, he seemed lost in his own thoughts. Finally he leaned across the table and whispered to us in a confiding tone:

"I was just thinking what I could do now with a camera in my native Copenhagen, Denmark."

Walter S. Fishel, of Boonsboro, Md., explaining his 1847 United States stamps to C. Hercus Just, left, president of the club, and Mrs. Josephine Hoppe, secretary, at a meeting of the club Tuesday

At the Chess Table

Willard M. Mutchler

One of the most interesting rapid transit tournaments in years was conducted at the Capital City Chess Club last Saturday when no less than 14 strong entrants struggled to gain the coveted first prize, a copy of the official book of the world championship match. Martin C. Stark, former District champion, emerged triumphant with the exceptionally fine score of 12 wins and 1 loss. Capital City champion, H. A. Rousseau, the runner-up, was the only contestant to defeat Stark, but himself bowed to V. L. Eaton and Thomas Stevenson. Another former District champion, D. H. Mugridge, finished third after losing to the two leaders and drawing with P. D. Smith. The event was a handicap affair with T. Stevenson, K. Porter and H. B. Richardson in Class C, and P. D. Smith, G. F. Chase, W. B. Mundelle, C. W. Stark and E. M. Weeks rated Class B. The remainder of the field was of the highest order of Class A strength. The final standings:

Player.	W.	L.	Player.	W.	L.
M.C.Stark.	12	1	Stevenson....	6	7
Rousseau..	11	2	Chase	5½	7½
Mugridge..	10½	2½	Mundelle ...	5½	7½
Mengarini.	9	4	C.W.Stark..	4	9
Knapp....	8	5	Weeks	4	9
Eaton	7	6	Porter	2	11
Smith	6½	6½	Richardson.	0	13

The Capital City Club's championship tournament, second in importance only to the District fray, is scheduled to get under way on October 22. The entrance list is not at hand, but with Martin Stark, present Champion Rousseau, Mugridge, Jacobs, Eaton, Knapp, Mengarini, DuBois and others of like caliber available, much in the way of high-class chess is assured. The regular annual minor tourney will run concurrently.

Turover Prize Donor

I. S. Turover, local lumberman and chess master par excellence, was the donor of a $50 brilliancy prize recently awarded to United States Champion Samuel Reshevsky for his remarkable play against A. C. Simonson in the National Chess Federation's great tournament. Former World Champion Dr. Emanuel Lasker was the judge who made the award. Readers may verify the soundness of his decision from the appended score. Reshevsky's thirty-fourth move is reported to have evoked a spontaneous burst of applause from upwards of 300 spectators, an occurrence unusual in chess tournament realms.

Is Kashdan and I. Horowitz, co-winners of the American Chess Federation's championship tournament, have finally decided to play a match of ten games to settle the tie. One of these games is scheduled in Philadelphia, and another in Baltimore. Negotiations are under way to have one or more of the games played in Washington, and local fandom would doubtless welcome their successful culmination.

The Washington Philatelist

By William M. Stuart.

Are there too many auctions at stamp clubs? For some time Washington collectors have been attending many sales at which the disposal of an unusually large number of lots was deemed most remarkable. Prices must have been thought right, else sales would have been less.

W. M. STUART.

The auction sale must necessarily be a feature of all philatelic organizations but some collectors fear "overdoing." Many club members place the auction among the important feature of any society for the reason that it supplies at low cost, generally speaking, material not to be obtained in any other way. Then, too, bidding often furnishes keen rivalry attractive to many.

There are many philatelists who firmly believe auction sales should be restricted in number. Too much of any one feature is unwise, yet there are those desiring the extreme in all things and weekly auction sales are most certainly within this category. Low prices may be popular for the buyer but disastrous to those who must furnish the material. Recently there have been auction sales of United States stamps at prices so low as to discourage any collector resorting to such sale to dispose of duplicate stamps. Managers of club auctions should exercise great care in the selection of material and the question of reserve. This latter feature is discarded altogether in some circles. Auction rules should be carefully written and enforced.

The mail auction sale has grown extensively and with all clubs holding several monthly there seems a real danger of too many sales for the good of philately.

Stamps

The 16-cent, black, Abraham Lincoln stamp, of the new regular series will be placed on first-day sale at the Philatelic Agency and Washington postoffices on Thursday. On October 27, the 17-cent Andrew Jackson stamp will be placed on sale and on November 3 the 18-cent Grant stamp will be sold first-day in Washington.

The 15-cent James Buchanan stamp was placed on first-day sale in Washington on Thursday. The figures for the 14-cent Franklin Pierce stamp, released on October 6, have been announced by the Postoffice Department when 124,596 stamps were sold, amounting to $17,443.44. There were 49,819 first-day covers canceled, of this number 2,538 were blocks of four.

The designer of the 14-cent Pierce stamp was William K. Schrage, from a Presidential medal furnished by the United States Mint; the portrait was engraved by Leon C. Kauffman and the lettering by James T. Vail. The 15-cent Buchanan stamp was reproduced from a bust by Henry Dexter, now in the National Museum; Robert L. Miller, jr., the designer; portrait engraver, Charles A. Brooks, and lettering, James T. Vail. The 16-cent Lincoln stamp was reproduced from a bust by Sarah Fisher Ames, now in the Senate gallery; designer, William K. Schrage; portrait engraver, Carl T. Arlt, and lettering, James T. Vail. The 17-cent Johnson stamp was from a bust by William C. McCauslen, now in the Senate gallery; designer, William K. Schrage; portrait engraver, Leo C. Kauffmann, and lettering by James T. Vail.

Third Assistant Postmaster General Ramsey S. Black has once more announced the distribution of the 25-cent air mail stamp, the transpacific, was discontinued in February when the rate was reduced to 20 cents and that the 20-cent stamp only should be issued to patrons.

First Assistant Postmaster General W. W. Howe has announced that in the near future air mail service will be inaugurated on Route AM-42, from Houston, Tex., via Corpus Christie, Tex., to Brownsville, Tex., and from Houston to San Antonio, Tex. Special cachets will be authorized.

A series of air mail stamps will be issued in honor of the first Central American philatelic exhibition, to be held in Guatemala City, Guatemala, during the week of the National Fair, November 20 to 27, 1938. There will be six stamps, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 10 centavos values.

Costa Rica has issued the 20c deep blue, surcharged "1938." This is a reissue of the 20c showing a view of Columbus at Cariari, issued as type A77 in 1923.

Papua has issued five air mail stamps in honor of the "Jubilee of Declaration of British Possession." The designs are the same on each of the stamps, showing a view of Port Moresby Harbor, with a modern liner anchored and a biplane over the water. The portrait of King Georve VI with crown, is in the right upper corner, with inscription at the bottom, "1888" in the left corner and "1938" in the right. The values and colors: 2p red, 3p ultramarine, 5p green, 8p brown and 1sh violet.

Yugoslavia has issued its annual Red Cross semi-postal stamp, 50b value. The stamp shows a wounded soldier being cared for by Red Cross nurse. The design of the stamp is of the poster type and there are blue, red, yellow and green colors, the values being the same.

The Washington Air Mail Society will meet tomorrow evening at Hotel Lafayette.

Among the lively and prosperous philatelic societies is the Cicero-Berwyn Philatelic Society, S. P. A., Chapter 84. It conducts weekly meetings and a regular Saturday afternoon radio program over Station WHFC. Plans are now being made for the third annual exhibition to be held November 5 and 6 in the Olympic Building, 2136 South Sixty-first Court, Cicero, Ill.

During the S. P. A. convention Russell J. Broderick, newly elected president of the S. P. A., and J. Edward Vining, vice president, and William M. Stuart, stamp editor of The Post, made addresses over WHFC and were made honorary members of the society.

Its officers are: Anthony Kovanic, president; Robert Bures, vice president; Mrs. Martha L. Geuther, secretary; Joseph Parchim, treasurer; and directors, Roman Reinowski, jr., chairman; Charles Burnham, George Schabow, Richard Robinson and Otto Ocenasek.

F. R. Rice, director of the Society of Philatelic Americans, visited the Maryland Philatelic Society, Branch 52, at Baltimore, October 7, and gave an account of the recent Chicago convention. The 1939 convention will be held in Baltimore and already committees are at work in connection with the affair. Wilson P. Smith is president of the Baltimore S. P. A. group and also president of the Baltimore Precancel Society that will serve as host of the Precancel convention in 1939 to be held a week prior to the S. P. A. convention. Mrs. W. C. Rice accompanied Mr. Rice and spoke on the work of the women in connection with national society affairs.

Collectors Club

Walter S. Fishel, of Boonsboro, Md., displayed his unusual collection of United States stamps, many of which were also shown at the S. P. A. exhibition in Chicago this summer, at the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., Tuesday evening. Four large frames of 1847 stamps, all on cover, were among the 15 frames on display.

The rare Wheeling precancel, and unusual railroad, steamboat, express, numeral and colored cancelations were shown. A dozen frames of stampless covers dating from 1784 to 1840 contained highly prized concelations and postal markings.

Speaking of his collection, Fishel told of purchasing several tons of "waste" from a bank in Hagerstown, which closed recently and of the stamp treasures found in it.

The Collectors Club will hold a special program during National Philatelic Week, November 13 to 19, and will participate in the "round-up" of local stamp clubs to be held at the Carlton Hotel, November 10-12. F. A. Bickert conducted an auction sale Tuesday evening. Next week W. Duncan Patton, of McHenry, Md., will exhibit stamps telling the story of the Panama Canal.

WHERE NEW YORK'S WORLD FAIR WILL BE HELD

Aerial view of the buildings as they appear today, six months before the opening of the exposition, which is expected to attract visitors from all over the world.

PACIFICA

Mythical queen of the Pacific, towers 80 feet high, and was recently unveiled after two years' work by the nationally famed artist, Ralph Stackpole. The giant statue was completed for San Francisco's Golden Gate Exposition next year. Miss Bettina Norberg stands at the base.

HOLY LAND

Following renewed warfare in the Palestine area, England has found it necessary to increase the military forces in the section, and today armored trains travel over narrow gauge roads transporting fresh troops.

FLOWERS FOR THE CONQUERERS

Sudetens have been forbidden to toss floral bouquets whenever Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler appears in military parades. However, the rank and file of Nazi troops who occupied the partitioned area of Czechoslovakia appeared to enjoy the flowers bestowed on them.

AN OVATION FOR IL DUCE

The largest crowd that ever packed the square in front of the Piazza Venezia (left) cheered Mussolini when he returned from Munich after the settlement of the Sudeten dispute.

HIGH PRESSURE

New York now boasts the most powerful fireboat in the world. The new firefighter is shown at right with its Diesel-electric pumps throwing 22,500 gallons of water per minute during tests.

STAR-GAZERS

AN interesting organization is the National Capital Amateur Astronomers Association, formed for the education and mutual improvement of its members in the science of astronomy and the encouragement of an interest in this science among others. A group of the members shown above with their battery of six-inch telescopes, all home-made. From left, Calvert Carroll, Clarence A. Peterson, Stephen Nagy, president; B. T. Sockrider, William S. Barr, S. C. Moore and Byron J. Olson.

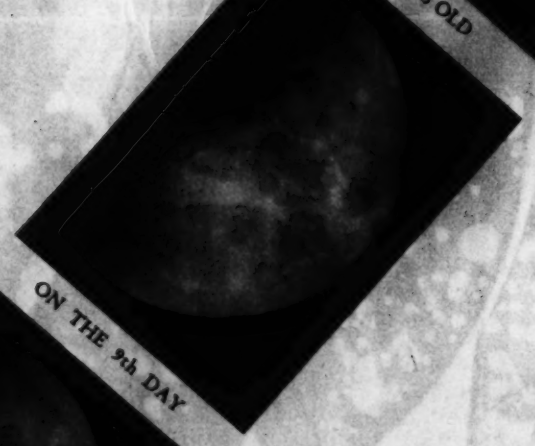
SEEING STARS

A fair member appears to have found something mighty interesting going on up there in the sky. The homemade "scopes" are made from metal, wood and pressed fiber. Mirror at bottom collects light, which is reflected to a prism at top of tube and then reflected to eyepiece on the side.

TESTING CURVATURE

William S. Barr, of Baltimore, using a spherometer to read the curvature of his mirror. Almost as much time is required for testing as is spent in grinding. Lenses are plated with a metal having a good reflecting surface. Silver is used widely, but aluminum is preferred, being less affected by air.

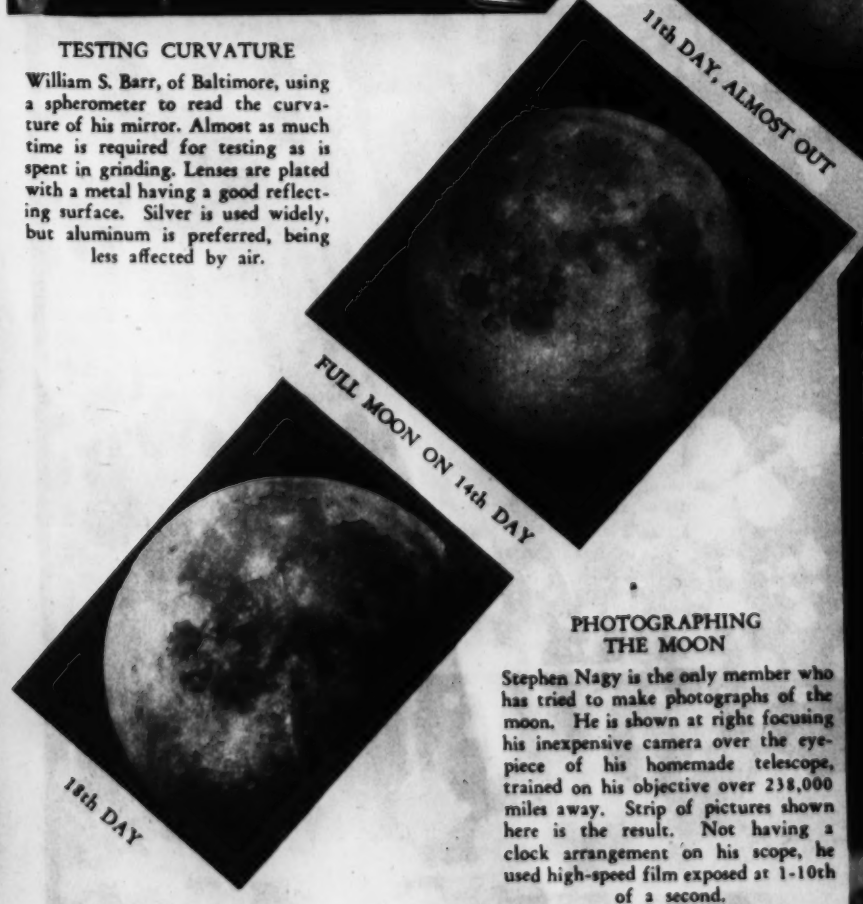


REFRACTING TELESCOPE

shown at right was made by the famous maker of telescopes, Clark. Purchased by the association for $1,100, it is available to any of the members for star-gazing. Seventy-five inches long, it is equipped with a 5-inch lens and has a magnifying power of 360.

GRINDING A NEW LENS AT HOME

Ann L. Smith has started work on a 6-inch mirror. Using the same kind of glass that was used in making the 200-inch mirror being installed at the California Institute of Technology, she will have her mirror ready after 30 hours grinding. Desired curve in the glass is obtained by using coarse carborundum powder. Finely ground iron oxide and rouge are used for the final polish. Strokes are changed during grinding to insure uniformity of the curve.



PHOTOGRAPHING THE MOON

AT HOOD COLLEGE.

In colorful costumes, students from all classes assembled on the stage of Hodson Memorial Theater following dedication ceremonies that inaugurated a program of events ending with an all-college dance at Coblentz Hall. Even Primus, pet setter at the college, was remembered. He celebrated his third birthday and Josephine Hessinger (left), president of the junior class, is shown giving him a ribbon-decorated bone, while Vivian Harter looks on. Natalie Townsend (below), a sophomore, had the role of Robin Hood in one of the skits presented by her class.

Post Staff Photos—Randolph Burruss.

MON AMI.

Nancy McIntyre, freshman, poses with Mon Ami, one of the favorite horses in the show held in the afternoon.

SONG FEST.

Members of the sophomore class as they presented a program of songs. Top honors went to the seniors.

ADVANCE THROUGH KYBER PASS DURING FILMING OF "DRUMS"

A scene from Alexander Korda's forthcoming Technicolor production in which Sabu, the sensational Indian boy, is starred, shows British rescue columns advancing as Ghul's forces break and flee for their lives. The picture is scheduled for release this month.

OFF THE SET

James Chapman, Warner Brothers child star who has just finished her role in "Broadway Musketeers," has other duties when away from the studio. Four puppy dogs recently presented to her require personal attention at feeding time.

FROM "BROTHER RAT"

At the piano we have Johnny Davis, onetime ace swing trumpeteer of the air. Ronald Reagan is resting comfortably on the keys. Johnny is just as versatile on the piano as he is on the trumpet.

FROM SCREEN VERSION OF THE VICTOR HERBERT OPERETTA "SWEETHEARTS"

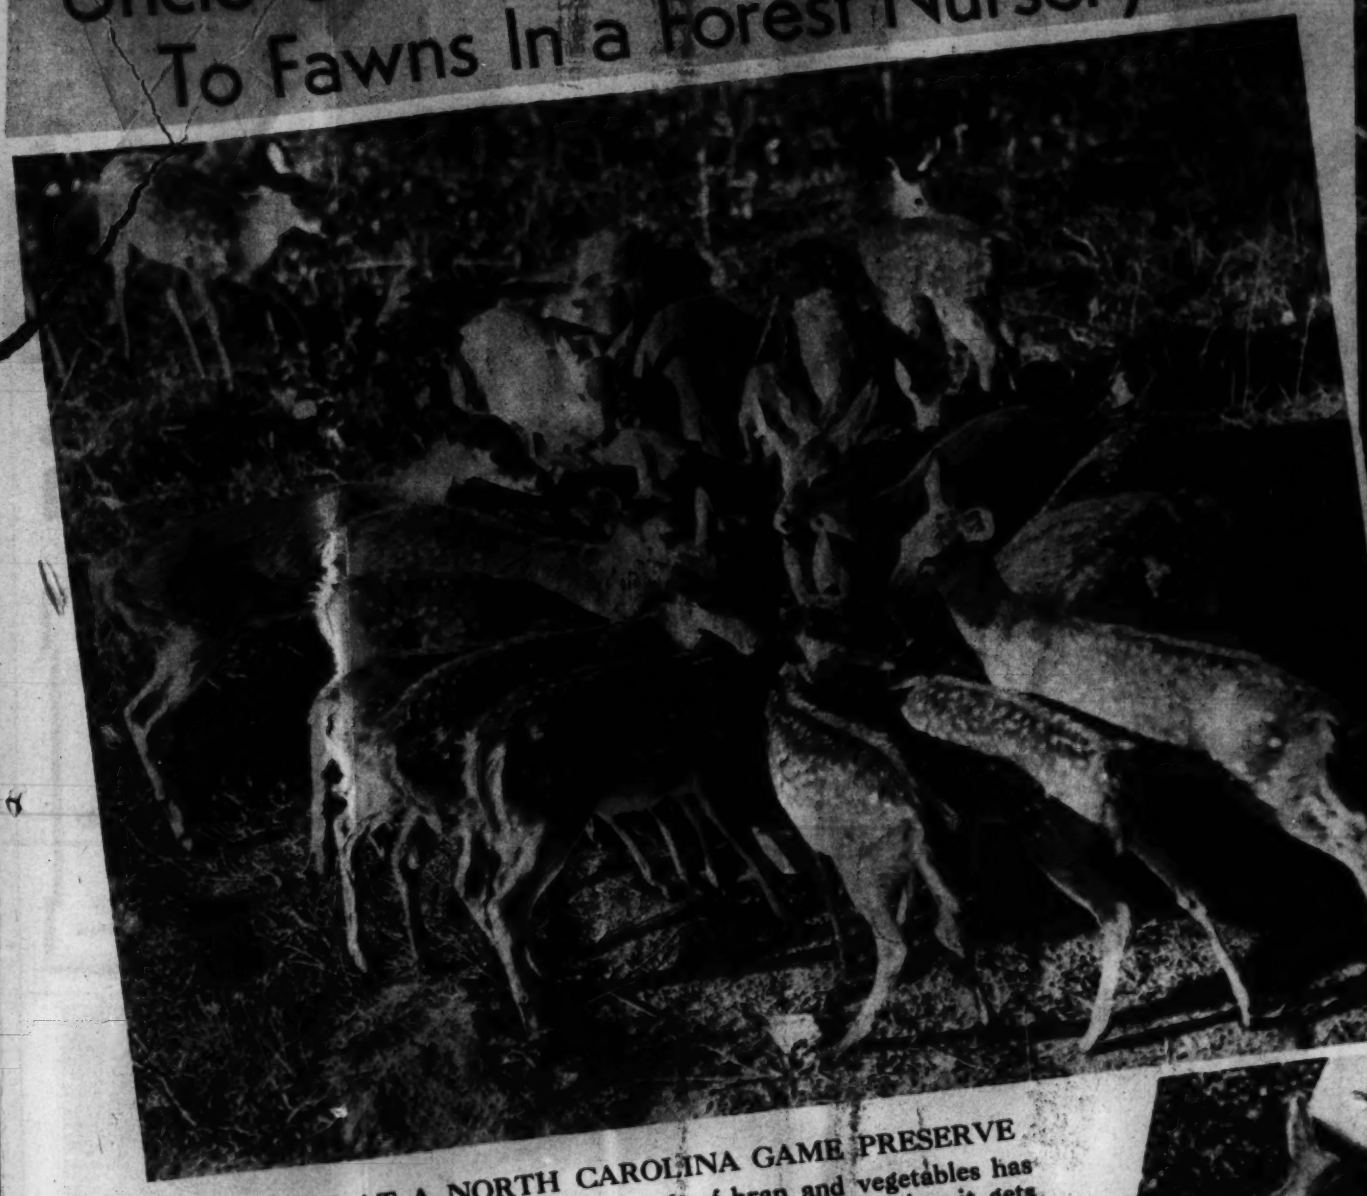
Uncle Sam Plays Mother To Fawns In a Forest Nursery



MEAL TIME AT A NORTH CAROLINA GAME PRESERVE

This herd of fawns crowding around a tub of bran and vegetables has the U. S. Forest Service to thank for the care and protection it gets at the Pisgah National Forest preserve in North Carolina. Since 1934 the Federal Government has conducted the deer nursery, from which fawns are shipped to forests throughout the country when they are old enough to take care of themselves. Game wardens find the new-born deer and natives are also paid $4 each for those they bring in. The young animals are thus protected from their natural enemies, which would otherwise kill a large proportion. Several hundred are shipped from the nursery each year.

Wide World Photos.

SAFE HANDS

A game warden finds a new-born fawn in its well-camouflaged hiding place. The youngster doesn't yet realize that he is assured a safe fawnhood.

HEALTHY AND HUSKY

The fawn has been weighed and is made ready for shipment to a distant forest where the deer population is small. After a long journey by truck and rail, he will be turned loose to work out his own salvation.

Stunt Driver Star of 'Suicide' Act

Legs Useless, Her Fingers Make It Up

Paralysis struck at Annette Balthazor's legs, but it could not stop her nimble fingers. The 15-year-old is a prize-winning seamstress, the envy of her classmates and family!

Annette Balthazor.

It's to Annette that her family comes for new costumes. For herself and her sisters, she's made 30 dresses, 10 aprons and 5 blouses. That's not counting the ones she fixed up for her grandmother, with whom she lives in Campbell, Nebr.

"I learned by watching older people sew," says Annette. And did she learn! In a school contest she beat out girls 18 and 20 years old for a prize.

Hopes to Walk.

Each day Annette, a ninth grade pupil, spends up to four hours sewing. She cannot walk unaided, but perhaps that won't last much longer.

"I have hopes that some day I will discard my leg brace and crutches," she says.

(Story by Parade Reporter Carmelita La Porte, Campbell, Nebr.)

Newsfacts—Adversity sometimes chooses the wrong victims, leads them not to despair, but to success. In Vermont, for instance, a crippled boy grew dissatisfied with his crutches, began making his own. He now has a crutch factory. • • In New Zealand a youth with an artificial leg took up rugby football for exercise and became a professional. Other players complained, he was too fast and too rough!

Bone Dolls.

In the jungle of South America native girls play with bones wrapped in bits of blankets. They call them dolls.

In the River!

Customers on Paul Renner's newspaper route thought he looked soggy. He gave no satisfactory explanation.

Paul Renner.

"Oh, I was in the river," was his reply. What he didn't say was that he had rescued a 3-year-old boy who had fallen from his father's boat 20 feet from shore.

Now, he says, "It was a good thing the baby wasn't farther out, or we both would have needed help. I had on all my clothes plus a real heavy pair of shoes."

Paul, 15, lives at 136 West Mahoning street, Danville, Pa.

Pedals All Day To Ill Mother

For 16 hours and 142 miles Thomas Grimstad and Edward Neverman pedaled their bikes. Steep hills were leveled by their churning legs. It grew dark, but that failed to stop them.

Exhausted by their grind but happy, they rode up to the hospital gates.

Tom's mother had been a patient there five weeks. They arrived after hours, so a watchman denied them admittance. But bright and early next morning Tom, 15, and his mother held their belated reunion.

From Watertown, Wis., Tom writes: "We each carried a blanket, extra shirts, trousers, and socks."

He raised hogs to earn money for his bike; has toured the entire State, hopes some day to be a world traveler.

Toni and Lee, Accordion Team, Profiting From Musical Esteem

When the team of "Toni and Lee" swings into a tune on its two accordions people sit up and listen. And among the people who have listened to Leona Marans and Antoinette Charuhas are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and G-Man J. Edgar Hoover.

The girls, both 18, play their accordions to earn money for more lessons. They've had only three years of instruction. During spare time they teach (the accordion, of course) and have earned about $200 each from that and playing.

Play on Air.

The Washington, D. C., girls have played in leading hotels of the Capital as well as hospitals and Government departments. Also, they have appeared on radio broadcasts.

The girls are quite enthusiastic about music for a future. They say, "We are crazy about music. It's part of us. It's our life."

The duet claims the musical distinction of being the first to play Ravel's "Bolero" and Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite."

This fall the girls will be presented in a recital of their own. Many prominent musicians, they say, will be invited.

Leona lives at 2434 Sixteenth street northwest and Antoinette at 333 Jefferson street northwest.

17-Year-Old Member Of Famed Auto Troupe

Jim Lynch, Jr., Performing One of His "Easier" Tricks.

Stunt men call it the Roman ski jump. Nothing to it.

Just two sedans racing down a track so close to each other thir fenders are touching. In the middle of the track rears a four-foot ramp. The cars head for it without slackening.

They zip up it and fly out into space. Two drivers hold tense hands on the controls. The slightest slip would send the cars crashing to destruction.

One driver is known as Little Jimmie. He's 17, and people hold their breaths and wonder if he'll come out right side up when he's at the wheel.

Jim Lynch, jr., of Paris, Tex., is America's youngest automobile stunt driver, a member of a famous troupe of daredevils who thrill spectators throughout the Midwest.

Jim teams up with his father, Jim, sr., who is considered the Nation's greatest stunt star.

"Daddy works out all our stunts on paper," explains Little Jimmie, who is a couple of inches taller than his dad. "He knows exactly what an automobile will do when pitched at a certain angle at a certain speed, and all I've had to do is follow his instructions."

Jim in Working Toge—He's "Little Jimmie" to the Crowd.

Jimmie now is completing his last year of high school. He likes both autos and horses, so his father rigged up a saddle on the hood of a car, made it possible for him to drive from that spot.

Newsfacts—Frequently people ask: What's the good of stunt driving? The answer is the more dangerous the stunts, the safer will be the car ordinary folks drive! • • Engineers estimate 75 per cent of the safety and comfort in passenger cars can be traced to race courses. Four wheel brakes went from stunt cars to passenger autos. • • Manufacturers always take a new model through a tough series of stunts, even crash it over a cliff!

Canny Lad Uses Empty Tin Cans

"By golly," says the tourist passing through Monona, Iowa, "that refreshment stand looks like it's made of tin cans!"

Closer inspection proves the stand is, indeed, made of tin cans. Empty oil cans. By this time the tourist has become a customer of the 13-year-old boy who stands behind the counter.

That's how Ray Fuller, jr., made seemingly useless tin cans work for him both as a place of business and a business-getter.

"My dad runs a super service station," explains the young businessman. "We wondered how his empty oil cans might be used, and finally decided on a stand.

Takes 900 Cans.

"It was a long job—three weeks—because each can was soldered to the one above. After we'd soldered them together in rows, we made a rectangular frame. We drove a nail into each end can to hold them to the frame.

"In all about 900 cans were used. The stand is built on a floor and the floor is mounted on wheels. At night we pull it into the station.

"I sell candy, peanuts, popcorn, gum and cigars, as well as pop and souvenirs. My income averages from $1.50 to $2 a day."

Who Said 'Safety?'

Dorothy Bidden, 16, consented to pose covered by bees for a "bee-safety" demonstration at Norristown, Pa., but officials evidently informed everyone but the bees of the safety part of it.

Dorothy was stung 15 times.

Pilot Sells Papers to Earn Wings

Bill Winslow—Knew He Didn't Have to Have Money and Proved It!

You don't need to be rich to learn to fly. That's what 16-year-old Bill Winslow says, and he's quite able to stand back of that statement. He didn't have any money, but he learned to fly and is one of the youngest solo pilots in the country.

"I have paid for instructions with money earned from a medium-sized newspaper route," the flier writes from 376 Bennett street, North Tonawanda, N. Y. "This proves you do not have to have money to learn to fly."

He did a pretty good job of it, too. Bill began dual instruction last March, built up the required eight hours. As soon as the clock said it was O. K., he hopped up again—alone.

One more thing. Newspaper sales alone didn't pay for the lessons. Bill also builds plane models, occasionally wins a contest or two. He took his prizes in flying time.

Mostly, flying is enjoyment for Bill. But he has an ambition to enter aeronautical engineering as a career. Bill figures model building and flying experience might help.

Newsfacts—Flying isn't nearly so expensive as it used to be. For one thing, the prices of light training and sport planes have dropped to automobile range—and their upkeep is much cheaper. • • In Tennessee, the State operates free flying schools. • • Private club-plan flying has become popular throughout the country. Members buy one plane, take hops in it at nominal cost.

Boy's Arctic Trip No Holiday

Explorer Tells Of Thrills

The heat of the past summer didn't trouble 18-year-old Robert Webster Nutter. He's just returned from two months' exploration of the Arctic in the 88-foot schooner Bowdoin.

Bob, who lives at 3 Storer street, Sanford, Me., made the trip as a member of the college-boy crew which sailed under Commander Donald B. MacMillan, noted Arctic explorer.

Rough Weather.

The trip was no holiday excursion, according to Bob. "We met very rough weather on our trip to Labrador," he recalls, "and the storeroom was partly filled with water. We had cocoa in cardboard cartons and it soaked the salt water. This produced such a disagreeable odor most of the crew was sick."

At Baffin Land, far up on the Canadian coast, the party ran into a 150-mile ice pack. That was a five-day delay.

"On one mountain," continues Bob, "we had climbed to see Peary's Monument. It was very dangerous and we had to be on the lookout for crevices and glaciers, many about 50 feet deep. One boy fell in and the only thing that saved him was the fact he stretched his arms out. Three of us had to lie flat on our stomachs to pull him out."

Eskimo Talk.

Eskimos, Bob explains, vary just like other people. Those in Labrador are quite civilized, like visitors and smoke cigarettes. In Greenland, however, the natives have no connection with the outside world, dislike strangers, eat only raw meat and soften sealskin with their teeth before making boots out of it.

Their language combines words and the longest expression Bob discovered was "parngnanairsimavingmetanvineonirahtanyungnanalatsalungimalunille." It means, "In no way could it be said that I spent any time in jail."

"On one of our explorations of a peninsula two of the boys became lost in a thick fog. We sent three rescue parties and found them after 24 hours of searching; they were sliding down a glacier. They were tired, weak from hunger."

First chance Bob gets he's going to lecture on his trip at high schools and clubs. He took 1,000 feet of movie film and brought back an Eskimo kayak, harpoon and seal tusks.

Newsfacts—Donald Baxter MacMillan, now a weatherbeaten 64, has divided practically all his life between ships and the Arctic. • • Born in Massachusetts, Commander MacMillan started out as a college prof, but soon turned to exploring. • • He was an assistant in a 1908-09 polar expedition, has been making trips to the North almost every year since. • • Lately, he's been taking groups of students on the polar cruises.

Speedy 'Twister' Saves Life of Injured Brother

They wanted to keep their shoes dry, so the Rose brothers, Gene, 12, and Clyde, 9, tried jumping across the little creek.

Gene made it O. K., but Clyde landed in the creek on an old tire rim.

"He puckered up just a little," recalls Gene, "and said he'd bruised his leg. I said 'Let's see,' and when I pulled up his overalls and looked it made me sick. There was his shin-bone sticking right out, and what a cut!

"I knew I had to stop the bleeding some way, so I took off my leather belt and made a 'twister' just below his knee. The bleeding stopped right away.

"The doctor said I did a good job and that Clyde was very lucky. Clyde thinks so, too."

The boys had been hunting in the woods near their home at 3708 U street, Vancouver, Wash.

Youth K.O.'s Thief Armed With Knife

Rost Berry boxes for pleasure, but there is another South African who thinks he would make a good professional.

The man was making a getaway after a hold-up when Rost, 18, entered the scene.

"I chased him into some trees. Dodging about the undergrowth, I came face to face with him. He slashed at me with a knife; I evaded the blow and socked him on the jaw. He was knocked unconscious."

Rost didn't think much of the affair. He finds the mysteries of the earth working seven miles underground in the deepest mine in the world. He gets thrills from the air as a reserve pilot in the air force.

His street address is 58 Loch avenue, Parktown, Johannesburg.

MORE PEOPLE play billiards than any other game except basketball.

Girl Editor Of 'Highest' Daily Paper

Some newspapers say they're the greatest. Others claim they're the biggest. But only one, edited by 16-year-old Ruth Morehouse, can boast it is the highest.

It's the Pike's Peak Daily Herald and it rolls off the presses at an altitude of 14,109 feet—almost three miles up! Situated atop Colorado's famous mountain, the paper prints news of the Peak. It is sold mostly to the 200,000 tourists who come there yearly.

Ruth edits the paper and writes some of the stories. It's published by Sanford Jarrell, her stepfather. Some of Ruth's big stories include an interview with Shirley Temple, blizzards in midsummer and the annual automobile race.

Ruth Morehouse.

"I'm interested in journalism," writes Ruth from Cascade, Colo., where she'll spend the winter. "Writing and gathering news is not dull work.

"Wintertime in the Rockies is lovely and I live in a tiny resort town four miles from my school. There are many miles of trails to wander over. Most days are delightful. The air is so dry we don't mind the cold."

Newsfacts—Not the tallest, but most famous and scenic of Colorado's summits is Pike's Peak. • • Trees grow up 12,000 feet of the mountain, the remainder is snow-covered in winter, bald granite in summer. • • First seen by Lieut. Zebulon M. Pike in 1806, when he was looking over the Louisiana Purchase for President Thomas Jefferson, the peak wasn't scaled until 14 years later. Now there's an auto road to the top.

Pardner, Tree-Climbing Pooch, Really Is His Master's Best Pal

Billy Hurt and Pardner—They Even Share the Housecleaning.

"Why did I name him 'Pardner?' Because he's always with me. He really is a pardner!"

That's 12-year-old Billy Hurt talking about his dog—the same pup that has gained fame around Billy's home town, Norman, Okla., as a tree-climber.

Pardner really does climb. At Billy's command he springs into the fork of a tree and cautiously works his way higher.

Other of Pardner's "tricks" are very useful. For instance, he places his forepaws on Billy's wagon and helps push home loads. Sometimes he pushes Billy. And when Billy cleans house (Billy is housekeeper because both his mother and 17-year-old brother work) Pardner carries out the trash.

Puppy Play.

Such stunts as shaking hands, playing catch, or sitting on a footstool are only "puppy's play" for Pardner.

"Three years ago," Billy writes, from Box 151, "Pardner came to me at school and went home with me. I get awfully lonesome at home by myself, so I knew I needed a partner, and decided to train him to be one. He is very smart."

Near-Perfect, Boy Wins Scholarships

Simon Manson, 17-year-old Brooklyn, N. Y., youth and highest ranking high school graduate in his State, didn't know a word of English until he entered grammar school!

Born in Palestine, he came to the United States at 5, entered school immediately. "Public school career uneventful," Simon says, "but for two grades skipped and a medal for scholarship."

In high school, Simon built up the near-perfect mark of 99.24. It won him a pair of college scholarships totaling $350 a year for four years, and tuition at Columbia University, which he has just entered.

He lives at 561 Gates avenue.

Lions and Lambs Best of Friends In Youth's 'Zoo'

Bob Brumbaugh's zoo at 1 Windermere terrace west, Lansdowne, Pa., has 135 animals that never scrap among themselves, even when the lion lies down next to the lamb.

Well, all right—the animals are toys, but it's still a pretty fancy zoo. And the 12-year-old keeper sometimes has almost as much trouble finding his specimens as Frank Buck has "bringin' 'em back alive" for real zoos.

"I hunted two years for a skunk," he writes, "and I have not yet found a nice monkey or snake." (Ed. note: We've never found a nice snake, either!)

Bob sells magazines and papers for the money to buy his animals, and says that his future ambition is to have charge of a real zoo.

No Competition for Tennis Star

Loretta Reidy—Wants to Be Another Helen Wills Moody.

Loretta Reidy just doesn't seem to have any respect for age. Not when it comes to tennis!

The 12-year-old hasn't any competition in her home town of Wyandotte, Mich. Though she's been playing only a year and a half, Loretta could find no one to put up a fight in her junior class during a city-wide tournament. So she entered the senior women's division—and cleaned up in a field of 40!

"Most every girl tennis player has the ambition to become another Helen Wills Moody," Loretta writes from 465 Sycamore street. "That is my goal."

HE'S ONE OF the world's greatest runners today, but when he was 7 Glenn Cunningham couldn't walk. His legs had been badly burned in an accident.

'I've Built a Business——'

By Tom Burch

I collect and sell seashells and other marine specimens.

Really, my business is primarily a hobby. I have been interested in natural history ever since I can remember. For some time, I gathered fossils and insects. Then, about six years ago, when I was 13, I began my marine collection.

Tom Burch.

At first, I simply picked up shells, crabs and starfish along bathing beaches. That's not very good collecting. A couple of years ago, I borrowed a leaky rowboat, rigged up a dredge of heavy weights and began dragging the bottom of the ocean.

That was hard work, breaking my back rowing an old tub that was so water-soaked and heavy it would have made a good anchor. But this year, I bought an 18-foot fishing boat for my dredging. It is by dredging that most rare specimens are collected. All this time I have lived in California near the Pacific, which has helped. My present home is at 1611 South Elena avenue, Redondo Beach.

I merely sell specimens to help pay for the hobby. I am always adding to my library and equipment. Unfortunately for the business angle, the rare shells that I get from 60 to 600 feet below the sea usually are very small and uninteresting to the layman and average collector. They find a market, however, with more advanced collectors and universities and museums.

I have made sales to people as far away as Borneo and Iceland.

The Philippine National Museum made a good deal with me. I have no idea how many customers I have had since I started my business five years ago, but they number way up into the hundreds.

I contacted them all by advertising and by recommendations from satisfied purchasers. I have ads in nature and hobby magazines. In these I offer a collection of shells for $1 and a free catalogue. I mimeograph my own catalogues. The collections are my "leads." Many people who buy them order more. My best customers, however, are universities and museums all over the country.

Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles written by Paraders. The writers are boys and girls who, by their own initiative and hard work, already have earned places in the business world. Other articles will appear from time to time.

Netman Beats Self, Then Foes

"You are your own chief opponent."

Bobby Jake thought that one over a while. Everyone agreed he was one of the best young tennis players in Wisconsin. Yet in three straight tournaments he had gone all the way to the finals, then "blown up" and lost. In a more important match his temper got the best of him at the very start.

Bobby Jake—Finally Realized He Had a Tennis Future.

"It was all chiefly because of my temperament," Bobby admits.

Licks Temper.

But it isn't the same Bobby who says that. Three years have passed and he isn't being licked by "temperament"—or anything else, for that matter. For the 15-year-old now is boys' champion of the United States.

Bobby had to fight himself for six years. "I have been playing in tournaments that long," he says, "but without any degree of success until I was 12." Then, when ranked third in his State, he realized he might have a tennis future, determined to check his emotions.

A student at Milwaukee University School, Milwaukee, he now plans to go on playing tennis, win honors in senior ranks.

No Crabs

But Fisherman, 13, Uses Net to Save Pal.

Thirteen-year-old Charles Olsen had finished selling his papers and was fishing for crabs at the end of a pier. Along came Louis Seynders, 9, on his bike. The two boys lived on the same street but didn't know each other.

Charles Olsen.

Louis, dismounting from his bike, slipped and fell into the deep water. The bike splashed in after him.

"I tried to grab his bike, but couldn't," says Charles, who forgot all about crab fishing. He forgot everything but his long-handled net.

"Can you swim?" he yelled to Louis.

"No!"

So Charles grabbed the net, leaned far over the pier, told Louis to catch hold.

"I pulled him up a ledge," says Charles. "He was so heavy he almost pulled me in."

Next day, after the excitement cleared away, Louis came to see Charles. He thanked him. The two became friends.

Charles, who sells papers to help his widowed mother, lives at 615 Park avenue, Hoboken, N. J.

Soap-Box King Thought He'd Lost

You speed down the fast concrete track. You gain momentum, go faster and faster, hit the home stretch, a thin strip of sun-heated concrete between 100,000 cheering people. Somebody whips a checkered flag. You slow down. The Soap Box Derby is over.

Everybody is crowding around the other fellow. He won. Well, anyhow you came in second. No one notices you. But suddenly the loudspeakers break into the din: "There has been an error—the winner is not Richard Ballard, but Robert Berger."

Thus Robert Berger learned how it felt to win the All-American Soap Box Derby championship after he thought he had lost. The finish had been so close it was necessary to develop photos to determine the winner.

"I was awfully happy," says 14-year-old Bob, "when I was declared the winner after believing I had won only second place."

To the victor at the Akron, Ohio, race went the following spoils: A $2,000 college scholarship, a silver trophy, a diamond set gold medal and a wrist watch. Also few incidentals, such as seeing a big league baseball double-header, a yacht ride on Lake Erie, an airplane trip and a luncheon with Douglas Corrigan.

"Corrigan autographed my book and shook my hand," writes Bob from Nebraska City, Nebr. "The Chamber of Commerce gave me a portable typewriter."

Bob averaged 43 miles per hour in his best heat! It took the champ four months to get his machine into shape. It's so small he had to take his shoes off to get into the cockpit.

Victory wasn't luck for Bob, but determination. "My brother Billy had raced in Akron in 1937," he explains, "and he was defeated. I made up my mind then to win this year."

Robert Berger Gets Congratulations After the Race of His Lifetime.

Handle Imogene Morrison with kid gloves—she might handle you with boxing gloves! The pretty, 17-year-old girl has been using her dukes in the approved manly art fashion for two years.

Only Imogene, of Yakima, Wash., doesn't fight. She just works out on a punching bag.

"My father"—he's a city patrolman who believes in keeping fit—"taught me most of my routine," Imogene explains. "I spend at least 15 minutes on the platform each day, more if possible. This form of exercise is very beneficial. It teaches one coordination; keeps him in top condition; makes him alert and active, and is a very good muscle builder for the back, shoulders and arms."

There are two important things Imogene would like to explain. First, she has never put her boxing ability to use. Second, she would rather dance.

Roses, Short Stems?

"I'll have," said the snooty young freshman to the student waiter, "two eggs, boiled exactly 3 minutes and 10 seconds; toast, buttered, and be sure it's not too hard; coffee, with cream, but not too much cream——"

"Yes'm," bowed the waiter. "And what special design would you like on the dishes?"

He's Crying Now, But Just Wait a While

Found: A boy who is so anxious to go to school he cries because he's too young!

When Wyatt School, Denver, Colo., opened one extra pupil was presented. He was 4 years old, and wouldn't say anything except that school was beginning and he was there.

Tears gushed out when the teacher told him he was too young.

His Hobby Is Having More of 'Em

Little chance for William Graham ever to become bored!

At 14, the Westerly, R. I., youth lists the following full-time hobbies: gun collecting, modeling in clay, building model airplanes, boats and trains; painting in oils, collecting stamps and coins, minerals and semi-precious stones; playing bagpipes.

"While on a trip to England," Bill says, "I bought a very old flintlock pistol for a reasonable price. This and two pistols bought in Germany started my collection of firearms."

Bagpipes, Too.

Now, whenever Bill takes a trip, he looks for bargains in armaments. He has 12 rifles and many pistols, keeps them in his room, knows the history of each. His prizes are a flintlock inlaid with silver and an old double-barreled rifle, with one barrel on top of the other.

Bill starts a hobby just like that. Two years ago he was impressed with the bagpipe playing in Scotland. He came home with a full set of military bagpipes. In his home town he found a Scotsman to teach him how to play them.

Bill's address: 99 West Broad street.

Newsfacts—Every firearm, from the smallest pistol to the most elaborate machine gun, works the same way; the powder explodes and expanding gases force the projectile out of the barrel. * * Strangely, firearms started 600 years ago, as clumsy cannon requiring two men to operate. * * Word rifle comes from the Danish "riffle," meaning ripple. This referred to the groove in the barrel, invented by some unknown genius, which sent the bullet out spinning.

Cameraman Even 'Bags' Skunks

It takes a good photographer to snap a skunk in natural surroundings. Without the smell, that is.

Fred Sampson, of Barstow, Calif., can do it. He can do lots of things with cameras and wild animals; can make the sort of pictures most photographers only dream. Imagine catching a picture of a pair of nervous chipmunks playing patty-cake!

Mr. Sampson, who's been an artist, newspaper photographer, art instructor and factory worker, retired to California's Mojave Desert several years ago. There he lives alone in a cabin, spends his time "shooting" the animals.

Fred Sampson.

What does he do with the pictures: "There's a general demand for them," he explains, "for illustrating stories, for framing, murals, calendars, books, museums, schools, etc."

Mr. Sampson makes no secret of his technique. "All the animals about make my home their mecca. I feed and care for them. I talk to them and they seem to understand. I even handle a skunk.

No Secret.

"The secret—if there is any secret—is that I approach them as a friend. I talk to them and never violate their confidence. There may be something more I don't entirely understand. I once frightened a wild rabbit. After running away, it turned at my call and came back."

Newsfacts—Usual way of snapping wildlife is setting a camera trap. The animals nibble at the bait, trips a trigger that snaps a hidden camera. * * Other photographers use lenses so powerful a lion taken at 50 feet looks like it's right in front of the camera. * * Modern zoos, using painted backgrounds, make it convenient for amateurs to snap animals in what appears to be a natural habitat.

Two Friends Pose for Mr. Sampson's Camera.

Boy, 12, Shows Up Speedboat Racers

Water churns behind the speedboats racing over the 2½-mile course. But it isn't a race.

Far out in front, the leader shaves around buoys, makes hairpin turns, completely outmaneuvers his rivals. A real veteran, the onlookers agree. But they got a shock as the boat stops. Its pilot is a 12-year-old boy—Martin Lang jr.!

"My competitors ranged in age from 18 to 48," he writes from 2719 Woodburn avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio

"In order to pilot a winning boat one must first be a good driver. Then he must have a motor that will zoom up, follow a straight line to the buoys and make very sharp turns so that he is out and gone before the others know what it's all about."

'Thief-Proof'

1 Are locksmiths again one jump ahead of safe-crackers? They hope so; a New York City company has just announced manufacturing plans for a new "pick-proof" lock. Invented by a policeman, this lock is intended for automobiles, small safes and house doors.

The whole history of safes and locks records a series of "burglar-proof" inventions by the locksmiths, and the rapid conquering of these same gadgets by burglars.

When safes had lock holes, robbers inserted explosives instead of keys and blasted their way in. Combination locks were opened by torturing the man who knew the combination. Time locks stopped this for a while.

Today, no metal safe is made that can withstand an oxyacetylene flame or electric arc. To discourage burglars, however, safes are encased in "shells" filled with steam or poison gas. Burglar alarms also help make stored valuables "thief-proof."

Deadly Ice

2 Caught in the edge of a floating, jammed-up sheet of ice, an Arctic expedition ship recently managed to free itself after drifting eight days between Baffin Bay and Labrador. The pack, 5,000 miles square, was the largest he had ever seen, said one veteran of 17 Arctic trips.

More powerful and treacherous than imagination can picture, these vast "cakes" of ice are formed of frozen sea water (floes), pieces broken from glaciers and ice caps (on land), and the ice disgorged by far northern rivers.

Wind and ocean currents pack these frozen bits together, slowly swirl them around the top of the world. The ice makes an unwilling mass, strains, heaves and cracks until it piles up sometimes 20 and 30 feet above the water level.

Steel ships cannot stand the pressure of being caught in these packs, so Arctic groups depend on sturdy wooden vessels with rounded lines that help them to ride up on top of the breaking, grinding ice.

Tin Substitute

3 German scientists have found a substitute for tin, it was announced recently. If the new material really is "just as good as tin," the United States will be interested. Tin is the only common metal not abundant in America.

Yet it is vitally important to American industries. In all seriousness, it has been proposed that the Government buy and store up a national reserve of the metal, for use in case war cuts off our supply. The ore is imported chiefly from Bolivia, Federated Malay States, and Dutch East Indies.

As a coating for iron and other metals, tin prevents rust and decay. It's used also in making bronze, gun metal, copper coinage, plumber's solder, tin foil and other necessities.

'Serpentless' Isle

4 A tiny garter snake, just sliding along not hurting anybody, got itself into quite a storm in Honolulu, T. H., recently. Found on a street corner by a boy, it was hastily condemned to death. Only once before in Hawaii's history, officials said, had a snake gotten into the Islands. Both were ship stowaways. Authorities will not permit even circuses to bring snakes into Hawaii.

As a "serpentless" land the Pacific isle rates in a class with Ireland and a couple of runner-up places. The Irish claim snakes can't live on their island, and have not lived there for centuries. Non-committal Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, expert on reptiles, comments: "The common lizard is said to be the only reptile found in Ireland."

Madagascar has been publicized as an island with no poisonous snakes. But, among its "harmless" reptiles is the tree boa constrictor. Ditmars calls this the "most mean-tempered of the non-venomous serpents!"

Galapagos islands, famed for huge turtles, could make a better claim than Madagascar. The islands are home to seven kinds of snakes, but all are small and harmless.

Milk Craze

5 England already has over 1,000 "milk bars," but that isn't enough, the government says. More are to be established as soon as possible. What officials want to do through these "bars" is popularize the drinking of milk, improve the national diet, and bring health to the "rising generation."

Britishers are taking kindly to the milk program. This year people in England and Wales are consuming 180,000,000 gallons more than they did three years ago!

Pushing the project, the national milk marketing board sends out mobile milk bars. These trucks and trailers, equipped to serve 250 different milk drinks and many kinds of hot milk soups, pursue holiday crowds and public events where good Britishers might otherwise be drinking pop.

Even France is getting the craze. A milk bar set up in the heart of the Paris cocktail region is said to be doing a "stand-up" business.

Men Only

6 Despite the worries of the Czech peoples, or perhaps to help in forgetting these worries, a group of men in Prague have organized a knitting club. And it's for men only. They need no women in their organization to show them how to purl.

These men have some outstanding company in the pursuit of their hobby. Best-known male knitter today is the British Duke of Windsor, while in Hollywood, Movie Star John Barrymore also knits.

Not knitting, but fancy embroidery is the hobby of King Gustaf of Sweden.

In the United States, a 70-year-old Wisconsin man earns his living by making hooked rugs and embroidery pieces. And in Louisiana lives a farmer who relaxes after a day's hard work by crocheting!

Traveling Birds

7 Once again great hordes of migrating birds are leaving the northern hemisphere. Southward they sweep toward the equator. Some, like the nighthawk, will not end their journey until they reach Argentina, 7,000 miles from their starting point!

What makes birds migrate is not known, for some start even before cold winds begin to blow. Not all species make semiannual trips north and south, but none the less, birds are the most important of all migratory creatures.

The featured travelers are important enough to the United States to have four humans assigned to follow them. These "flyways men" go with them to the Arctic in summer, and south to Mexico in winter. They turn in reports on how well the birds survive migration, drought, and battles with natural enemies, and the reports determine hunting rules for the fall season.

The Unexpected

8 Too realistic was a movie scene "shot" at a lonely railroad station near Hollywood, Calif., on a recent night. The star was told to jump aboard a moving freight train. He did; but no one had warned him the freight hired for the scene had been held up on a siding to let a real train roll past! The surprised actor was carried miles before his plight was discovered.

But he was no more startled than a railroad brakeman who stepped from the locomotive cab at a Wisconsin stop. He was going to throw a switch but, unfortunately, the train was stopped on a bridge. The poor man landed, unhurt, in a river!

Pluck and Peanuts

9 Most people find getting along in life a full-time job. But Daisy Welch can spend only two hours a day on play and work. Then she must return to her bed where she has been invalided for three years. But what a lot she accomplishes in those two hours!

Look what the Bradford, Pa., girl, who has been ill for half her 20-some years of life, has done with peanuts—plain, ordinary peanuts.

"I was looking at some peanuts," Daisy recalls the time about a year ago, "and the idea came to me they would make nice characters."

Daisy Welch

Never occurred to you a peanut could have character, did it? Well, it did to Daisy. Out of the goobers she produced people, blonde, curly-haired babies, gray-headed old grandfathers with spectacles and studious-looking schoolboys.

Not magic, but imagination and skill and patience. "The materials I use," Daisy says, "are tissue paper, rope, wire, cotton and I've cut up most all of my mother's yardsticks for the wood."

Daisy has made 33 characters, including dogs, roosters and a duck. Best of all she likes the man "dressed in a dark suit, white shirt, white collar, red tie, black shoes and white socks, black belt with silver buckle, gold-colored tie pin and flower in his lapel, artistic look on his face."

All this, on a peanut!

A victim of sinus trouble, Daisy hasn't the strength to work, or even read, more than a couple hours a day; in fact, she's exhausted after every effort. Yet she has become a successful composer of music, a poet and artist, and has a long list of hobbies.

She has composed words and music to two songs, had both published. Five of her poems were printed in a magazine. And she draws her own greeting cards, which she is continually sending out.

"I love to cheer others," the plucky girl says.

There was a time when Daisy could play the piano and the violin. But all she can play now is the harmonica.

But back to the peanuts. So appealing and realistic are the little people created by Daisy's unique hobby, she has had lots of chances to sell them. But because each one requires so much work, and because her limited time is so precious, Daisy would rather keep them.

Up to now no book on aviatio has presented such material. An as a result there has arisen a p thetic confusion about the flight i dustry. There have been entirel too many pictures showing a yout with dreamy, far-away eyes f cused on a tiny plane fading off in a clouded sky.

These pretty pictures Dr. Carl Norcross shatters in a new book, "Getting a Job in Aviation." That doesn't mean he implies you should stay out of aviation. Far from it. But he does emphasize the fact you don't just step into the cabin of a big Douglas as an air-line pilot, nor do you walk into a drawing room and start d signing super-transports.

The author, who is in the Ne York State education departme explains he tried to write the bo from a negative viewpoint; that write it under-enthusiastically rath than boost it. Dr. Norcross deals in facts. Av tion, he says, still is a small indu try, if you compare it with some of the older occupations. It employs now possibly 60,000 of America's 50,000,000 workers. You have to pass over 900 workers before you find one engaged in aviation, mathematically speaking.

But—and this is the most imp tant thing in its favor—aviation growing rapidly and steadily, and will be a good many years bef progress begins to taper off.

Tough Guy

11 He's tall and lean, can look mean and hard as nails, talks slow and quiet as if he just stepped out of the Bowery and was ready to stick a gat in your back at the first dark alley. That's what you think. That's what a lot of people think. But Tough Guy Humphrey Bogart really isn't so tough.

Humphrey Bogart

The movie producers made him tough, and from the way it looks, they're going to keep him that way. It seems the people who buy the tickets like to see him so.

But catch Mr. Bogart behind the silver screen and you're in for a series of surprises. Humphrey, born in New York City, went to Andover College, Andover, Mass. Can't say he liked school. As a matter of fact, Humphrey is the first to admit his only ambition during those trying years was to dodge study.

And when he went to a theatrical producer to look for a job, it was to the business office he headed. Maybe it was a mistake. No one knows. Humphrey became an assistant stage manager, soon began playing parts on Broadway's legitimate stage.

Not that he was good. Critic Alexander Woollcott singled him out as a "trenchant example of bad acting." That was when Humphrey made his non-dramatic debut. But Humphrey knew it wasn't quite that bad. The play, you see, was quite terrible.

He played in more shows, many of them successful, and Humphrey with them. It took him all of 18 screen tests before he passed the pearly gates to Hollywood. Then it took a movie called "Petrified Forest" to show that Humphrey could be most convincing as a bad man.

He's been one ever since. "Black Legion," "Dead End," "Crime School," "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" and a whole series of similar character parts followed. Humphrey became increasingly "bad" in each.

He's 38 now and wants to make enough money to retire. Why retire? Well, maybe he doesn't want to keep on being a tough guy. Maybe he has other interests. Maybe he likes music. Well, he does. If he ever leaves theatricals, he'd like to play the bull fiddle in an orchestra. He says he can do it well.

Actually, Mr. Bogart is tough about only one thing offstage. His birthday is December 25, and he demands double presents! He always gets them, too.

Cliff Periscopes

12 Next time a climber takes a tumble near Sydney, Australia, his rescuers won't have to risk their own necks sliding down a steep hill to find him. A new mountain rescue society of this region will be equipped with periscopes. Members will be able to survey the side of a cliff before climbing down, and see around jutting rocks that make the descent dangerous.

Known best for their military uses, as on submarines, periscopes have lately gone modern for civilians. A periscope hat, for instance, was introduced at the coronation of King George VI, in England. It enables its wearer to look over the heads in a crowd, witness the parades and ceremonies that shorter men missed!

But soldiers still use the most periscopes. A big one designed for land use helps observers see as well as if they were stationed 40 to 50 feet above ground!

Chocolate Hopes

13 You'll take chocolate this winter—African cacao orchardists hope. On the hot Gold Coast, they're already harvesting cocoa bean pods with the "scissors," mounted on long poles, used in this work. And when the final count is made, the Gold Coast expects to have supplied half the world's cocoa.

The cacao tree is one of those plants which does better in a foreign land than in its home country. Native to Latin America, it now is cultivated chiefly in West Africa. An evergreen, it bears buds, flowers and seed pods, all at the same time. Oddly, they grow on the trunk bark, not on branches or twigs.

Though the tree is called "cacao," its bean is named "cocoa." The two drinks, chocolate and cocoa, are both made from it, their only difference being in richness.

Cocoa beans today go through many roasting and curing processes before ending up in a cup, but their original growers, American Indians, merely dried them in the sun and ate them "as is."

Admired Admirer

14 Seven years of dispute have recently been settled by a court decision in Scotland awarding possession of some James Boswell papers to two claimants. The papers had been lost a century and a half.

Boswell would have been astonished had he been able to know the value future generations would place on his papers. In his time, he was considered a second-rate writer and part-time lawyer, notable mainly for his admiration of the great author, Dr. Samuel Johnson. Every word that Johnson said, everything that he did, Boswell faithfully recorded.

After Johnson died, Boswell wrote a biography of his friend. It is today the world's most famous biography, because Boswell was so thoroughly accurate and complete.

'Saturday Nighters'

15 Ordinary Japanese citizens are, at last, getting a break in their national economy drive. The government has ordered owners of bath houses to reduce admission prices. Maybe that sounds dull, but in Japan, where everyone takes a formal bath each day, it's hot news!

And "hot" is the word for it. Water in the pools is kept at 120 degrees, or higher. Bathers go only to scrub and soak. If one of them tried to swim, the ripples he stirred up would be mighty uncomfortable to his neighbors.

Each washer brings his own soap and towels, tosses several tubs of hot water over himself before tering the community tank. Then he says, "excuse me," and gingerly eases himself down on one of the underwater seats. After five minutes' soaking, he gets out, soaps, rinses off, and climbs back for a long final soaking.

So widespread is this custom of making every day "Saturday night" that even the poorest farm home has its bathroom or huge cauldron with a fire underneath!

Boring a Mountain

16 Railroads have come to the mountains in New Zealand, and, instead of going around or over natural barriers, they'll soon be going through. New Zealand has decided to build a 3½-mile tunnel through one range on North Island. Workmen will blast, chip and bore deep into the solid rock to carve out the $5,000,000 passage.

Length will make this one of the world's great tunnels, but not the greatest. Longest land tunnel is the Simplon which runs almost 13 miles into the Swiss-Italian Alps. Eight years were needed to complete it. An Italian railway passage, almost as long, took 10 years to build.

Tunnel capital of the world, however, is New York City. Because it's on an island, it requires dozens of tunnels to bring in automobiles, trains, subway cars and drinking water. One aqueduct tunnel runs more than 18 miles underground to bring its precious liquid load to the city.

Auto Thresher

17 No longer does an ingenious South African farmer have to go through that back-breaking business of flailing stacks of pods to get his beans hulled. Neither does he hire natives to shell them or horses to tramp over the piles. He uses automobile power!

Spreading the pods a foot and a half thick under canvas, he drives the family car back and forth on the pile until the pods pop open from pressure.

Equally smart was the orchardist on the West Coast of the United States who used an airplane to protect his fruit trees from frost. The plane was not flown, but securely fastened to the top of a tower. When cold weather threatened, a big fire was built at the bottom of the tower and the airplane engine turned on. Heat, rising from the fire, was blown out over the orchard by the plane's propeller!

Platinum From Silver

18 From a freak of nature a new fur fashion has been developed in Norway. There, a fox rancher has just announced his success in raising platinum foxes from silver foxes. His 300 platinums are carefully guarded in their fenced-in woods, for each live pair is valued at $7,500 and a single skin sells for $750!

"Platinum" furs, long on the market, have previously been produced by dyeing white foxes.

Like the "silver," the new "platinum" is really a red fox. Half a century ago silvers were freaks found but rarely in red fox families. Then two Canadian farmers established the silver strain in captive foxes. By 1910 the pelts they sold brought more than $1,000 apiece and one sold for over $2,500. A single breeding animal cost $15,000.

Sagebrush Scent

19 Experiments, now under way, with the most prolific wild plant in the West may give America a new kind of perfume. It would be made of oil distilled from sagebrush blooms and leaves.

In Europe, whole regions are devoted to the growing of certain flowers for perfumes. Bulgaria raises roses; southern France specializes in violets; and England is known for lavender. So the time may come when western United States is another such "fragrance center."

Not all the sage oil is expected to go into perfumes, however. Experimenters say it can also be used in scented candies, mouth washes, medicines and cosmetics.

STAMPS

Editor's Note: Why Latvia's first stamps were marked "rublis" is explained below in an interesting letter written by Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, Latvian Minister to the U. S. Dr. Bilmanis also tells the meaning of the emblems appearing on many Latvian stamps.

By Dr. Alfred Bilmanis.

At the beginning of its independence, Latvia took over as its currency the rubli. this having been the currency of Russia, of which Latvia was once a part. However, for many years now, the monetary unit of Latvia has been the lats, which is divided into 100 santimi.

I am illustrating, as of possible interest, a one lats and a three santimi stamp.

The latter denomination bears the portrait of Dr. Karlis Ulmanis, President and Prime Minister of Latvia. The one lats bears the great coat-of-arms of Latvia. The small shield supported by the lion and griffin in the coat-of-arms is also used as a separate unit, as may be seen on other Latvian stamps.

The symbolization of the great coat-of-arms might be of interest to Parade's readers.

The three stars represent the three provinces of the Republic of Latvia: the ancient duchies of Courland (or Kurzeme) and Semigallia (or Zemgale) being one; the duchy of Livonia (or Vidzeme) being the second; and Letgallia (or Latgale) being the third.

In the small shield, Latgale is represented by the rising sun, Vidzeme by the griffin, and Kurzeme by the lion. The rising sun also represents civilization and progress, which are supported by physical (the lion) and intellectual (the griffin) force.

Below the shield the Latvian flag is entwined with oak leaves. The flag is red-white-red, the red color being of a deep burgundy hue and representing the blood of Latvians with which they are prepared to defend liberty, symbolized in the flag by the white color. The green oak leaves signify that the nation will live eternally.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

"Before Homer," by DeWolfe Morgan. $2. Longmans, Green & Co., New York, N. Y.

If it were not for superstitions this book would never have been written! Destar and Vlako, two homeless boys, are wandering somewhere in Central Europe. They are hungry and, seeing a raven, accept it as an omen from the gods. The raven is a wise bird, and the boys feel it will lead them to food. Sure enough, in a short time they come upon a herd of sheep. They steal one. When discovered by Themis, the shepherd boy, Vlako runs; Destar stays to fight. The blood of Themis and Destar runs together, they are "brothers."

Themis takes Destar home, where he is made a foster son of the chief, Artemenon. The tribe wishes to migrate. A flock of birds are startled, fly south. "The gods have spoken," says Artemenon, and the tribe heads south.

They reach the sea.

Here Destar makes many new friends, has many adventures. He trades with the Cretes, fights with his enemies, takes the place of Artemenon's son, who was killed.

But always it is the superstitions of that age before Homer which keep the story moving.

Author—DeWolfe Morgan, born on an Indian Reservation near Genesee, Idaho, 1894, attended schools from the West to the East coasts. He started in Spokane, Wash., finished at Harvard. As a jack-of-all trades he lived a nomadic life, working as circus hand, sailor, reporter, social worker, prison guard and interpreter of foreign languages.

The Good Old Oil

It generally takes something pretty special to delay the opening of school. At the Young District School, Salem, Ill., it took an oil gusher!

An oil well was brought in on the school grounds and the dread day was postponed for one week.

COMING SOON

"Listen, Darling"—Are ya listening? . . . Well, it's one of those currently popular "family" pictures, with Freddie Bartholomew, Judy Garland and Scotty Beckett as the junior element very much concerned in the affairs of their elders . . . Most prominent of those elders are Mary Astor, Walter Pidgeon, Gene Lockhart and Alan Hale . . . The accent is upon the comedy side . . . And it's a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production . . . What's the title mean? . . . We wouldn't know.

What It's All About—Gene Lockhart, tight-fisted, grumpy town banker, wants to marry Judy Garland's mother, Mary Astor, but Judy wants anything else but. So does Freddie Bartholomew, Judy's pal. He hatches a plot to find the right sort of man for Judy's mother. Enter then young Scotty Beckett, Freddie's little brother, to so complicate the plottings as to leave Judy's mother with three men to worry about, instead of one—the banker, the man picked out by Judy and Freddie (Walter Pidgeon), and another who muscles in of his own accord (Alan Hale) . . . How it all comes out we'll leave you to find out for yourselves. That way your suspense is heightened, and besides, we haven't the faintest idea.

Freddie Bartholomew.

Star—Fast-growing Freddie Bartholomew seems to be developing histrionically as well as physically, handling adolescent parts as easily as he handled "kid" parts. . . . Now 14, Freddie came to this country from England 4 years ago, on a successful quest for the title role in "David Copperfield" . . . . His last picture was "Lord Jeff," in which he shared honors with Mickey Rooney.

Squibbies

Twins at our house,
Oh, what trouble!
May be cute,
But yelling's double!

We hope Donald Abbott, 175 V street northeast, Washington, D. C., author of this winning Squibbie, is still seeing double, because then his Mystery Prize will look twice as good to him.

Oh, not that it isn't good enough as is! In fact, you oughta see it. But the only way you will see one is to write yourself a Squibbie that will bring home the bacon!

We wouldn't fool you—it's a poetical cinch! You don't even need a poetic license. Just sit down and bang out a four-line jingle (an original four-line jingle) and send it in. Make it clever, make it funny, and you may make it win.

Remember—there's a new contest with a new Mystery Prize each and every week. Please remember, also, that your entry must be your own, original work. Address all contributions to "Squibbies, Parade of Youth," care of the sponsor.

DOGS

Unsung, but for praise of grateful masters. Unheralded, but for acclaim of "home town folks." Thus it is with scores of dog heroes. Today, Parade presents a few of these pups who have saved human lives and are contented with such rewards.

Instalment II

GERRY slipped quietly into the office where Larry was talking to Jack. "I'm still wanting that job," she announced.

Larry looked annoyed. "Listen, Gerry, I told you why I couldn't use you. The answer's still 'no.' Now, pardon me, but I've got things to do."

If the girl was disappointed, she didn't show it. "It's your loss," she shrugged. "You don't care if I look around, do you?"

"Don't touch anything—wait, I've got a better idea." He turned to the grinning boy. "This is Jack Sanders. Jack, her name's Gerry—that's for Geraldine—Hampton. She wanted a job, but I can't use a mascot right now. Keep her from getting tangled up with a prop, will you?"

Gerry squared her shoulders. "I didn't want to be your mascot, Captain Jackson," she said with dignity and started toward the door. "And I can look out for myself."

Jack grabbed her arm: "Not so fast, infant. The boss tells me to be nursemaid, so I'm it."

The boy was surprised at the strength with which she threw off his hand. "Infant!" she blazed. She glanced witheringly at his dungarees. "What are you in disguise for? Hiding from the truant officer?"

As Larry roared, Jack muttered, "Fresh kid!" and shoved past her onto the field.

Gerry wasn't a bad sort, though, the boy discovered as they lounged against a wing exchanging insults. Jack did think a sound spanking might do her good. And she wasn't so young—only a year under his own 18 years—and not hard on the eyes at all.

After a while, they got polite enough for Gerry to find out about the troupe. Jack had been flying since he was about 10—he had been brought up by Larry. The troupe had been Larry's idea. Fresh from the World War—"That's where he got his white hair," the boy explained tersely—he had a captain's commission, a love of flying, but no job.

"So he got together several buddies and started this outfit," Jack continued. "He adopted me. My mother was dead and he knew my dad in France. Things were swell till 'bout two years ago. But I guess people just don't go for this kind of stuff any more. Least, they don't go to see our show," he added bitterly. "We haven't even been making enough to keep the ships up. That's why something's always cracking."

"I see." Gerry nodded soberly. "I guess he's got enough to worry about without having me around."

Jack agreed, sympathetically. "That's about the size of it."

Gerry sighed. She hoped it sounded genuine. "O. K." she said, turning away. "I'll be getting along, then."

Jack waved. "I'll be seeing you."

"I'll say you will," Gerry muttered fiercely to herself.

NIGHT was settling over the field. No airlines used the port, and sightseeing had ended for the day. There was hardly anyone around to see the slight figure slip cautiously along the side of the hangar which housed the Aerial Acrobats' planes. Gerry slid around the corner and hopped quickly through the door.

A feeble ray from her pocket flashlight helped her pick her way among the crowded planes over to one side of the hangar, along which ran a workbench. From a tool rack above the bench, Gerry selected a heavy wrench, weighed it an instant in her hand, then doused her light and scrambled among the debris under the bench.

Radford, the trouble-making flier, had hinted that tomorrow Larry's plane wouldn't be able to fly. That, to Gerry, meant only one thing—something would happen to that plane tonight. Trying to still the wild beat of her heart as she crouched not 10 feet from Larry's ship, she fiercely decided Radford would be wrong—nothing would happen, at least to the plane.

Hours that seemed like days dragged on as Gerry fought sleep in her cramped position. She couldn't see the hangar door, but her ears were strained to catch the first sound of someone else in the building.

The man entered too quietly for even Gerry to hear. The first she knew of his presence was when, so suddenly it almost made her gasp, a light bobbed across the floor straight to Larry's plane.

What Has Happened Before.

PERT, 17-YEAR-OLD GERRY—"Geraldine's too sissified"—Hampton enrages Capt. Larry Jackson, boss of a flying circus, with her indifferent remark, "Pretty good, aren't they?" as she gazes up at two of the performers. That, after Larry has just finished telling himself those two fliers are the best stuntmen in the world! Larry is touchy because business has been terrible. As he and Gerry watch, one of the ships is forced down with a broken camshaft in the motor. While waiting to learn if it can be repaired immediately, Larry listens to Gerry's plea for a job, laughs at her. But she is in deadly earnest. She's lost her job in a store, is an orphan living with relatives, who, she assures Larry, won't want her when she can't bring home a paycheck. Larry still says no because he wouldn't know what to do with her. Then he learns the motor can't be fixed and calls off the afternoon's show. Radford, one of the fliers, can't understand Larry's reluctance to give the customers less than they paid for and quits the troupe, taking a poke at the captain. Larry knocks him down and walks away. Only Gerry hears the flier's muttered threat to wreck Larry's plane. She doesn't tell Larry, for in that threat she sees a way to get the job she desperately wants.

She Fought to Regain Her Balance.

As the man sprayed the rays of the light over the ship, apparently to check its identity, Gerry made out his features in the glow reflected from a wing. It was Radford, and she fought back the impulse to rush at him, swinging her wrench. Better to see what he was going to do.

Gerry saw the light put down on the floor on the other side of the ship. She couldn't see what Radford was doing, could make out only his legs. He seemed to be bent under the wing.

She dared not wait longer. With a fierce whoop she dashed out, swinging the wrench above her head. By the time she got to the other side of the plane, Radford wasn't there. She had expected him to run. If he hadn't she would have.

Gerry let him go, but he ran smack into more trouble. The lone mechanic on the night shift was nodding sleepily in the office when Gerry's bellow brought him to his feet. He reached the door of the hangar the same instant as Radford. The mechanic grabbed him but was knocked aside.

Gerry helped him to his feet. "I didn't know you'd be standing there," she said, "or I'd have warned you. I knew he'd be leaving in a hurry."

The mechanic glared. "You knew it?" He looked at her slight build. "I suppose you chased him?"

"No," said Gerry. "I hollered."

"So that was you, huh? What were you doing in there, anyhow?"

The girl told him. Luckily for her, he remembered seeing her with Larry that afternoon and had heard about the captain's scrap with Radford. Else, Gerry reflected afterward, instead of getting a job, she'd get free board in the city jail.

LARRY and Jack were first in the hangar next morning. Suddenly Jack stopped short and gasped. "Great guns," look!" He pointed toward Larry's plane.

Resting comfortably against the side of the rear cockpit was a black, curly head.

Larry's jaw dropped. He'd recognize that disheveled mop anywhere. He stepped to the plane, shook the girl roughly. "Gerry, wake up!"

The girl pulled away. "Hey, cut it out! I'll get up." She opened her eyes, glanced around, then stood up and stretched.

"Oh, sorry I wasn't up to greet you," she said cheerfully. "Good morning."

"How can it be a good morning with you here?" Jack grumbled, but Larry cut him short.

"What's the idea?" he asked grimly.

Gerry pouted. "Are you going to get mad, after all I've done for you?"

Larry resisted the impulse to shake her out of her calm. "Come out of there and tell me what it's all about."

Gerry scrambled down and explained. Larry didn't believe her. She hadn't thought he would. That's why she'd been glad the night before to have the mechanic around as a witness.

Larry checked with the mechanic by phone, then returned to Gerry and Jack. He looked at the girl gratefully. "You win, kid. You saved the show and probably my neck, too. I certainly owe you something. What is it?"

"Take me with you," she said simply.

Larry started to protest, then hesitated. At last he replied: "You deserve a chance, anyhow. I'll make you a proposition. You come along on the hop today. When we pick up my wife I'll leave it up to her. If she wants to worry over you, you stay. How's that?"

Gerry nodded. "O. K., it's a deal."

HUNCHED in the front cockpit to keep out of the slipstream, Gerry was happy. Occasionally she'd glance back at Larry and grin, then wave to Jack, at the controls of the plane off to the right.

The motor roared smoothly, taking a load off Larry's mind. At first he had been afraid Radford had had a chance to do some damage. But a quick checkup hadn't shown anything amiss.

But then Gerry looked back, and the grin on her face froze. Larry's ordinarily tanned cheeks around his goggles were white. He pointed down and yelled something. Gerry looked and was scared. A thin wisp of smoked trailed out from beneath the ship's lower wing!

She grabbed the speaking tube and yelled, "What's wrong?"

"Don't know," came the answer. "Wing's on fire! I'm going down!"

"No, hold it!" yelled Gerry.

Larry's clutching fingers missed her blouse as she threw off her safety belt, stood up and grabbed the edge of the top wing. He could only yell futilely as Gerry swung dizzily out onto the lower wing.

"The crazy kid!" the pilot breathed. "What's she doing?"

Then he knew. Flat on the wing, Gerry eased her body back until her feet hung in space. He saw her wiry muscles taut beneath the sleeves of her blouse, saw her fighting the tremendous whip of the wind until her legs hung straight down, over the crotch of the landing gear. She was fighting to get beneath the wing and beat out the flames!

Larry watched, too frightened for her safety to do more than sit and grip the controls. Then, as he saw Gerry release her hold on the wing, he threw his arms across his face and ducked his head to blot out the sight of that tiny body plummeting to earth.

Gerry wasn't tumbling down. She wished with all her heart she was back in the cockpit, fire or no fire. But she had started this fool scheme and was going to see it through. When she released her grip on the wing she dropped safely, for the moment, into the crotch of the landing gear.

Even as she grabbed for support, she saw the flaming hunk of waste in the exhaust pipe, reached to pull it out. But her arm was nearly carried away with the wind, and she hurtled over backward.

As she fought to regain balance, she thanked her stars for gym-hardened muscles.

Larry, in ducking low into the cockpit, had released the controls. And with no hand to guide it, the plane was plunging earthward!

Peach Town

Parade: Candor, one of the peach towns of North Carolina, is my home. In the spring boys and girls and grown-ups are hired to pick up "drops." These are wormy or diseased peaches which have fallen to the ground. They are burned or otherwise destroyed.

Harvesting lasts about six weeks. Pickers start about 6:30 in the morning. The peaches are hauled to the pack house on trucks and, after going through a defuzzer, are graded. From the grader they roll through the sizers, then into bins to be ring packed.

This delicious fruit is shipped both by refrigerator cars and trucks.

Many Interests

Parade: So you think one interest is enough to keep one busy? You're on a diet! I'm a gourmand. My greatest ambition is to sing in opera and be an organist and choir director on the side. I thrive on good music, singing, collecting victrola records and musical scores, playing piano and reading musical literature. I've taught most all kinds of dancing for three seasons; I thrill to scientific experiments; I love sports—especially shooting, riding, fishing, boating and swimming; I write—poems, stories, plays; I love dramatics in any form, from acting to coaching and producing; I enjoy discussing deep subjects (such as estheticism, fourth dimension, psychology, etc.)—I also find interest in analyzing a person by his features, personality and general aspects. People on the whole interest me. To top it off, I am interested in languages, mystery, politics, physiognomy and palmistry. Incidentally, to any of you Paraders who send me a print of each hand, I will send an analysis of character and ability.

There! My appetite is replenished now, but my stomach is always elastic to new interests. I am 17.

Brunswick Parrots

Parade: I am writing in regard to a recent "Let's Go Traveling" entry which told of a parrot that sings, crows, whistles and cries. Well, New Brunswick has three other parrots who do odd things.

Poll Macaw, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Gene Matthews, of Route 26, is a very active bird. When a swing band plays he dances up and down. He chides roadhouse customers by saying, "You'll get a whipping," or "Come on over," "Scram," "How do you feel" and "Hurry up." When he sees he is to be given a bath, he screams, "No, no, no, no!" He imitates people sneezing and coughing, calls people by name and caws and crows.

Another polly, from Hotel Pines, also crows like a rooster. She eats pretzels.

The third parrot is a sober, dispirited bird who shows temper by tearing up coasters. One day she flew into a tree and refused to come down for a week. At times she cannot resist telling women what she thinks of them. "Shut up!" she screams when they poke fingers at her and coo. Her one love is Wootsie, a black cat. Wootsie purrs while Polly strokes the pussy's back with her wicked-looking beak.

Tough Diet

Parade: I am not a fatalist, and neither do I consider myself a pessimist. It is my belief, however, that there can be no substitute for war. As much as Americans and other civilized people hate war, it is far beyond the power of one or two nations to prevent it. Just as long as certain nations persist in regarding solemn treaties as "scraps of paper" there will be wars. . . . The only way the United States can maintain peace is by preparedness. So-called pacifists tell us that if we disarm—while all the rest of the world is arming to its eye-teeth—no one will ever attack us. If that makes sense, I'll eat every battleship in the United States Navy

An Alert Modern

Parade: The opinion generally exists that youth is "wild" and "rude." Those who feel so disturbed should sit down and think. Young folks today are much more educated than those of past generations. Liberal, and willing, at least, to discuss the perils of sin, they have it all over older generations. At 30 they will be considered young yet. Could that be said in Scarlett O'Hara's day?

Such young geniuses as Jane Murdock are excellent examples of alert moderns. ROBERT SHOCKLEY.

"Goofy Women, Not Hats"

Parade: I'll admit that some of today's hats look dumb, but it's usually the person who wears a wrong style, and not the hat, that is goofy.

For instance, a very short, fat lady goes to the movies and sees a star in a smart looking outfit. Then when that lady is downtown she sees the same hat Carole Lombard or Claudette Colbert wore in the movies. She buys it and looks putrid. She forgets that it is the star's slender figure that makes the outfit look stunning. DIANA LAWSON.

Boy, 14, Sharpshoots to Title

Pops 98 Out of 100 'Birds' at Traps Tournament

Raymond Fienup set out for the recent Grand American trap-shooting tourney with only one thing in mind. He was going to win the sub-junior event.

"I missed two birds out of the first 25," worried Raymond, who has just turned 14. That meant he had to do some fancy shooting to get the title. He did.

"I settled down and broke the next 75 straight, to finish with 98 out of 100, and won the championship by seven targets," he says. "Boy! It sure feels great to know I'm a national champ and I got what I went after."

Ray has been trapshooting only two years. At first he missed plenty of targets, but as he listened to advice of professionals he improved.

"I come," he writes from 9500 Natural Bridge street, St. Louis, Mo., "from a shooting family. My father and brother are trapshooters and hunters."

Ray also holds the Missouri junior championship.

'Sister Act' on Tennis Court Double Trouble to Opponents

Other girls face double trouble when the Grossnickle sisters enter a tennis tournament.

Jessie, 17, and Frances, 15, had family "fights" three times this summer for midwestern tennis titles. And between them they collected 23 prizes in nine States!

Four years ago their dad shaved down some old rackets, shoved them out on a court.

Meet in Finals.

About winning her first title, Jessie says: "I felt that my work had been rewarded . . . that I had accomplished the impossible . . . until daddy sent me to larger and larger tournaments."

Rather than begrudge her sister any of the limelight, Jessie avers the younger girl will outshine her: "Frances is a far better player than I was at her age. She won the high school meet during her freshman and sophomore years and has two years to go!" They have monopolized the Mississippi State high school championship for four years.

From 203 Third avenue south, Columbus, they agree on their greatest thrill. "We were unseeded in a Chicago tournament. We didn't think we had a chance of getting beyond the second round. Imagine our surprise and pleasure when we met in the finals."

Novice Bowlers Score Like Vets

Mother and Dad had been bowling for years, were plenty good. Jane, 11, and Bob McGill, 13, had never rolled a game. No wonder they've given their parents a shock.

"Last fall Bob and I decided to take a try," Jane recounts. "I got 142 and he did 136. Daddy and Mother looked at each other in amazement. They saw to it that we kept up our practice thereafter."

Mr. and Mrs. McGill were impressed because 140 is considered the average score for all keglers. They got an even greater surprise when Jane recently rolled 210, 211 and 235, and Bob made 260.

"That's better than mother ever did and only a few pins under daddy's best game," Jane continues. "Pretty good, eh?"

Both she and her brother use the regulation 16-pound ball, too.

Natives of Urbana, Ohio, they have moved about the State with their father, who manages various bowling alleys.

Gal on a Horse

By Jane Murdock.

What is so rare on a crisp fall day as to saddle up a nag and ride for hours on a canyon road? 'Sfun while it lasts, but "it" gets sorta goony the last few leaps and everybody's so fagged that nothing less than a rattlesnake could make you move.

When you get to your destination you feel like one foot's pushin' the sod—specially if said destination is a picnic ground and what was lunch has slipped off the saddle miles back. Now is the time when all sane ladsnlils will mooch.

Jane Murdock.

Now, there's one important thing to remember when one embarks on a mooching tour of a picnic ground. Find a party with some faded femmes. I mean those who've eaten off their lipstick with food. When the lipstick's missing it's a sure sign they're full and will offer up their all to you—that is if your sob sister tale goes over. Don't be a dim dilly doll and mince at the mooched food—pitch right in and tuck it away on accounta the bounce back on ole Silver takes energy. 'Specially if Silver's jest skin and bones.

Ah! Joy of joys! The oak is red and the aspen is gold; the reins hang like lead and hands are cold. It seems that pushin' daisies would be glorious compared to jogging on fagged nags.

At last—home! A bath and a warm bed.

Morning! Blistered ankles, chappy knees. Stiff is a weak word to describe how one feels after such a jaunt. Well, anywho, stiff from athlete's feet up to dandruff and aching from hangnails to bridgework.

If anyone mentions horses to me I'll push 'em in the mush!

Fun Corner

Too Cool

The dormitory fire had driven the occupants outside, in various states of undress, and one lad was inclined to rib the others about their haste. "Why didn't you keep cool like me?" he asked. "When I heard the alarm I dressed carefully, took my time—even retied my tie because I didn't like the knot. Cool as a cucumber, that's me!"

"Yeah?" asked one of the others. "Then why didncha put on your pants?"

At Least

"Lemme get this straight," said the storekeeper who had just insured his place against fire. "For instance, if the joint catches on fire tonight, how much will I get?"

The agent smiled grimly. "Considering everything," he replied, "I'd say about ten years."

What Long Ears You Have, Grandma!

"Hey, you!" yelped the Soph, "close that door! You musta been brought up in a barn!"

"Boo hoo!" sniffed the Frosh.

"There, there," consoled the Soph, "Don't cry. I know you weren't actually brought up in a barn."

"B-but I was," sniveled the Frosh, "an'—an' it allus makes me homesick when I hear a donkey bray."

"Yeah," said the other. "Now you mention it, he has!"

"Take off your glasses!" yelled Joe. "Nobody's gonna make cracks like that about my dog and get away with it!"
